'We Are Going On to the End' Says Churchill

British Girds Self for War of Vast Scale, Seemingly to Disregard Any Offer From Germany of Peace at the Cost of Poland

TURKEY NOT DETACHED

Suggestion Heard Hitler May Offer to Resign in Favor of Goering and Rest on Laurels to Gain Peace, but This Strategy Would Fail, Says Daily Mirror

London, Oct. 2—(CP)— Great Britain, strengthened herself today for hostilities on a vast scale, apparently intending to ignore any Nazi-Communist offers of peace at the expense of Poland.

The first official reaction to intimations that Adolf Hitler would propose through a neutral power that the war be ended on a basis of the partition of Poland came from Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

"We are going on to the end," Mr. Churchill said in a broadcast address.

FRENCH ADVANCE ALONG MOSELLE IS PREDICTED

Impending Fall of Saarbruecken Will Open Way to R.R. Junction at Treves

SALIENT PIERCED

London, Oct. 2 (CP)—The expected fall of Saarbruecken will presage a concerted French drive northward into Germany's Rhineland toward the strategic railway junction of Treves (Trier), the military correspondent of the Reuters News Agency predicted today.

The writer added potential French strategy ended Sunday when Premier Daladier conferred in Paris with General Gamelin, commander-in-chief of all French armies now, and General Georges, chief of staff of the French air force.

"Which falls back on Saarbruecken," he said. "On this day brings reports of progress in this area. The central salient of the Siegfried line at Saarbrucken already has been pierced and the defenses now been surrounded on three sides. It will fall soon and when it does simultaneously there will be another big movement northwards along the Moselle towards the vital railway junction at Treves.

Two Can Play at Game

"General Gamelin is showing how two can play at the same game. A German threat in this direction would be much longer—without some strong effort on their part to stem the tide.

Analyzing the cross open to the Reich, the correspondent asked: "What will Hitler do? The peace proposals he is reported preparing are bound to be unacceptable. How can any concessions he takes be worthwhile?

"These questions presumably are in the mind of General Gamelin and his staff in today's discussion," the correspondent continued. "Three points seem open to the Germans. (1) to launch a desperate offensive in the Maginot line; (B) to [illegible] invading either Holland or Switzerland; or (C) to wait and do nothing in the hope that the Allies will get bored and break themselves up finally against the Siegfried position."

Germany Back to 1919 Frontiers Proposed by Wickham Steed

Former Editor of The Times Says Germany Should Then Become Democracy

OBJECTIVES OF WAR

London, Oct. 2 (CP)—Wickham Steed, former editor of The Times in a fortnightly review published an outline of aims which he said Great Britain and France should publicly announce as their war objectives.

He proposes that Germany should be returned to the 1919 frontiers under a democratic form of government, and should then be admitted to a federation of nations. Steed suggested the following war aims:

"No recognition or toleration of Hitlerism or Stalinism. Aggression. The watchword must be 'back to the German frontiers of 1919.' This means that independence and the right of independent decision will be restored to Austria, to Czechoslovakia within its pre-Munich borders, and to Poland with Danzig.

"Demilitarized must be given an opportunity of developing without propaganda or pressure of any kind its own allegiance.

"Total Disappearance of Hitler and Group

"The total disappearance of Hitler, with all the Nazi personnel and system, and the establishment in Germany of a government based on the representative democratic principle.

"After the conclusion of peace with Germany, the European people in the Reich (1919 frontiers) should, under a democratic form of government, and should then be admitted to a federation of nations. Steed suggested the following war aims:

Commander Described As a Broken Exile

Bucharest, Oct. 2 (AP)—Field Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, Commander of Poland's vanquished Legions, was described by refugees as a broken exile, stunned by fellow officers who found him as a general who deserted his command but fighting army.

The field marshal, along with a number of other Polish officers, is reported at a Cernova hotel.

Germany was reported, at the same time, to have protested to Rumania that Professor Mosckicki, also a refugee, was allowed to resign the Presidency of Poland and name a successor while on Rumanian soil.

Moscicki resigned Saturday and named Wladislaw Raczkiewicz, now in Paris, as his successor. He had been kept in "limited" domicile but left for Paris after resigning.

NAVY WITHDRAWS HALF OF YANGTSE RIVER PATROL

Five of the Ten Gunboats Will Probably be Sent to Singapore

JAPS MORE ACTIVE

Shanghai, Oct. 2—(AP)—The British Navy today withdrew half its military requirements elsewhere, for a decision to shift half of the Yangtse river patrol of 10 gunboats.

The gunboats Dragon Fly and Scorpion, small tonnage and lightly armed, left the river patrol of 10 gunboats, role of mediator in a "peace offensive" by the Reich.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Diplomatic rather than military activity was the centre the spotlight in the war news during the week-end as has been the case since the effective resistance of the Polish army ended. The latest significant move on the diplomatic front is the visit of Count Ciano, Italian Foreign Minister to Berlin.

It may mark either the end of the Rome-Berlin axis or the definite widening of that axis to include Soviet Russia, first, Berlin second and Rome third. Winston Churchill, in his worldwide radio speech Sunday, said Joachim von Ribbentrop, German Foreign Minister, had been summoned to Moscow. He did not say Ciano was summoned to Berlin possibly because he judged Russia's dominance by the result of Von Ribbentrop's Moscow visit and wishes to await the results of Ciano's visit to Berlin:

Churchill's speech may be taken as an answer in advance to the Soviet-Russian peace proposal expected this week. He affirmed Britain's refusal to bargain with Nazi Germany on any terms, or with any country on terms of the permanent suppression of Poland but did not rule out recognition of Soviet Russia's role as protector of the Balkan countries.

As the Italian Foreign Minister conferred with Greek Britain's enemies, Mr. Churchill recalled the fact that, despite recent differences and misunderstandings, Great Britain and Italy had never opposed one another in war.

His references to Russia and Italy left no doubt that his speech, re-broadcast to Europe in several languages by the British, was directed also in the diplomatic war which many believe must come to an issue before the war effort and the shell reaches its maximum intensity.

Text of Address by Winston Churchill

London, Oct. 1 (CP)—Following is the text of a broadcast speech tonight by Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty:

The British Empire and the French Republic have been at war with Nazi Germany since Sunday night. We have not yet come at all to the severity of fighting which is to be expected; but three important things have happened.

First, Poland has been again overrun by two of the great powers which held her in bondage for 150 years but were unable to quench the spirit of the Polish nation. The heroic defense of Warsaw shows that the soul of Poland is indestructible, and that when the time comes she will rise again like a rock, which may for a spell be submerged by a tidal wave, but which remains a rock.

Nazi Hordes Blocked

What is the second event of this first month? It is, of course, the attack by the power of Russia. Russia has pursued a cold policy of self-interest. We could have wished that the Russian armies should be standing on their present line as the friends and allies of Poland instead of as invaders. But that the Russian armies should stand on this line was clearly necessary for the safety of Russia against the Nazi menace. At any rate, the line is there, and an Eastern front has been created which Nazi Germany does not dare assail.

When Herr von Ribbentrop was summoned to Moscow last week it was to learn the fact, and to accept the fact, that the Nazi drive upon the Baltic States and upon the Ukraine must come to a dead stop.

I cannot forecast to you the action of Russia. It is a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma; but perhaps there is a key. That key is Russian self-interest. It cannot be in accordance with the interest or safety of Russia that Germany should plant itself upon the shores of the Black Sea, or that it should overrun the Balkan States and subjugate the Slavonic peoples of South-eastern Europe. That would be contrary to the historic life interests of Russia.

Hitler Warned Off

But here these interests of Russia fall into the same channel as the interests of British and France. Both of these three powers can afford to see Rumania, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, and above all, Turkey, put under the German heel. Through

POLAND STILL RECOGNIZED BY UNITED STATES

Seizure of Territory Does Not Extinguish Legal Existence Says Hull

AMBASSADOR TO STAY

Anthony J. Frexel Biddle U. S. Envoy to Stay Near Gov't. in Paris

Washington, Oct. 2 (AP) — The United States refused today to recognize the disappearance of Poland which State Secretary Cordell Hull termed "the victim of force used as an instrument of national policy".

Hull said that "mere seizure of territory does not extinguish the legal existence of a government."

The United States, therefore, he added, "continues to regard the government of Poland as in existence, functioning at present in exile in the province of the constitution of Poland".

He said that the government would continue to recognize Count Jerzy Potocki as Polish Ambassador at Washington, and that the United States Ambassador to Poland, Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., would remain near the Polish government, now centred in Paris.

Research Resources Will be Inventoried

Ottawa, Oct. 2—(CP)—An inventory of the research resources of Canada, planned by the National Research Council, is to be taken at once by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, S. P. Eagleson, Secretary-Treasurer of the Research Council, told a Service Club luncheon here.

This will make it possible to determine quickly whether a particular war-time research can best be undertaken by the Research Council or by a university or other Canadian laboratory, he said.

The council has already received voluntary assurance from many university authorities and from others, that their entire facilities are available to be used in which may best serve the national interest and it is then full advantage of these facilities."

FAMOUS CARDINAL MUNDELEIN DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Was One of Best Known of Catholic Clergy in United States

ATTACKED HITLER

He was found dead in his bed at his residence in Mundelein, Ill., by Mary Dunn, his chief aide, who had gone to the Cardinal's room to call him for his usual morning visit and appear for his customary morning devotions.

The Cardinal, who won wide notice for building the Chicago diocese into one of the largest and wealthiest in the world, was regarded as in "perfect health" as late as yesterday.

The Chicago Cardinal said he had "no fear of Hitler" in an address he made yesterday at the Seminary in Mundelein.

Mentioned as Papal Candidate

As one of the leading men of the Catholic clergy in the United States, Cardinal Mundelein was mentioned as a Papal candidate at the death of Pope Pius XI this year.

The Cardinal attracted attention in 1933 when he referred to Adolf Hitler, in public address, as "an Austrian paper hanger and a poor orator."

He was a close friend of President Roosevelt, whom he visited in the White House on several occasions.

In 1936, at a banquet honoring the Cardinal, hundreds of civic leaders, including Protestants, were stricken ill in a poison plot. Several Catholic priests were in the soup, and investigators traced the plot to an anarchist chef, Jean Crones.

Under Cardinal Mundelein's tenure, the Chicago archdiocese grew to be one of the Catholic Church ever brought to the United States was held in Chicago in 1926. More than 1,000,000 persons participated in the services.

Red Propaganda Trucks Sent With Army to Convert Populace

By MELVIN WHITELEATHER

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Brest-Litovsk, Russia, Oct. 2 (AP) Soviet Russia is Communizing Eastern Poland as fast as the Red army advances into the partitioned Polish state.

Supported by truck loads of Communist literature and large pictures of Joseph Stalin, Communists are being brought nearer central Europe.

Red army officers, and favorite pieces of strategy is to send soup kitchens behind the army in the villages to win over the population in occupied territories—but the Communist kitchens are accompanied with the army and start right in alongside the fighting front lines.

Local governing committees are being set up, militias are being formed, and collective farms and villages and factories are now in the workers' hands, with one Russian on each factory committee. Smaller workshops, however, have not been touched.

The trucks carrying Communist literature carry pictures that look at the towns and villages to preach the Communist doctrine. I saw several of them during 2½ days as the guest in this section of the Red army.

During that visit, I got a sidelight on the Red army's morale when I appeared to be pouring more than 1,000,000 men with full equipment into Eastern Poland.

The army looked as if it were three-fourths mobile and completely European in its manpower. It was western in its motorized heavy artillery. In the standardization of equipment and plentiful modern arms.

As Russia penetrates what once was Poland, the inhabitants of this region are wearing bits of red cloth in button holes or pinned to their sleeves to signify allegiance to the new order. Small improvised red flags made of any sort of material and cut to a point hang from the buildings.

Militiamen with bayonets fixed on Russian rifles patrol the towns and villages.

Food is scarce and most stores are closed but some open for a few hours daily. Long lines wait before them.

In order to get one meal for three persons at Berezn Kartuzka, the Red army had to send an automobile through surrounding villages with a radius of six miles. Sausage was requisitioned from one village, sandwiches in another, bread another, and cheese in the fifth while fifteen waited.

Armed Raider Sinks British Steamship in South Atlantic

Attacking Ship Said to be Either Cruiser or German 'Pocket' Battleship

MYSTERY OF RAIDER

Sinking of Clement Interpreted as German Move to Reopen Method of Sea Attacks Used in Great War

London, Oct. 2 (CP)—The military information today announced an armed raider had attacked and sunk the British steamship Clement of the Booth Line in the South Atlantic.

The ministry announced that "the raider has not yet been identified, but the correct steps are being taken." It was believed that the raider was either a cruiser or one of the German "pocket" battleships.

The sunken motorship was a vessel of 5,051 tons, built in 1924.

The attack on the Clement was interpreted here as a German move to reopen a method of sea attack used in the last war. Starting early in 1916, the Germans converted from a cargo ship to an auxiliary cruiser, ran the British blockade, sank or captured 60,000 tons of Atlantic shipping and was responsible for the sinking of 42 vessels to the bottom.

CANADIAN FLIER IS 'MISSING'

Toronto Man Said to Have Taken Part in Raid on Heligoland Bight

Toronto, Oct. 2 (CP)—Flying Officer Robert Coste, believed to have taken part in last Friday's Royal Air Force raid on the German naval base in Heligoland Bight, was officially reported missing in a cable received today by his father, R. Coste, well-known Toronto druggist.

Coste, 22 years old, six feet two inches tall, a member of the class at Upper Canada College, had been in the R.A.F. for two years. He is known to have taken part in the first British raid on German ships in the Heligoland waters. He had received his experience at that time qualified him for the Heligoland hostilities behind our line."

The British Ministry of Information said some of the planes on the latter raid had not reported back.

Why The Weather?

Special forecasts: These forecasts are made for the use of certain industries or for sports like skiing or skating. Some are now being made for connection with such widely diverse things as aviation, storms at sea and protection of growing crops.

But winter is coming on, and as efforts are made to keep highways as well as railroads open, special forecasts could include all kinds of transportation on land. Such forecasts are useful not only to those who use the transportation facilities, but particularly to those who keep the roads open and usable. A foreknowledge of the amount of snow expected would be valuable too in the work of clearing roads, streets and railroad tracks.

POLICE COURT

"I'm a good cook and I want to join the army", pleaded William Kitmer, 24, of Ont. Hospital camp after he had pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication before Magistrate E. G. Butler K.C. on Saturday's local police court.

"You are too old at 24", remarked Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., in response to Kitmer's pleadings for enlistment.

"No, sir, I'm only 42 years of age. I was only 21 when I was discharged from the army in 1918, sir", revealed the accused.

"Could you let this case stand aside until I can see what can be done for this army of his, sir?" queried Mr. Donnan. The case was enlarged.

A transient, who was arrested by O.N.R. police while trespassing, appeared before police magistrate Steve Chopcos. C.N.R. Constable Jerome asked for a remand in the matter. "He says he is a Hungarian and we wish to finger print him and submit the same to the federal authorities", revealed Mr. Jerome. The accused was remanded.

Two inebriates, who pleaded guilty, and a non-support case concluded the afternoon's police court proceedings held locally in some weeks.

"For the quarter ending Sept. 30th, 1939, the fees of the County Crown Attorney for Hastings County handled the greatest volume handled in the history of the office," B. C. Donnan, K.C., county Crown Attorney revealed in city police court today.

Annual Membership Campaign And Personal Canvass Will Take Place This Week Out-Of-Town
Public response this year more than ever before is required to raise the necessary funds required to provide this community service which has been maintained for over 40 years with one definite purpose — home nursing services in times of war no less than in times of peace.
Organization, district and nursing care as exemplified by the Victorian Order is essential to insure national health in the present emergency to face more pressing problems we should not overlook the fact that this public service must be maintained at home as the first step toward insuring similar service for those away from home.
The Victorian Order of Nurses is a nation wide visiting nurse organization whose endeavours to meet the special requirements of the Canadian people whose cases do not demand the full time services of a nurse; or those who have neither the means to pay for a full time nurse, nor household accommodation in order that those and those who for various reasons cannot or need not go into a hospital.
The local branch in Belleville last year made 7182 visits to patients, 3866 from the Victorian suite, and 2589 visits to mothers and babies.
feality has become a very important and growing phase of the work carried on by this city district. "Service to others" is the motto of the Victorian Order.
The annual campaign for funds taking place this week will provide an opportunity for everyone to have some part in this splendid work. Anyone wishing to mail in a donation can do so by addressing same to Mr. Fred Clairman Campaign Committee or telephone 1044 and a canvasser will be glad to call.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Tuesday, October 3.

A DAY of splendid initiative and opportunity is the augury based on an interesting cycle of planetary configurations. The energies and faculties will be found under high creative impulse. Let the ambitions keen and the spirit of adventure quickened. New propositions and projects progress by leaps and bounds under such impetus, with employers, elders and superiors lending generous support. It is a time for pushing to major objectives with audacity and confidence, although it would be well to have an eye to petty treacheries.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a year o. unusual enterprise, and highly-stimulated forces and faculties. Many critical factors of importance likely to "go over big" with public pressure promotion and with the co-operation of elders, superiors and friends of influence and prestige. Aim at high goals but be careful in handling contracts and writings, and be alert to trivial duplicities. Promotion and friendship in high places are seen.

A child born on this day may be energetic, ambitious, determined and audacious, winning the confidence of its superiors. Its friendly, genial and generous disposition will enhance its success and standing.

SEVERAL INJURED IN CAR ACCIDENT

Collision Happens at Intersection in Village of Tweed

Tweed, Oct. 2. (Special)—Several persons were more or less seriously injured on Sunday morning shortly before eleven o'clock when a car owned and driven by Mr. Edmund Pitchett crashed into the car operated by Mr. Thomas Graham. The accident occurred at the intersection at Dr. W. A. Paul's corner.

The occupants of Mr. Graham's car,—his mother, Mrs. E. Graham and Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Porritt and their five-year old daughter, Nancy, were all painfully injured when their car was turned over on its side by the force of the impact.

Mrs. Graham who was riding with her son in the front seat suffered a broken wrist and serious shock. She was taken to Tweed hospital. Mrs. Porritt sustained a fractured shoulder blade and considerable shock. Mr. Porritt was cut about the head by broken glass as practically every window in the car was broken. One deep cut in the scalp about three inches in length, required a number of stitches. He also suffered other minor cuts and abrasions as well as slight chest injuries. Their daughter, Nancy was badly cut above the right ankle.

Mr. Graham, the driver of the car, was uninjured. His car was badly damaged in the impact.

Mr. Pitchett was driving northward on Metcalf Street to the United Church, when the accident occurred. He was uninjured. Mrs. Oliver, a passenger, while not injured, is suffering from shock. The front of the car was damaged considerably in the collision.

Mr. and Mrs. Porritt and Nancy were taken to the office of a nearby doctor where their injuries were treated. Mrs. Porritt was later taken to Belleville General Hospital where an X-ray revealed a fractured shoulder-blade. She returned to her home where she is resting as comfortably as can be expected.

Sidney Softball Champions Honored With Presentations

With upwards of one hundred and fifty of their admirers and supporters present, the softball champions of Sidney Township were presented with trophies and sweaters emblematic of the various championships at an "at home" tendered them by the Young Farmers' Club in Wallbridge on Friday night.

The Centenary softball squad was formally presented with the Eldred Council trophy emblematic of the township league title, by Deputy Reeve S. R. Nuchison. Sweaters donated by Reeve Geo. H. Thompson of Rawdon, Warden of Hastings County, were presented by Mr. Linn Ray, agricultural representative of the county to the Sidney Allstars, winners of the softball tournament held at Stirling Fair. The Allstars eliminated the Huntingdon team, who went on to annex the tournament title by defeating the classy Newburgh township nine.

Incidentally the Allstars was the squad that was recently eliminated by the Tweed team in the second round of the intermediate O.A.S.A. playdowns.

The "at home" marked the opening autumn meeting of the Young Farmers' Club of the township. President Grant Longwell was in the chair and entertained the various guests. Warden Thompson was unable to be present but his place was ably taken by Mr. Fair. The evening was climaxed with a luncheon and an informal dance.

HUNTERS REPORT FAIR SHOOTING

Ducks Not Too Plenty for Many — Early Starts Made for Opening Day

Guns blazed on a new front today Fair, agricultural experts said of the local duck hunting army advanced upon Prince Edward County marshes as the feathered enemy along widely separated fronts.

Under the light of the early dawn, long before Old Sol pushed his fiery head above the horizon, they crept from the warmth of their beds and made their way through the lots and snorted and chugged their respective ways to hideouts of the marsh.

Intermittent firing, that at times sounded like the roar of artillery, left residents of the city near the waterfront wondering today if perhaps it was that the shooting was fair, and that a hunting bag had accured at least part of a bag.

Tall stalks of the district the pinnods hied themselves. To the far-flung sections of the Moira River, the Bay of Quinte and its various inlets, West Lake near Wellington, Big and Little Long Reach, Huff's Island and other well-known "duck-spots" the searching army took itself in the clear cool air of a perfect hunting morning.

Scenes of the past were revealed by too early risers, took no chances, and left for the favorite shooting and fishing places last night. Several carloads of hunters were observed leaving the city during the early evening, but the greater majority waited until this morning to leave for the "battlefield."

Police Blotter

Two minor motor accidents were reported in Belleville over the week end, both occurring on Saturday night just before 11 p.m.

While proceeding north on Station Street when the Bridge Street intersection, a motor car driven by Sylvia Nicholls, 19, of Belleville was in collision with another automobile, being driven in the same direction that Mountenay was about to make left hand turn and had given no ed to make any signal. The matter was amicably settled at the scene.

When Miss Ella Jones, 18, of Ont., was passing a parked motor car near the corner of Front and Bridge street later in the night, the left front fender of the automobile struck the fender of another motor car, being driven in the opposite direction by Jennie Jones, also driven by Bernard Hiderman of Picton. This matter was settled out of settlement when P.C. Thompson arrived to investigate. Here again only fender damage resulted.

In the pursuit of their duties local police apprehended two motorists who were in charge of motor vehicles while under the influence of an individual driver's licence. Charges will be preferred in each incident.

Two inebriates were taken into custody over the week end and are charged under the Liquor Control Act.

Stirling Motorist Collides With Tree

When it is believed the driver fell asleep, a motor car driven by Robt. Hatton, of Stirling, crashed into a large tree and was demolished at the foot of Bridge street, Stirling, Sunday No. 14, three miles south of Stirling at last night. Hatton sustained severe cuts and lacerations and a badly fractured nose. He was attended by Dr. Ira Hanna of Stirling.

Hatton was proceeding north when his car left the highway and crashed into a large elm tree. The force of the impact dislodged the engine, which broke into a position near the front seat. The driver was also taken into Stirling by a passing motorist, who later informed Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Erwine, that Hatton, in addition to the driver had sustained, multiple cuts and face, facial lacerations and was suffering from loss of blood as well as the broken nose. Charges of careless driving are pending, the officer revealed today.

Developments in Balkan States

(By The Canadian Press)

Developments in the Balkan States within the next few weeks may play an important part in the progress of the war, it was pointed out by observers of the Balkan situation.

Carol II, King of Rumania—Since his return from France in 1930 the 46-year-old Monarch has controlled much of Rumania's authority in his own hands. The first-inspired Iron Guard has murdered two of his premiers and in return Carol has cut of a purge of Iron Guardists that has run into hundreds of executions. Constantin Argetoianu, Premier of Rumania—A former holder of many portfolios, the new premier succeeded the murdered Armand Calinescu last month. He is president of the Agrarian party and has represented Rumania at many European conferences.

Prince Paul, Regent of Yugoslavia—Prince Paul became Regent for the boy king, Peter, after the boy father and Prince Paul's cousin, King Alexander, was assassinated in Marseille in 1934. The Regent's wife Princess Olga, is a sister of the Duchess of Kent and the Yugoslav couple are frequent visitors to England.

Dragisha Cvetkovitch, Premier of Yugoslavia—Cvetkovitch, a Serb, was charged with the task of putting into operation the new autonomy for the Croat minority. His government invited Croat representatives and hopes by eliminating this source of friction to remove one of Europe's danger spots.

George I of Greece—The 46-year old King succeeded to the throne in Sept., 1922, following abdication of his father, Constantine. He abdicated in turn in October, 1924, following the electoral victory of the late Premier Eleutherios Venizelos and establishment of a republic. Restoration of the monarchy occurred Nov. 25, 1935 and George resumed the throne, accepting the resignation of Regent George Kondylis. He has visited London twice since his return to Greece.

John Metaxas, Premier of Greece (Grecian "strong man"), aged 68, Premier Metaxas also holds the portfolios of foreign affairs, defence, marine and air. He dissolved parliament in 1936 and suspended the constitution, patterning his government after that of Italy.

Admiral Nicholas Horthy, Regent of Hungary—Commander in chief of the national army that occupied Budapest after the collapse of the Bela Kun Communist dictatorship, Admiral Horthy has been Regent since 1920 of the "Kingdom of Hungary", over which there is no king. Nok and Carol are the only heads of his troops last year in the first territorial acquisitions by Hungary in the dismembered Czecho-Slovak Republic.

Count Paul Teleki, Premier of Hungary — Last February Premier Bela Imredy, promulgator of anti-Semitic legislation, discovered he was of Jewish descent and resigned. Count Teleki, a former premier and one-time secretary of geography at Budapest University succeeded. Under him, Hungary obtained the Carpathian Ukraine from dismembered Czecho-Slovakia — with the result that Hungary shares the border with Soviet Russia as an ironic counterpoint to the recent partition of Poland.

Boris III, King of Bulgaria—The King, 45, succeeded to the throne Oct. 2, 1918. His queen is Princess Joanna of the Italian house of Savoy.

George Kiosseivanov, Premier of Bulgaria—Premier since last January, Kiosseivanov, aged 55, served in his country's foreign ministry, and as minister to Greece, Rumania and Czechoslovakia. Entering the cabinet in November, 1935. He is also foreign minister.

General Ismet Inonu, President of Turkey—Successor to Kemal Ataturk, the late Kemal Ataturk, founder of modern Turkey last year. Since then his government settled the dispute with France over Alexandretta and negotiated mutual assistance treaties with Great Britain and France. Premier Refik Saydam, Premier of Turkey—Assumed office last January, succeeding Premier Celal Bayar. Interested in defending himself against any attack.

UNUSUAL AERIAL ACTIVITY MARKS FRENCH OFFENSIVE

Nazi Fliers Making Stiffer Efforts to Turn Back Reconnaissance Flights

60 VILLAGES TAKEN

By JOHN LLOYD
Associated Press Staff Writer

Paris, Oct. 2 (A.P.)—French military reports today said French forces had consolidated their positions and removed thousands of small land mines planted by Germans on the western front.

Unusual aerial activity marked the past few days, it was asserted, with Nazi fliers making stiffer efforts to thin back Allied reconnaissance flights.

An account of a battle fought Saturday—German, not French—disclosed today, said three French and five German planes were shot down. The account said that the French reconnaissance planes and their protective fighters were attacked by 15 German planes.

Valiant Defenders

After a "long" fight, eight of the French ships returned, it was said, bringing "valuable" photographic information concerning German positions.

Semi-official sources said French troops thrusting into Germany along the western front had captured more than 60 Nazi villages during the first month of the war.

French guns, they said, now dominate the industrial section of the lower Saar, Blies and Lauter Rivers.

British troops were reported flowing eastward, matching German reinforcement add to be en route to the west.

The French General Staff reported a "relatively calm" night along the western front, but cited small attacks and ambushes in various sectors. The communique did not locate the action.

To Raise Polish Army

The reconstituted Polish Government, exiled to France, called to Poles throughout the world today a Polish army to fight beside the British and French. Officials said they hoped to recruit at least 200,000 volunteers from Polish groups in Canada and the United States.

The new soldier-Premier, General Wladislaw Sikorski, in command of the shattered Polish Army, made his flight on an airplane in their fatherland where Germany and Russia since divided the spoils.

French sources said their troops were threatening Zweibruecken, Saarbrucken and Saarlautern, three cities scattered throughout the area where they said an advance toward the Siegfried Line was being organized.

Hail "Baloney Position"

The French said they had a "baloney position" overlooking the Saar River towns.

Gains made by the French were ascribed by militarists to a series of "local operations" involving small, steady, local fights along the 100-mile front between Luxembourg and the Saar industrial area near Lauterbourg.

French military circles heard reports that the number of German troops on the Siegfried Line had been doubled during the past month and the Nazi front-line strength was estimated by Paris observers at 50 divisions, or more than 1,000,000 men.

Meanwhile, the King's first proclamation under the Armed forces Act approved by Parliament at the outbreak of war, summoned for service about 250,000 additional soldiers, sweeping into the service between the ages of 20 and 22 to register for military service at a date to be set later.

About 250,000 youths who reached the age of 21 since the war declared it already had been registered under the conscription introduced before the war started.

Form of Service Offer

The Amsterdam correspondent of The Daily Mail report that Germany probably would suggest the setting up of a "buffer state" like the Czecho-Slovak State" in an effort to make its "peace" proposals more agreeable to the Allies.

The correspondents also suggested that Chancellor Hitler was using Italy to advance his peace proposals in that "Catholic Italy" would warn that if the proposals were accepted Hitler "declined all responsibility for the resppearance of Communism in Germany."

Abdication of Hitler for Geering?

A restricted Polish State would be created from the remnants left from the German-Soviet partition, the correspondents said, and this territory would be as a "rampart against Bolshevism."

The Daily Mirror suggested that Hitler's forthcoming "pacific gesture might be an offer to "abdicate in favor of Goering" if Great Britain and France would accept his peace terms. The Fuehrer Gen would rest on his laurels as creator of the new and greater Germany and devote his time to art and literature, the Daily Mirror suggested.

Dogfight Over Siegfried Line

An Information Ministry communique told of a dogfight yesterday over Germany's Siegfried Line between five Polay Air Force planes and 15 German air fighters.

It acknowledged that three British warplanes were shot down during an intense battle of more than half an hour and that another made a forced landing. But it said that eight of the 12 men in the British crews were observed escaping by parachute.

The British Squadron Leader, the communique said, finished his reconnaissance assignment by dodging and banking while a gunner in the tail of his plane poured a steady fire into pursuing German craft.

It said two German planes were shot down and the others, "shaken by the gunners steady and accurate fire", gave up the fight.

Hitler Not to Say When War Will End

"It began when he wanted it and it will end only when we are convinced that he had had enough."

He said that "a large army has already gone to France" and that "British armies upon the scale of the effort of the Great War are in preparation."

How soon Britain might achieve victory, Mr. Churchill asserted, depended on "how long Herr Hitler and his group of wicked men, whose Lands are soiled with blood and whose hands are stained by their grip upon the docile, unhappy German people."

Mr. Churchill summed up three outstanding events of the first month of conflict:—

1. "Poland has been overrun but will rise again."

2. "Russia has, warned Hitler off its eastern threat." (Russia moved into Southern and Southeastern Europe.)

3. "The U-boats may be safely left to take care of the blockade attention of the British Navy."

He dwelt on how British warships were running down German submarines, saying they were being hunted mid-ocean—"and not altogether without relish."

Russia Creates Eastern Front

Russia, he said, had established a cold policy of self-interest but the Red Army had created a line on which to prevent the Nazi hordes would not dare attack.

Discussing the Russian "enigma" Mr. Churchill said that "through the fog of confusion and uncertainty we may discern quite plainly by the community of interests which exists between England, France and Russia to prevent the Nazi power from kindling the flames of war into the Balkans and Turkey."

The Daily Telegraph rejected the possible Hitler proposals in advance and said "there is nothing which should tempt any nation not already at war to take the gamble and if no U-boat had ever cast sailorsmen to their rare upon the perilous seas. This seems to be a very solid, tangible fact which has emerged from the confusion of the war against Nasidom.

We are told that all the U-boats have gone home to tell their master about their exploits and their experiences. But that is not true, because every day, even on Sundays, we are attacking them upon the approaches to the German bases. Some undoubtedly have preferred to go off and sink the unprotected neutral ships of Norway and Sweden.

The Daily Telegraph rejected the possible Hitler proposals in advance and said "there is nothing which should tempt any nation not already at war to take the gamble and if no U-boat had ever cast sailormen to their rare upon the perilous seas. This seems to be a very solid, tangible fact which has emerged from the confusion of the war against Nasidom.

Attacks Every Day.

We are told that all the U-boats have gone home to tell their master about their exploits and their experiences. But that is not true, because every day, even on Sundays, we are attacking them upon the approaches to the German bases. Some undoubtedly have preferred to go off and sink the unprotected neutral ships of Norway and Sweden, hope the day will come when the Admiralty will be able to relax some of all nations to join the British convoys and thereby secure safe passages at a reasonable rate.

What is the third event? Here I speak as First Lord of the Admiralty and with special caution. It would seem that the U-boat attack upon the life of the British Isles has not so far proved successful.

It is true that a new navy sprang out upon us and we were going about our ordinary business, with 2,000 ships in constant movement every day upon the seas, they managed to do some serious damage.

But the Royal Navy has immediately attacked the U-boats and is hunting them night and day—I will not say with merry—because God forbid we should ever part company with that; but at any rate with zest, and the other with cool relish. And it looks tonight as though as if in the U-boats who are feeling the weather, and not the Royal Navy or the world-wide commerce of Britain.

Expects Renewal.

A week has passed since a British ship, alone or in convoy, has been stopped, or even molested by a U-boat on the high seas; and during the first month of the war we have captured by our efficient blockade control 150,000 tons more German merchandise—food, oil, minerals and other commodities — for our own benefit than we have had by all the U-boat sinkings put together.

We must of course expect that the U-boat attack upon the international commerce of the world will be repressed for a time by a greater war. We hope, however, that by the end of October we shall have three times as many fighting craft at work as we had at the beginning of the war; and by the measures we have taken, we hope that our means of putting down this pest will ever continue as they are taking great care about that.

Therefore, to sum up the results of the first month, let us say that Poland has been overrun, but will arise again; that Russia has warned Hitler off his eastern dreams; and that the U-boat may be safely left to the care and constant attention of the British Navy.

Now I wish to speak about what is happening in our own island. When a peaceful democracy is suddenly made to fight for its life, there will be a lot of trouble and loss and strain in turning over from peace to war. You can see as much in the speeches of those who wish to throw themselves into the fight, but for whom we cannot find full scope at the present time. All this will clear itself into our stride.

Perseve to End.

Now you see we've been-told we are the effete democracies whose day is done, and who must now be ground under the iron heel of the new dictatorship and totalitarian despotism. No doubt a lot of people saying we shall have to suffer, before the fighting line and the war-effort can be established. Our reluctance to fight was mocked at as cowardice. Now you see we are organizing world was proclaimed as the fruit of feebleness and effeminacy. Now we are going on; now with the whole force of the British Commonwealth and Empire behind us, double as many fighting craft at work as we had at the beginning of the war; and by the measures we have taken, we hope that our means of putting down this pest will ever continue as they are taking great care about that.

Therefore, to sum up the results of the first month, let us say that Poland has been overrun, but will arise again; that Russia has warned Hitler off his eastern dreams; and that the U-boat may be safely left to the care and constant attention of the British Navy.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

ONE MONTH OF WAR

One month of war has passed. Events have moved rapidly as far as Poland is concerned, for it is conquered by Germany who spent her blood and money and shed the blood of Poles and devastated Polish resources in doing so, and by Russia which moved her troops into the eastern part of Poland. On the western front, the French retain and continue gains they have made in the approach to the German Siegfried line, while on the sea the U-boats of the Germans have suffered heavy losses and the German commerce is swept from the oceans. British convoys are established and the navy and air force have given noble accounts of themselves.

The world has been expecting Hitler to make his peace offer with the presence of Russia at his side but the mood of France and Britain as expressed in the press appears to be "no treaty, no peace with Hitlerism."

In the Balkans there is feverish activity as the neutral states consider the possibilities which lie before them with Germany and Russia looking intently on in that part of Europe. In the past days the Soviet gained through negotiations with Estonia, formerly a part of the Czarist Russia.

Italy still stands neutral. Observers say she is anxious to see the end of hostilities and hopes to gain by any settlement.

Efforts to predict the course of events and what new developments the next week or month may bring forth.

But over all the sombre and the Incidents there is in the United cause confidence in the outcome of the struggle to put an end to Hitlerian principles in the political and economic life of Europe, and the neutral world at heart prays for the victory of Britain and France.

THE MOOD OF THE PEOPLE

The mood of the people in this war differs. What has been noticed in Canada and is noticed in the British press which marks a great change in the attitude of the people during the Great War and the attitude today. Today the people have counted the cost and faced the issue grimly and determinedly to see the end of the barbaric forces which are trying to seize the domination of the world. There is no feverish excitement, "that has often found expression in the movements of cheering mobs, the noise and laughter of crowds and women deeply drugged by the realization of an overwhelming decision to realize what that decision is likely to mean for each of them. Today we have counted the cost." That is the word of the Glasgow Herald.

It may seem strange that Scotland so near the scene of conflict and Canada so far away would feel exactly the same. But both countries "have counted the cost" they remember the last war and they are determined to see this war ends in victory against Hitlerism. It is the realization that Britain and France and other democracies have done their best to prevent the struggle, which Hitler forced upon the world.

The information, though withheld from the enemy, is propagated up by the propaganda of Hitler himself and his minions, Goering, Goebbels and others; too no doubt do not look upon this war as they did upon the last one. But they have been cheered by thought of a lightning war for England which would bring peace to a war in the west for which the mind of the Germans seemingly had not been prepared. So while in the democratic countries there is the determination to wipe out Hitlerism, in Germany the talkers of three days has been mentioned as a possible term — in Germany there must be disappointment or will be disappointment should the struggle continue.

Meantime British leaflets find their way into German cities providing information as to the true state of affairs hidden from the people by the German Government. The brutal Gestapo police strive as they will cannot prevent the infiltration of these facts and the realization coming sooner or later to the people that they have been misled from the path that self-respecting nations should go all because of the crushing machine of Nazlism. Signs of uneasiness in Germany are seen by the London Telegraph and Morning Post, which points out that in "the bombast of Field-Marshal Goering, its strange amalgam of brag and whine, may be real doubt, distraction and fear. Whatever Herr Hitler's monomaniac faith in his star, his heir-apparent has clearly become uncomfortable about it. Field-Marshal Goering is unable to conceal his qualms about the enterprise into which the Fuehrer has plunged. It must be depressing to the German man in the street however dulled by propaganda, when he learns though Poland is to be crushed in four weeks, he will not see an indefinite period be short of meat, short of clothes, without any soap and that is the best the regime can promise him."

The mental state and the motive of the Allied nations and those people of Nazi Germany are vastly different. The Allied attitude spells ultimate victory, the German spells defeat in the end instead of a lightning victory.

COURAGE

From weariness and all dull sloth,
From grief and fearfulness and pain
Defend us not O Lord, but give Us courage ever and again!

Courage to meet the daily task,
Greatness of heart to fear no change,
A thinking mind in war's great stress,
And tolerance where'er we range.

Protect us not lest we grow weak,
Chasten and strengthen us, dear Lord.
That we may be reborn again,
That we may seek no soft award!

Send Thy great wind to clean our souls.
Let no man shirk the things that be.
Upright and strong with shining gaze,
Facing the storm we come to Thee!

'Tis said, as yet, "man is not Man"—
But in Thine image all are made,
And Thy Son came to point the Way—
Should we, His brothers, be dismayed!

Give us no easy task O Lord!
But give us courage! Let us grow!
World peace to-seek, our goal, our trust,
Thine arms beneath us, then to know.

THE FIRST PRINTING PRESS OPERATED IN THE UNITED STATES is now on exhibition in New York at the Fifth National Graphic Arts Exposition. The press is the property of the Vermont Historical Society, and was brought from England to Cambridge in the summer of 1638, and set up in Cambridge. The first piece of printing in the American colonies, "The Freeman's Oath", came off the press in 1639, and in the next year "The Bay Psalm Book," the first colonial printing of which an authentic copy exists was printed. One of the features of the exposition will be the printing of "The Freeman's Oath" on a high speed modern press to demonstrate the development of printing. Equipment during the last three centuries. The development of the printing press and the publishing business generally during the memory of man, is amazing, and Old Timers who sweated over a Washington hand press a generation day, afternoon and evening, and then, after supper, letting down the papers the night before, watch the great presses of the daily newspapers of today with more or less awe and a twinge or two of aching muscles in memory of Washington Press days.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST SABOTAGE both in Canada and the United States are justified by the record of enemy sabotage plots during the past war. The United States, before they entered the war, was the victim of German sobotage plots which caused loss of many millions. Those who have read the history of the "Black Tom" and other explosions get an idea of the extent of the organization financed by Germany which operated in the United States and Canada, and even plotted to seriously cripple Canada's railroad and canal systems. Ever since the last war the Black Tom explosion in New Jersey has been in litigation, Germany being charged with sobotage of the plot. The case dragged on for years with Germany fighting every inch of the way except for one intermission when Germany agreed to a settlement if the case was withdrawn. This was done but the settlement agreement was repudiated. The case was resumed and Germany at long last secured a favorable verdict. Then it was discovered that this favorable verdict was secured on fabricated and false testimony and the case was re-opened. Germany lost, and refused to abide by the judgment. However, the United States has collected millions of dollars at least, on the one Canadian firm, Canada Foundry and Forgings Company, which operated a munitions plant in New Jersey, has a considerable interest. The twenty million German money on deposit in United States banks will make a first payment on the final payment of damages caused by German sabotage, as far as the truth sifted through the mass of lies and perjury can determine.

No Dalai Lama has ruled in the sacred city of Lhasa, Tibet, for the past six years, the country being administered by regents as it has since the thirteenth "reincarnation" of Sonlma left this troubled world in 1933. About a month ago, however, Lhasa reported the most likely-looking candidate for the exalted office had been found in a little village not far away. He was subjected to the traditional tests by which the divinity of the claimant is identified. Now this little lad of five, whose name is Thondup, has survived the long ordeal of omens and suspects by which the yellow-robed priests arrive at a decision. The last "proof" was given a week ago, according to report, when Tanchu was placed on a table and surrounded by articles of use and articles, from which he was told to pick. By selecting a sacred relic he convinced the Monks that he was the rightful successor for whom they had been searching for years. He will have to wait some time, however, before he ascends the throne, for the religious duties he will be called upon to discharge are extremely complex and call for a hard period of study lies before him. For thirteen years he is to live in a gold-domed temple familiarizing himself with the ritual.

It is fgnerally asserted that Tanchu "stands out" from the rest of his living by maturity. The last Dali Lama managed to survive to the age of sixty-five. He was a complete exception to the usual order of things. His four predecessors passed from the scene at the ages of 18, 11, 17 and 20 respectively. It is the precarious glory which little Tanchu has had wished upon him. If he survives, though safe he will be the fourteenth reincarnation to rule, and if he follows the example of his immediate predecessors he will take steps to protect himself from assassination. The comparative longevity of the last high priest was attributed to his supreme distrust of obsequious undertakings, and to the employment of an official food-taster.

"The world will wish Tanchu well. After all, there is a fascination in these rites and a glamour about the mysterious Shangrila-like region, which, whatever one may think of the spectacular political intentions and its recurring cycle-dynasties, is undeniable.

SCIENCE AND WAR

Germany leaves no trick unplayed in her effort to terrorize opposition both at home and abroad. That it has been made plain to Hitler that the Allies are not to be terrorized into obliging him with a peace on his own terms, he has had to resort to bombing in attempt to help him out, which, like the Siegfried line, Pickwick, and the like, he relied upon to "make your flesh creep." The world is told that the German militarists have many "surprises" up their sleeves, which, when produced, will quickly put all foes to rout, if not annihilate them entirely from off the face of the earth. Such are the "secret" instruments of annihilation are, of course, kept a secret. The nations that can find substitutes for milk and eggs, and even for the indispensable but distasteful and injurious; it would be folly to underrate German inventive genius still it would be folly to expect that, if these new and terrible "secret" devices are really available, the apostles of Kultur will not be forced to make use of them.

No credit is given these reports, however, it is argued, logically enough, that if Germany possessed these mysterious implements, she would not talk about them before-hand, but produce them suddenly and without warning. But the talk serves a purpose, for scientific guessing is just what is the nature of these death-dealing instruments! Are they gases, or new poisons, germ spreaders, death-rays, or that's splendidists are thrilled by the hoodoo the possibility of anything of the kind. In either case, counter-measures can be taken. German efforts at "schreckllchkeit" in the Great War were largely nullified. If it comes to a question of equipment, the Allies have nothing to fear. Allies in increasing degree as the weeks go by.

In this connection a rather curious point of view has been taken by Dr. Karl T. Compton, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Boston. He says that the hope, though it has produced many "horrors," is that science may make destructive contribution to human progress that will more than offset the prospect by the possession of essential materials. Chemical research may lead to substitutes for these materials and so removes the cause of strife. It is more reasonable in every way to make these synthetic substances, he says, than to have fight other nations for commodities such as coal, oil and rubber. Well, Germany is the country par excellence which has adopted a policy of "substitutes" and has not diminished, but rather increased, her craving for the materials of other lands.—Hamilton Spectator.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Preventing Hardening of the Arteries

Most of us think of hardening of the arteries with high blood pressure, heart disease, apoplexy, kidney disease—do appear at middle age and onward, but few people are able to show that the beginning of hardening of the arteries in a large number (85 per cent) between the ages of 20 to 30 and that the rate of hardening of the arteries in from 21 to 29 percent of persons beyond the age of 50.

If then, hardening of the arteries is at its height in early age (20 to 30), what can be done to delay the process and so prolong life, heart, and brain ailments?

Dr. W. Zinn, in the Munich Medical Journal states that the adrenal glands have much to do with the hardening of the arteries. Both the fats and the adrenal julte spinephrin hasten hardening, while a breaking down and loosening of the lining wall of the arteries and also the obstructive fatty material to various parts of the body.

Other glands also have a bearing on the blood-vessels and results in the elastic tissue becoming less elastic and the blood vessels unable to break down.

Dr. Zinn recommend further destruction or hardening of the blood-cells. Dr. Raab states that the following diet preserve arteries longer:

1. The intake of egg yolks, butter and milk should be restricted to not more than 10 to 15 percent of the total food intake. Meat, fish, and savory foods and must be eaten, but not in any greater proportion than 15 percent. Fruit and vegetables, especially of fruits, vegetables and cereals.

2. Abuse (not use) of nicotine should be avoided.

3. Excessive exposure to the sun should be avoided.

4. Treatment with bloodvessel and heart conditions could be given X-ray and radium to the adrenal glands at regular intervals.

5. Marriage between persons with high blood pressure or weak blood vessels should be discouraged.

6. Regular physical exercise excitement should be avoided.

THE TOURIST INDUSTRY

When Mr. Loring Christie, our new Minister to Washington, held his first conference with Canadian and United States correspondents, he gave them this statement from his document:

"United States tourists and travellers are welcome in Canada. We may want to some later have no visitors from the United States for a situation. They will continue to enter freely for the present. No negotiations have been made or are contemplated that will interfere with the tourist industry," said the Minion. No Canadian documents have required for entry or exit. In a word, we continue to welcome United States tourists."

This is sensible, Canada's tourist industry has been for some years one of our best assets, source of revenue, ranking with, if not surpassing, the wheat crop, lumber and wheat in the matter of dollars and cents. It should become even more important after the war; years when we are going to need all the United dollars we can get for purposes of exchange.

Now if we reason why tourists should continue to come here, we can also reason why Canadians will be vacationing, and will travel to Europe cut off most American's will feel inclined to vacation over here. They will look over here if we go after them; tell them more vigorously than in the past, what we have to offer and how to get there, plus a combination of vacation charm in mountain—sea and air. — Ottawa Journal.

BANCROFT MEN HELD BY POLICE

Constable Palmateer Alleges He Was Assaulted in Discharge of Duties

When Provincial Constable Palmateer went to the home of Lake Woodcock, Bancroft, to investigate a series of thefts that had terrorized North Hastings for some time, the officer alleges he was set upon and beaten by three members of the Woodcock family who later were arrested and lodged in the Belleville jail on charges of assaulting a police officer and also of obstructing an officer in the pursuit of his duties on Saturday night.

The three men are Lake Woodcock, 61; Samuel Woodcock, 26, and Elmer Woodcock, all of Bancroft. Lake and Samuel are charged with obstructing, while Elmer Woodcock is charged with assaulting Constable Palmateer, who was forced to draw his police billy and defend himself at the Woodcock home, he said. Palmateer was allegedly kicked several times in the abdomen necessitating medical attention, but he managed to arrest two of the Woodcocks, while Provincial Constables W. E. Smith and J. French of Belleville, hastened to Bancroft and apprehended the third man.

Constable Palmateer was investigating a series of thefts and breaking into summer cottages in North Hastings and recovered an outboard motor that was stolen two years ago.

TRAFFIC OFFICER KILLED IN CRASH

Fred S. Blucher, Formerly Stationed at Napanee and Colborne Well Known in District

Toronto, Oct. 2—Provincial Officer Fred R. Blucher was fatally injured Saturday night when his motorcycle collided with an automobile, believed to have been out of control, on the Middle Road at the Third Line, Dixie. He died a few minutes after admittance to St. Joseph's Hospital. The 33-year-old officer, a member of the Provincial force for the past ten years, was thrown into the side of the car, receiving severe internal injuries.

Alfred H. Fonger, 38, of Glen Cedar Avenue, York Township, was arrested by Provincial Officer J. J. Palmer and charged with manslaughter. He was later released on $3,000 bail and will appear in Port Credit police court Tuesday.

Blucher's death was the only traffic fatality recorded in the Toronto suburban area over the week end, but there were numerous minor accidents and a number of victims were given hospital treatment.

"Blucher was patrolling east on the Middle Road when a car came from the westbound lane, apparently out of control," said Acting Inspector P. G. Jerome. The car was apparently driven by Fonger. Blucher's motorcycle struck the car's left front fender with terrific force, throwing him into the side of the auto and then to the pavement. He died a few minutes after reaching hospital."

The officer had been patrolling his section of the Middle Road all day and at 5 o'clock went to Port Credit for supper. The accident occurred after he resumed his patrol. His wife, Rose, and 11-year-old son Freddie were in Toronto visiting and heard a radio broadcast of the accident. Mrs. Blucher immediately called Provincial Officer James Bienkin and learned of her husband's death.

Coroner Dr. C. N. Mooney had the body removed to the morgue and ordered an autopsy by Dr. I. H. Erb, provincial pathologist.

According to his fellow officers, Blucher was one of the most careful motorcyclists in the division. He came from Colborne two years ago and while en route to Toronto, was involved in a highway mishap which put him in hospital for two weeks. He had previously been stationed at Port Hope, Napanee and Smith's Falls. Born in Bristol, England, he came to Toronto twenty-six years ago and joined the Provincial force in 1929 as a traffic officer.

Funeral services will be held in Berkeley Street United Church tomorrow afternoon, and interment will take place in St. John's cemetery, Kingston Road. Many municipalities on the Lake Shore Road have already made arrangements to be represented at the rites.

Danish Freighters Taken to German Port

Copenhagen, Oct. 2 (AP)—German warships seized three Danish freighters in the Kattegat and took them to a German port, according to a report from the lightship at Lesso Island.

Word from the lightship said German destroyers could be seen plainly as they took the steamships Riota, Diana and Lyneas.

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to light his cigar after supper and ma said, Willyum Potts dont tell me you've bought another new cigar lighter?

I wont tell you, you've guessed it, pop said. But this is a cigar lighter to end cigar lighters, this is a stroke of genius and the man who invented it proberly got gypped out of 9 tents of the credit for all the profits, he said, and ma said, How much was it?

Like all truly great things, it is simplisity itself, pop said. I just hold it lightly in my fingers a few seconds, in this manner, the warmth of my hand causes the little round spot to glow, I apply the tip of my cigar, and presto it's done, he said, and ma said, No doubt, and I suppose its wrecking will soon be added to the useless carcasses of the other 6 dozen patten lighters around the house, how much did you have to pay for it?

Them, it's starting to glow, pop said, and ma said, It's about time, I was wondering how long you had to hold hands with it, how much did you say it was?

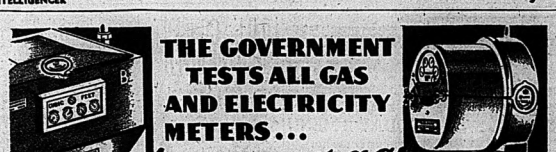
Now watch me snap a light from it, pop said.

And he put the end of his cigar against the red spot and nothing happened, ma saying, There, I knew it, and pop said, I'll take this junk back and tell that fellow a thing or 2.

O yes, I know how you'll take it back, they'll saddle you with still another cantraption 3 times as expensive and 4 times as useless, ma said. You just tell me where you got that thing and I'll take it back personly myself she said and pop said, Good, I'll discribe the fellow briefly, he was about my hite with a brown derby and a poor complexion, and he was standing on the corner of Main and Market Streets with a suitcase full of these things, I'll tell you what you can tell him.

Never mind, I'll tell you instead, ma said.

Wich she did.



BECAUSE the inspection and testing of meters is carried on continuously the meter that is found to have developed the slightest defect is promptly removed from service. All meters installed for the purposes of compuling the amount of electricity or gas that has been used—and for which a charge is established—all such meters are required by acts of parliament to be inspected every six years. To control and inspect the approximately 2,658,317 meters in use in Canada, 20 offices have been established throughout the Dominion. These are in charge of the Electricity and Gas Inspection Branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, Ottawa.

ALL METERS ARE INDEXED

Canada is divided into twenty districts; each with a senior officer of the Electricity and Gas Inspection Service in charge. About 100 Inspectors operate from the combined 20 offices. Each office keeps a complete record of meters in the district and all records are kept up-to-date and instantly available. The meters inspected range in size from the smallest required for domestic use, to the very largest employed for industrial and commercial purposes. Every meter in use bears the government seal which signifies that the meter was inspected and found accurate. This seal also prevents the meter from being opened and tampered with. Government supervision of this kind forms a protection for all Canadian Citizens who buy or sell electricity, manufactured gas or natural gas.

CANADA LED THE WORLD IN THIS SERVICE

For many years after gas came into use there was no periodic inspection of gas meters in any country in the world. But the Confederation of Canada had been established only 8 years when the Federal Government caused the Gas Inspection Act to come into force in 1875. Then in 1894 a similar Electricity Inspection Act was passed. In adopting these protective policies, Canada led all other countries. Known now as the Electricity and Gas Inspection Service, this branch of the Department of Trade and Commerce, is really the pioneer of this form of public service the world over.

This Government Seal is your guarantee that the meter is officially approved, inspected and found accurate. The seal also prevents tampering with the mechanism.

NO METER CAN BE INSTALLED WITHOUT THE GOVERNMENT SEAL

The Electricity and Gas Inspection Acts render the Government responsible for the type of meters placed in general use. Before they can be used every type of meter must be approved. And every new meter of every type is inspected for accuracy before it can be installed for service. The seal of the Department of Trade and Commerce which is placed on all meters, is therefore of prime importance to the citizens who buy or sell electricity or gas.

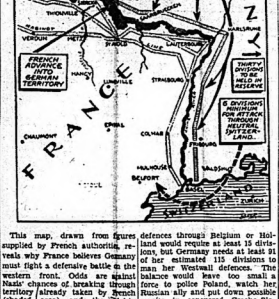
WHY FRANCE FEELS CONFIDENT



This map, drawn from figures supplied by French authorities, reveals why France believes Germany must fight a defensive battle in the western front. Odds are against Nazis' chances of breaking through territory (already taken by French (shaded) area) and the Mighty Maginot line beyond. To flank the defences through Belgium or Holland would require at least 15 divisions, but Germany needs at least 21 of her estimated 115 divisions to man her Westwall defences. The balance would leave too small a force to police Poland, watch her Russian ally and put down possible revolts in conquered Czecho-Slovakia, Austria or the Reich itself.

AN INNOCENT ABROAD

One of the "advantages" of "civilized" warfare is that an army can strike where its soldiers can't reach. For example, note this photo of a young Polish girl being carried to a medical station after being severely wounded during a German air raid on a small, unguarded Polish town, well behind the zone of battle. German officials say their aircraft only bombed military objectives.

KING INSPECTS A UNIT OF HIS AIR DEFENCE

His Majesty King George is keeping in close touch with the war activities of his nation and is making routine visits to the many stations on land and to ships of his fleet to see at first hand how his aides are strengthening the defence system of his domain. In this picture, that was passed by the censor, King George was enarged as he inspected an anti-aircraft gun on one of the ships of his fleet.

Canadian Apples

The Dominion Government is to be congratulated, we think, for its prompt action to help the apple growers; but in addition, the Canadian people would benefit themselves as well as the apple growers by eating more apples. "An apple a day keeps the doctor away" is a proverb which was founded on practical experience before the scientists discovered that apples contain some of the most important vitamins and a store of iron particularly beneficial to growing children.

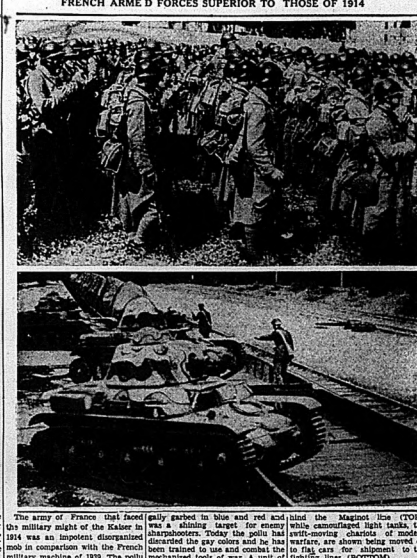
Hon. Mr. Ilsley says properly that the Government's proposition to buy two million barrels of apples should not be regarded as "special treatment of one industry", but as a timely war measure of food conservation.

Canada produces about five million barrels of apples a year. This year, the crop is larger than usual; so much so that apples, particularly in Nova Scotia, are at rock-bottom prices. Some growers complain they cannot sell their apples at the rate of fifty cents a barrel, on the trees—the purchaser, that is, to do the picking.

The trouble in Nova Scotia, and indeed throughout Canada, is that there is not sufficient cold storage capacity; and when there is not an immediate home demand or foreign sale, a large proportion of the apples may have to rot.

The Dominion Government is announced to have plans to conserve by canning the apples it will buy. The people of Canada can help by buying apples, as already said. If every family in Canada bought a barrel of apples, there would be no surplus; for a considerable portion of our apple crop is always sold abroad. — Ottawa Journal.

FRENCH ARMED FORCES SUPERIOR TO THOSE OF 1914



The army of France that faced the military might of the Kaiser in 1914 was an impotent disorganized mob in comparison with the French military machine of 1939. The pollu of a quarter-century back was gaily garbed in blue and red and was a shining target for enemy sharpshooters. Today the pollu has discarded the pay colors and he has been trained to use and combat the mechanized tools of war. A unit of the new French army is shown behind the Maginot line (TOP), while camouflaged light tanks, the swift-moving chariots of modern warfare, are shown being moved on to flat cars for shipment to the fighting lines (BOTTOM).

Paton, the pilot, attempted a forced landing. The plane suddenly wrecked when it hit the top of trees and plunged out of control to the ground.

Fashion Flashes

A GOOD BUY is a three-piece ensemble of smooth black woollen, the top coat collared with silver fox and cut full length for wear over dresses as well as the matching suit. The suit also looks nice with furs.

We'd rather have a fine fur-trimmed cloth coat than an inferior fur coat. A grand model has small collar wide plastron and front panels all of mink, an dull black woollen. The fur is so arranged that from the front the coat appears to be fashioned entirely of mink.

The chief aim of milliners is to make us look pretty. For year with casual tweeds there's a blue bell blue felt, the narrow brim lifted at one side to join the pastilion crown banded in real brown beltring ribbon. The wide ribbon ends flow over the profile brim at the side.

Suede enthusiasts will like casual coat of grape purple with brown lambskin lining which can be buttoned in at will. The lamb forms open revers.

A big hand was reserved at a recent style show for a full length coat of ermine-dyed in blue fox shade. Cut to be worn with or without fur the fur belt it was notable for its collarless neckline, shoulder yoke, chevron sleeve epaulettes of the wide sleeves and swing back full-ness.

Brighten up with a belt. Pretty for black or brown is a belt of medium width and dark green kiddie in braided bands with a wide buckle.

I.O.D.E. CONCERT MUCH ENJOYED

Over $50 Collected at Capitol Theatre for War Work

Belleville responded to the call of the I.O.D.E. Chapter of the I.O.D.E. in its initial effort to raise funds to carry on the work of the Chapter in supplying comforts for soldiers and refugees, when a capacity house welcomed Belleville entertainers during a patriotic concert, at the Capitol theatre last night. Officials stated today that over $60.00 was donated in silver collection, all of which was given to the St. Julien Chapter of the I.O.D.E. of which Mrs. Emily Neale is Regent.

Chas. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., very sympathy handled the chairman of the evening duties and welcomed the large gathering, the nightly entertainment being provided by the Belleville Municipal Band, under the baton of Lieut. Fred Jobson and Harold Barrett, soloist. Mr. Cameron spoke briefly on the work of the I.O.D.E. and issued an appeal for yarn for war, wearing apparel and cash donations on behalf of the I.O.D.E. The chairman personally thanked all those who took part, stating special mention of the fact that the Capitol theatre had been donated, rent free, for the occasion. The entire personnel of the theatre staff being present to assist the audience in connection with city police and firemen.

Mr. Harold Barrett, who was accompanied by his wife at the piano, brought back memories with four songs. His opening number was Hail King George and as an encore he sang that old wartime favorite of the army's "A long way to Tipperary." Other selections given by Mr. Barrett were—"When You Come Home" and "I Love Life."

With a full band of some 60 musicians, the Belleville Municipal Band presented a varied program of martial, classical and other favorite tunes, all of which were gratefully received by a capacity house. Last night's patriotic concert was the first in a series, that will be conducted to raise funds for the I.O.D.E. and similar organizations that function in time of war or in case of charities.

Rejuvenate Your Tresses

BY HELEN POLLETT

HOW DID YOUR hair come through the summer season? Did you bask in the sunlight, bleach your locks in horrid streaks? If so, you had better give yourself some reconditioning treatments or trot to the beauty parlor and let them give your brain mop a good overhauling. It won't do to let locks go dry and brittle for the complexion, they respond to coddling care.

Scalp and shafts thrive on oil. So the night before the shampoo apply olive or mineral oil and have it rub into the fingers and thumbs and give your scalp a manipulating stirring up, pinching the flesh, rolling it. The purpose is to rouse the circulatory streams upon which their hair nourishment depends. Oil treatments are beneficial to dry hair and they will not make it look oilier.

Having a routine shampoo next morning, using melted soap, frictioning is in at least three times: have as many rinses as you can, a strong current of water. Don't fancy you can slosh up water from the wash bowl and get the lather out of your glorious crest; it can't be done that way. While using the spray keep lifting up the hair so the water is thoroughly distributed. Few home shampoos are successful. If professional cleanings are not always done as they might be. Anyway it is vitally important to use a high grade bland soap.

Fancy not, gentle reader, that eyebrow plucking is a new idea. Lovely Chinese ladies who lived 4,000 years ago did that same little thing; it is reported by those who claim to know. Mona Lisa hasn't any, nor even a faint shadow. If you ask us, or even if you don't we believe that sly girl would be even prettier if she sports, a smart set of eyebrows.

They must be arched and trusted for a neat, clear-cut border line, but they are no longer murdered and cut out of business. If you have tweezed yours to a state of nothingness, frictions with vaseline every night. That treatment will restore them to a normal state.

Serious About Shoes

By PRUNELLA WOOD

The new footwear invites fascinable civilization and scarcely no wisecracks. Black, brown, green and rust are the new fall and winter shades. Many toes are rounded, some are square, permitting gratifyoom of the toe without pinching them; skeleton models are limited to evening.

It's smart to match shoes to handbags to clothes for your tweeds. Dare the keg heel and rejoice in the thinner platform sole. By all means start the season in suede dress shoes if not street models, varying your style with kid, alligator, wool gabardine.

Suggestions today include a pump of sleeping fox, fashioned of fur tops and modified keg heel. It's for daytime elegance with an afternoon flair. Just below is a high-strung step-in with cutout tongue and pyramid heel, comfortable on the foot which can't hold a pump.

RELIEVE COLDS WITHOUT "DOSING"

Don't risk upsetting your child's stomach and making still more miserable by "dosing" internally for colds. Just massage Vicks VapoRub on throat, chest, and back.

VapoRub acts on the skin like a warming, stimulating poultice. At the same time it gives off soothing medicinal vapours that are breathed all night to help relieve coughing. This poultice-and-vapour action swiftly relieves the misery of a cold.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Relief or Youthful Tragedy

Given health, a good enough to eat, and youth should be its own self-starter on the highway to happiness.

It takes so little to make girls and boys happy, surely extra effort taking thought on the part of parents, is worth while. I'll admit it's a nuisance to help the youngsters give a party, or even to send them to one sometimes, but youth has certain rights and privileges that we oldsters are prone to overlook.

I can never read of the suicide of an adolescent in the papers without a dreadful heart sinking. Where have we failed—we older people—in not helping to put across to youth that today's tragedy is apt to be tomorrow's comedy? Nothing is so dreadful as it seems when the pressure is on.

Dr. Merrill Moore, who has delved exhaustively into human impulses and who is not only an instructor at Harvard but a psychiatrist and a poet as well, has shown how people are turned from suicide by a word spoken at the right time, especially young people, and not so often like rudderless boats awash in the tide. They need reassurance that someone understands, someone who like themselves has felt that way but who is better than the intolerable present, can save them.

The life line may be nothing more than the suggestion to do something cheering instead of brooding. Employment, even unprofitable employment, is better than idleness. Hearts break, but they also mend, and the young pick up the pieces and go on.

In the many years I have written this column I have received thousands of letters from unhappy girls and boys—young people who are silver linings to their clouds. And you have helped to lift hearts to me and tell me why they are so miserable, their unhappiness gone to pay at this thing that could almost always be easily remedied.

Youth cries to youth. To be normal is not to be one of the conspicuous ship of its kind. And here is where the strict parent, especially the over-strict father, fails. He would protect his daughter from every temptation, and pitfall, by shutting her up. He does not realize that a girl that's never been in love has not known how to protect herself. That every pimply-faced boy seems an Apollo because she knows no boys. Not being spoken to on the street is a devastating absence, because no boys speak to her in her own home, where she should be free to meet them.

It is difficult to speak of the mother—maybe they are unconscious—of taller parents who object to their daughter's life of her own even when her wages help to maintain the family. That they may be jealous of the youth of everyone who knows of these conditions. And there is the tragedy of the girl who lives in terror of anyone dropping in, for fear they may find her brother or brothers drunk. I would rather die than have them see the conditions in my home" is the all familiar phrase in their letters.

Churches help to a great extent by having rooms where young people can meet, prepare a meal, dance or play games. And can't our bridge-playing women do some thing? Cut out a couple of games next week, and come to the rescue of these youngsters who have so little pleasure in their lives!

GOOD MANNERS

SOME DO'S AND DON'T'S FOR LETTER-WRITERS

Don't write sentences without subjects. For example: "Am writing to say." "Received your letter." "Have been well, and hope you are the same." "Will close, now."

Don't send a letter that is blotted by blotted, or untidy from erasures. Don't write careless or illegibly.

On the envelopes of letters, business and social, and in the headings and complimentary closings, abbreviations, especially of such necessary ones as Mr. and Mrs.

Don't write in pencil unless you absolutely have to . . . for instance perhaps on a train, or when you are ill in bed.

Don't start your letter with a long explanation for the delay of your answer.

Don't veiled paper . . . it looks childish.

Avoid writing postscripts. They indicate an untidy mind.

Space your letter artistically. Keep good margins.

When you start on a new subject, make a new paragraph. Indent a paragraph at least an inch.

Punctuate clearly and accurately.

Hotel Dinner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

As a dinner is held by a hotel, is it proper for the host and hostess to greet the guests as they arrive, or should each guest, on arriving, seek out the host and hostess in order to greet them?

G.

The hostess, when she is receiving her guests before a dinner at a hotel, stands near the entrance to the room in which she is receiving her guests. A guest, when he or she arrives, leaves his hat in the cloakroom, and then come to the place where the hostess and host are. The hostess will introduce the guest to be "received". In other words, it is the guest's business to find the hostess.

With the host it might be a bit different. A co-operative host might mingle with the guests who have not been received by the hostess or wife when he may stand with her to greet the guests. He might politely be on the look out for the arrival of guests, and might escort them to the hostess and host. The hostess and host stand together when they are receiving their guests, the guest is the one who approaches.

Do not further, the guests should keep in mind that they should go to the host and hostess as soon as they should not stop to greet other guests before they have made their bow to the host.

In the busy weeks, especially the breads are liable to infect. In particular, the nipples are apt to become cracked and occasionally to sore but it is necessary to have the baby off the breast for a few feeding. Sometimes a nipple shield will have to be used. This is one of the times when you need your doctor's advice if you are to come through without suffering too much.

Another factor is that after the baby is gone the mother is left to herself to recover from any extreme heroics, because of broken sleep, and most whether the baby is getting the right care or not. This is a mother heart's regardless of fatigue. And this combination of circumstances often causes the baby to suffer from lack of nourishment.

When a mother finds that she is getting enough milk for the baby, it seems she becomes panicky, worries more and more, and so fails to the cause of the trouble. But this diminishing of the milk supply is merely a sign that the mother is overtaxing her strength. She is being too active. Before much, she really hasn't enough strength to do her housework or produce milk for her baby as well.

When this happens, many a mother is then to the conclusion that she can't give her child enough food, so she is deprived of the baby's milk and the baby is deprived of its mother.

Care of a Baby in Its First Year" is the early years of raising the baby are apt to be rather trying. For its thing, there is quite often an excessive supply of milk during the first few days. This will right itself, of course, but very often I find it advisable to suggest some means to relieve the tension on the breasts. In many cases it is wise to use a breast pump; sometimes a bath with warm oil will give the necessary relief.

Three-Way Fur

BY ALICE ALDEN

Here's a neighbor. A really clever designer has put on the market a three-way fur ensemble in very desirable pelts as ocelot (shown here), muskrat, Alaskan seal, kidskin and carpel. It's all managed with zippers cleverly concealed and easily manipulated. The jacket alone, as pictured, fits the waistline perfectly. Zip the fur skirt into the jacket and you have a full-length coat. Leave the jacket at home and zip the skirt onto a fur sash which comes with the outfit, and you have a cape, spaced at the shoulders and deep-yoked. Incidentally, this spart-and-together idea runs into no more money than would a one-piece wrap.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They toss and toss—for aches and sound sleep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are leaky and fail to do their duty in the system and sleeplessness, backache, headaches often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Doan's Pills. Used the world over. Recommended by thousands. Get Doan's Pills at a country the favorite remedy in

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful spasm of the rectum, a little warming and proper treatment should be instituted at once, for this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it costs the height of folly for any-one to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

SENATOR PITTMAN OPENS DEBATE

Asserts Existing Arms Embargo is Discrimination in Favor of Germany

Washington, Oct. 2 (AP)—Senator Key Pittman (Dem. Nevada) began a Senate debate over the United States neutrality law tonight today by asserting the existing arms embargo is "a discrimination in favor of Germany."

Speaking as chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee," Pittman offered the administration's neutrality bill now to repeal the arms embargo as "the most important legislation that has ever been proposed to Congress." He said it was designed "for the purpose of keeping us out of a European war."

After Pittman, Senator William E. Borah (Rep. Idaho), dean of the Senate and leader of forces opposed to repeal of the embargo on the sale of arms to warring nations, was scheduled to make the first address for his side of the neutrality controversy.

ARMED RAIDER

The Sea Adler of Captain Feliz Von Luckner carried out similar raids after slipping through the blockade line disguised as a Norwegian lumber schooner. She ranged far into the Pacific before she broke her back on a reef in the Society Islands.

The Clement's attacker- was be lieved by some to have been either a cruiser or a "pocket battleship." Hoovver Reuters News Agency dispatches from Durban, South Africa, told of operations by an unidentified armed raider off the east coast of South America.

May be Armed Merchant Ship

Buenos Aires, Oct. 2 (AP) — Shipping circles here speculating on the identity of the German raider which sank the British freighter Clement recalled today that at least six German merchant marinemen have left Brazilian and Argentine ports since the war began and are still unreported.

Among these was the speedy 16-618 ton liner Cap Norte which shipping men said would serve admirably as an armed raider if she secured armaments. She left more than a month ago from Recife, heavily loaded with fuel and accompanied by two German freighters, likewise carrying fuel and foodstuffs.

Carried General Cargo

New York, Oct. 2 (AP)—The British freighter Clement, sunk by an armed raider in the South Atlantic, left New York August 6 on the regular run to Brazilian ports, the 5,000-ton vessel had carried general cargo.

She carried a crew of 59 under the command of Captain C. P. F. Harris and six passengers who disembarked at Para. The line said the Clement left Para, destined last Friday for Bahia and must have been near that port when attacked.

Her cargo consisted of 20,000 cases of kerosene for Bahia and a general cargo of radio equipment, auto tires, flour, silk stocking equipment, building cement, black pepper, shock chassis, refrigerators and pumps. The cargo came from New York and Philadelphia.

The line said it had no word on the safety of the crew.

New Torpedo Technique Used in Sinking Ships

Oslo, Oct. 2 (AP)—The master of the sunken Norwegian freighter Solaas said today he believed the ship was the victim of a new torpedo technique.

The captain said no explosion was heard in what is described as a new style torpedoing of the Solaas last Thursday.

"The Solaas was stopped in high seas, preparing the Germans from coming aboard," he said. "Five engineers heard a hissing sound, then all is dark.

"The submarine disappeared and five minutes later the Solaas began sinking from holes in the engine-room and boiler room, indicating that a new device penetrated the ship's hull without an explosion."

Swedish Freighter Seized

Copenhagen, Oct. 1 (AP)—The newspaper Extrabladet in a dispatch from Stockholm said the Swedish freighter Algrifia had been seized in the Baltic Sea and taken to Kiel Germany.

W. Steen-Christensen, Director of the company which owned the Danish steamship Vendia, sunk by a submarine in the English Channel with a loss of 11 men, said today the captain "stopped promptly" for the raider but was torpedoed nevertheless.

The director said the Captain expressed the opinion the 11 seamen were not drowned but were killed by an explosion. "The weather was fine and calm and the reason for the torpedoing is still not clear," he said.

Chamberlain to Make Statement on "Peace" Offer on Tuesday

London, Oct. 2 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain will make a statement on the Russo-German "peace" offer tomorrow afternoon, it today.

He made the disclosure in reply to a query in the House of Commons by Clement Attlee, opposition leader, who asked whether the prime minister had anything to say on the German-Russian question.

"I would be glad if the House would await a statement I shall make tomorrow which I would prefer not to anticipate today," the prime minister replied.

German Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop is shown signing the Russo-German pact in Moscow which stated special spheres of influence for each in Eastern Europe and placed the threat of Russia's armed forces alongside the armed might of the Reich. SENATOR'S SON BEATEN, ROBBED

Fulford Hardy, Hamilton, and Operator of Radio Station is Victim

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 2 (CP)—Fulford Hardy, son of Senator A. C. Hardy of Brockville, was beaten and robbed by two men who entered his apartment here early Monday. The police have detained two persons in connection with the attack.

Mr. Hardy, who operates a Hamilton radio station, told police that when he answered a knock on the door of his apartment two men rushed in shouting: "This is the law".

He said they then attacked him and threw him to the floor, tying his hands and feet with a belt, a necktie and a sweater.

The men then ransacked the apartment, gathering up razors, cigarette lighters, pens and cash. They also took directions for operation of a phone service.

When the men left, Mr. Hardy struggled free of his bonds and called to police on neighboring car on adjacent James street. The soldiers called police. Two men later were taken into custody. Police said some of Mr. Hardy's property was recovered.

'Hang Washing On Siegfried Line', London Clubs Sing

London, Oct. 2 —(CP)— The catchy little ditty, "We're going to hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line" was piped up in London night clubs and music halls during the week end as the first candidate to succeed "Tipperary." Only a tune somewhat reminiscent of "Pack Up Your Troubles In Your Old Kit Bag" is needed for the chorus go like this:—

"We're going to hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line, Have you any dirty washing, mother dear?

We're going to hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line, 'Cos the washing day is here. Whether the weather may be wet or fine,

We'll just rub along without a care.

We're going to hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line, If the Siegfried Line's still there."

At each music hall the chorus was printed on a sheet hung on a clothes-line — "Hang Washing" — suitably bearing the names of Hitler and Mussolini. Both leaders and the audience riotously joined in singing the song hail a dozen times.

The song was written by Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr, both of Irish extraction.

Tipperary was the 24th anniversary of the outbreak of the Great War.

Niemoeller in Another Role

Group of ministers in New York voices surprise and sorrow over Rev. Martin Niemoeller's recent offer to return to his old post as a U-boat commander, if released from concentration camp, and pick up where he left off in the last war. There were the same gentlemen who so recently dubbed Pastor Niemoeller "the first Christian martyr of modern times" and set aside a Sunday for commemoration of his heroism. They did so too precipitately; they should have looked at the record. This record of his earlier career fully explains Niemoeller's backsliding as a martyr. For he was a pioneer and most zealous ally of Hitler and his brown Shirts. He aided in stamping out freedom in the Reich. He was complacent in the face of pogroms and the wreck of all civil liberties. He finally resisted 'em but only when his own church was the target.—R. M. Harrison in Windsor Star.

CONCERN IS FELT HITLER MAY ASK ITALY TO JOIN

In Nazi-Russian Statement at Moscow Hitler Implied Big Offensive

NEW POLAND OFFER ?

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Rome, Oct. 2 (AP)—Italian and foreign diplomats expressed growing concern today that Italy might be forced into the war if Great Britain and France turn down a peace offer by Adolf Hitler.

Official views are silent on Foreign Minister Count Ciano's visit to Berlin, but many Italians said they thought Hitler was asking Italy to support a peace proposal and is ready to enter the war in the event of rejection.

Newspapers indicated such an offer might include a proposal to create a new Poland, much smaller than the old one, and with a government similar to Slovakia, a protectorate of Germany.

Hints Frontier Not Final.

Il Messaggero published a dispatch from Berlin saying some observers there felt Hitler might accept upon by Germany and Soviet Russia as the frontier of Poland, were not necessarily final and that a new settlement might be agreed upon.

Through the Russian-German declaration in Moscow last week Hitler has implied that all of Great Britain and France do not come to terms he would unloose a big offensive of some sort, possibly from the air. In such event, it was regarded likely here that he would count upon Italy fulfilling her obligations under the Italo-German military alliance and going to Germany's assistance.

FAMOUS CARDINAL

A Great Builder

Outstanding members of the hierarchy came here in 1934 to attend ceremonies conducted in celebration of Cardinal Mundelein's 25th Episcopal Anniversary.

The Cardinal was recognized universally as a great builder. During his administration scores of new churches, schools, hospitals and hospital were constructed in the archdiocese.

Probably the most impressive of all monuments he left behind is the huge St. Mary's of the Lake Theological Seminary in suburban Mundelein. It was built at a cost estimated cost of $13,000,000, yet the Cardinal proudly termed "I could rather save the life of a child than build the greatest cathedral in the world."

Many Dignitaries Entertained

High church leaders from all parts of the world were entertained here during Cardinal Mundelein's regime, among them Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, now Pope Pius XII. A golf cell was then papal secretary of state.

Cardinal Mundelein seldom spoke publicly. In 1936, he issued only a broadcast statement that Father Charles E. Coughlin "had the right to express his personal views on current events, but he is not authorized to speak for the Catholic church, nor does he represent the doctrine or sentiments of the church."

Made Many Pilgrimages

He made many pilgrimages to Rome. He read a Mass there in 1938 celebrating the 25th reunion of Mother Cabrini, a Chicago nun, who has been nominated for canonhood for her work in establishing hospitals in America.

George Mundelein was born July 2, 1872, in the Bowery district of New York City. He was the son of nine children. He was only 17 when he was graduated from Manhattan College. He later pursued his studies at St. Vincents Seminary at Beatty, Pa., and in Rome, where he was ordained.

In 1917 he became chancellor of the Brooklyn diocese. He was the youngest member of the Catholic hierarchy in the United States when he was named auxiliary Bishop of Brooklyn in 1909. His educational and charitable organizations in that diocese won him a reputation among prelates that, when Archbishop James Edward Quigley died in 1915, Mundelein was chosen to succeed him.

He was elevated to the Cardinalate March 24, 1924.

Says Blunt Instrument May Have Caused Death

Brampton, Ont., Oct. 2—(CP) Dr. W. L. Robinson, testifying at a preliminary hearing of William Harrison, said a post mortem which charge today, said James Cation died of brain injuries, probably the result of multiple and severe blows to the head.

Yarranton, Superintendent of the Peel-Halton Hou:: of Refuge, Cheltenham, are not guilty as causing the death of the 62-year-old Cation, inmate of the institution.

"Most likely there were a series of blows. One blow would not produce such an injury," added the witness.

Cation died last Sept. 15.

SCHEME TO END "SPEED TRAPS"

Report Asks Province to Assume Control of Communities of Less Than 10,000

Toronto, Oct. 2 (CP)—To bring an end to small town "speed traps" Hugh R. Polson, assistant inspector of legal offices, has recommended to Attorney-General Gordon Conant that provincial officers should assume responsibility for traffic regulation through communities of less than 10,000 population, it was learned.

He also suggested that in all such municipalities including all townships, the province should collect fines imposed for infractions of the Highway Traffic Act exclusive of parking. He believes this would end municipal enforcement purely for the sake of the revenue to be derived.

Mr. Polson's report was the result of an investigation into charges that "speed traps" were being operated in Aurora. Commenting on the report, Mr. Conant said he saw considerable merit in the Polson recommendations and promises a review of the same ruling. "No departure from this order will be tolerated. There must be no political or personal bias of any kind," Mr. Rogers said.

Statement Awaited.

Following the outbreak of war instructions were sent to all district commands of the R.C.M.P. and police throughout Canada that political preference would have no place in expenditures arising from the mobilization and training of the Canadian forces, and that no political persons were to be equally eligible for contracts for supplies.

These instructions are being confirmed and amplified. They will be in effect throughout the war period. This is in strict accord with the pledge given by the prime minister in parliament that political preference or personal favoritism would not be tolerated in Canada's war effort.

Apart from small emergency expenditures made by district officers for the purchase of war equipment all supplies will be made by the War Supply Board. The Defence Purchasing Board is followed and the War Supply Board will follow the same principle of excluding political or personal preferences from the letting of construction contracts or for the purchase of supplies. All qualified firms will be invited to bid on the same basis of eligibility. The object will be to ensure the maximum economy and efficiency in the purchase of war materials.

A similar rule will govern contracts let on the authority of the Minister of National Defence will make no personal recommendations on these matters. They will be determined by the proper service authorities on the basis of merit. Enlisted men are entitled to feel that merit will open a clear path of promotion to commissioned ranks. There must be no political or personal bias of any kind," Mr. Rogers said.

TORONTO STOCKS

Lack of action featured Toronto Exchange today. At noon only 85,000 shares had changed hands. The market evidently took its cue from New York where similar action was displayed.

Early values were the day's most impressive with further new highs being established by Canadian Pacific Railway, both Canada Steamships issues, Bell Telephone, Steel of Can. and Hollinger 12¾.

Dealings were featureless. Toronto Elevators was around their lowest.

Traders did most business in the industrials and oils, neglecting golds and metals. Home was active, also of the western oils and after selling up to 2.65 at noon, Calgary and Edmonton and Calmont held their own.

Preston East Dome, most active of an extremely dull gold list, was up a few cents.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 2.—(AP)—Profit cashing appeared in the stock market today and leaders fell behind fractions to around 3 points.

Stocks prominent in investment most of the session included U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Standard Oil, Ohio, Great Northern, Chesapeake and Ohio, Westinghouse Air Brake, Pullman, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Radio Corporation and J. C. Penney.

Chipped away fractions in the Canadian division were C.P.R., Dome, Noranda, Walker and Lake Shore. Dominion 4s dropped around a point in the bond market.

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 2—(CP) — Mrs. Agnes Sharpe, who was one of those who escaped death on the Liner Athenia, has resigned her seat on Hamilton City Council, James Berry, City Clerk, was informed today.

Mrs. Sharpe and her husband were landed up after the liner sank and taken back to England. In her letter to the City Clerk she stated she might not return to Canada and was resigning as Alderman.

Mrs. Sharpe's career in the council has been marked by much controversy as she refused to take the Oath of Allegiance owing to her pacifist convictions. After the outbreak of hostilities the council granted her leave of absence in order that she should not lose her salary by default.

War-time Co-operation Will be Discussed

Ottawa, Oct. 2 (CP)—War-time co-operation between the Dominion government and the Ontario government will be discussed when Premier Hepburn meets the federal cabinet Tuesday in Prime Minister Mackenzie King's office, it was learned today.

Mr. Hepburn will be accompanied by Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews, Lieut. Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and several Ontario members of the Liberal and Conservative parties in the legislature.

The province has the task of protecting power plants and other key industries, it is felt, and this matter will be reviewed. Taxation matters might also be discussed, but the Dominion ministers, it is learned, have not indicated that they want to discuss subjects Mr. Hepburn wishes particularly to consider but assume the entire field of co-operation will lie under review.

No decision has been reached whether the outcome of the conference will be made public. The cabinet did not meet today.

Says Blunt Instrument May Have Caused Death

Brampton, Ont., Oct. 2—(CP) — Dr. W. L. Robinson, testifying at a preliminary hearing into William Farrington's murder, in magistrate's court today, said James Cation died of brain injuries, probably the result of multiple and severe blows to the head.

Yarranton, Superintendent of the Peel-Halton Hosp.: of Refuge, pleaded not guilty to a charge of death of the 63-year-old Cation, labor camp cook in Caledon.

Dr. Robinson, a Toronto pathologist, said a purple bruise which covered the left side of Cation's face, his nose and part of the neck, was probably produced by a blunt object.

"Most likely there were a series of blows. One blow would not produce such an injury," added the witness.

Cation died last Sept. 15.

CONCERN IS FELT HITLER MAY ASK ITALY TO JOIN

In Nazi-Russian Statement at Moscow Hitler Implied Big Offensive

NEW POLAND OFFER ?

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Rome, Oct. 2 (AP)—Italian and foreign diplomats expressed growing concern today that Italy might be forced into the war if Great Britain and France turn down a peace offer by Adolf Hitler.

Officials were silent on Foreign Minister Count Ciano's visit to Berlin, but many Italians said they thought Hitler was asking Italy to participate in a peace program and ready to enter the war in the event of its rejection.

Newspapers indicated such an offer might include a proposal to create a new Poland, much smaller than the old one, and with a government similar to Slovakia, a protectorate of Germany.

Hints Frontier Not Final.

Il Messaggero published a dispatch from Berlin saying some observers there felt the frontiers agreed upon by Germany and Soviet Russia in the new Russo-German pact "are not necessarily final and that a new set-up might be agreed upon."

Through the Russian-German declaration in Moscow last week Hitler has implied that if Great Britain and France do not come to terms he would consider his obligations at some sort, possibly from the air. In such event, it was regarded likely here that he would call upon Japan in fulfilling her obligations under the Russian-German anti-Comintern pact and going to Germany's assistance.

FAMOUS CARDINAL

A Great Builder

Outstanding members of the hierarchy came here in 1934 to attend ceremonies conducted in celebration of the cardinal Mundelein's 25th. Episcopal Anniversary.

The Cardinal was recognized universally as a great builder. During his administration scores of new churches, schools, orphanages and hospital were constructed in the archdiocese.

Probably the most impressive of all monuments in his behind is the huge St. Mary's of the Lake Theological Seminary in suburban Mundelein. It was built at a cost estimated cost of $13,000,000, yet the cardinal referred to it modestly as rather save the life of a child than build the greatest cathedral in the world."

Many Dignitaries Entertained

High church leaders from all parts of the world were entertained here during Cardinal Mundelein's regime, among them Eugenio Cardinal Pacelli, now Pope Pius XII. Pacelli was then papal secretary of state.

Cardinal Mundelein seldom spoke publicly. His last public address in a broadcast statement that Father Charles E. Coughlin "had the right to express his personal views on current events, but he is not authorized to speak for the Catholic church, nor does he represent the doctrine or sentiments of the church."

Made Many Pilgrimages

He made many pilgrimages to Rome. He read a Mass there in 1936 celebrating the 300th anniversary of Mother Cabrini, a Chicago nun, who has been canonized for Catholhood for her work in establishing hospitals in Chicago.

George Mundelein was born July 7, 1872, in the Bowery district of 2, New York City. He was one of nine children. He was only 17 when he was graduated from Manhattan College. He later pursued his studies at St. Joseph's Seminary at Beatty, Pa., and in Rome, where he was ordained.

Toronto, Oct. 2 (CP)—All woollen mills in Canada will be allowed for the next three months will be on a five-per-cent profit basis, according to an announcement made by the government wool administrator.

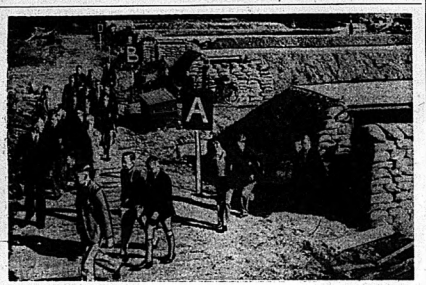
THE FLAME PRECEDED THE SWORD

Gas mask slung from his shoulder, Sir Harold Brown, who was recently appointed director-general of munitions production for Great Britain, is shown leaving his London home on the way to work. Sir Harold heads the munitions supply council of ten, duty of which is to boost production of the sinews of war for Britain.

Refusal of the Hungarian government to release Francis Szalasi, ABOVE, leader of Hungary's Nazi party, caused the resignation of forty Nazi deputies from the Hungarian parliament. Szalasi is serving a three-year prison term for sedition. Some observers see in the resignations the beginning of the end of parliamentary government in Hungary.

A village fire brigade "somewhere in Poland" is shown making a gallant but futile effort to fight a blaze caused by German incendiary bombs dropped during an air raid. Notice the lack of proper equipment, the water being drawn from the horse-drawn tank carts. Each fireman wears a gas mask slung across his shoulder.



Pupils are shown leaving the air raid precautions trenches and dug-outs in the playground of Southall Technical school after the daily air raid drill on the reopening of school. Southall is the first school to reopen since the start of the war. Trenches and shelters are being constructed in all school playgrounds throughout England. Letters mark the shelters to which certain classes are assigned in the event of a raid.

Comfort and ease of movement is the keynote of the new uniform which will be issued to the Canadian Active Service force. Consisting of a roomy wide-sleeved blouse and a pair of loose-fitting trousers, the new uniform somewhat resembles a ski suit. The headgear can be adjusted to meet various weather conditions.

"40 Hommes, 8 chevaux" is again the fashionable mode of transportation for British Tommies as they move up to their positions in the front line "somewhere in France". This picture was transmitted by Phonephoto from New York.

Arriving in France to add their French ally, British Tommies are shown, in this picture, passed by the British and French censors, disembarking from a British troopship at some unnamed French port. The exact number of British troops now in France has not been divulged by the British or French governments but it has been announced that their numbers far exceed those of the early days of the last war.

The modern mechanized army has not by any means eliminated the foot-soldier, and the bayonet is still an important war weapon.

These pictures of British Tommies brushing up on their bayonet technique were taken at a training camp of the British army and passed by the British censor.

The product of service which you find advertised so appealingly in your daily newspaper must, like Caesar's wife, be above suspicion.

For the shortcomings of unworthy merchandise, which silence might have safely concealed, are always rapidly revealed by the spotlight of publicity. And it is by this token that advertising proves so great a public boon. It is, indeed, the true searchlight of selection.

Il Duce Probably Asked to Intercede After Ciano's Visit

Offer of Peace Likely to be Based on German-Soviet Partition of Poland Observers Predict

Call for Italian Help by Germany Not Likely to Come Until Aid Actually Needed — At "Decisive Point"

Rome, Oct. 3 (AP)—Foreign Minister Count Galeazzo Ciano returned today from talks with Adolf Hitler, bearing word which may be a factor in Russo-German attempts to end the war with Poland divided between them.

The Foreign Minister arrived by train at 10.30 a.m. (4.30 a.m., EST)—20 minutes after Il Duce, Italian Cabinet convened under the presidency of Premier Mussolini.

The consensus among foreign observers and Italian sources was that Ciano probably brought a proposal from Mussolini's Axis partner that Duce intercede with Great Britain and France for acceptance of Hitler's offer of peace based on the German-Soviet Russian partition of Poland.

Told to Keep Silent

Italians have been told not to "disturb the peace" or to keep their silence until Mussolini enlightens them. The morning papers were full of Ciano's arrival from other nations, but first editions contained little about Italy's intentions.

Italians, eager to know whether Germany had demanded Italy immediately fulfill her military pledge as Axis partner if Germany, received no hint from published accounts of Ciano's weekend visit to Berlin.

About all they knew was that he went, talked and returned—that they drew some tentative conclusions from the fact that no new military measures had been announced.

SWEDEN STUDIES CONVOYS TO SAVE SEA COMMERCE

Struggles to Maintain Trade and Still Preserve Neutrality

SPIES INFEST SWEDEN

By LYNN HEINZERLING

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Oct. 3 (AP)—Sweden strives desperately to continue her sea commerce and at the same time maintain her precarious neutrality.

As Nazi sailors tightened their grip on the Baltic, apprehensive Swedish officials studied convoy systems of the last war. In those days, Sweden escorted her ships to Norway, where Great Britain took over the duties.

Consideration was given the possibility of shipping by rail to Gothenburg, on the Kattegat, an arm of the North Sea and completely avoiding the Baltic Sea lanes.

The admiralty has ordered all Swedish vessels not to venture into the open seas, but to follow coastal waters. Ships bound for the North Sea ports, which also are open, convoys off the western coast of Norway.

Interference With Ships.

The order followed reports yesterday of German seizure of eight Swedish ships and interference with a ninth inside Swedish territorial waters. Five Swedish ships already have been sunk.

German warships have been particularly active since Sunday between the Swedish Islands of Oels and Gotland, a course followed by

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiesen

Science Service Meteorologist

Waterloo and the weather! The classic example of weather as an important factor in battles is Waterloo. On the night of June 17-18, 1815, there was a rain which made the ground wet. This rain delayed Napoleon's attack from 6.00 a.m. to 11.30 a.m. because of his inability to manoeuvre artillery over wet ground. This delay was just enough to enable Blucher with his Prussian troops to join Wellington. While there were other factors in the loss of Waterloo to Napoleon, there is no doubt of the great importance a little rain made to the history of the battle.

There need be no fear of over production. There can be no such thing as over production if you measure production according to the needs of the earth's peoples".

Allies Can Control Seas Until Their Enemies Are Exhausted

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—Herbert Hoover expressed the belief in an interview published here today that the defeat of Great Britain and France is impossible.

"If one surveys the whole front with land, air and economic resources—I am convinced the allies can defend their empire," the former President said. "The end may be victory for them. At worst it will be stalemate. I do not see any possibility that it can be defeated."

The interview with Roy W. Howard, publisher in New York City Telegram, of which Howard is editor, was based on an expression that "what the idea is spreading rapidly in certain sections of this country that France and England are facing defeat and that in order to avoid catastrophe they should sue for peace terms in the United States must sooner or later enter the European War."

Hoover, who in the last war, was head of the Belgian Relief Commission, said:—

MAKE NO TERMS WITH HITLER, SAYS ARCHBISHOP

When War Ends Terms of Peace Should be Drawn Up by Congress of Nations, Says Cleric

NAZIS UNTRUSTWORTHY

London, October 3 — (CP) — In a broadcast address last night, the Archbishop of York asserted "we can make no terms with Herr Hitler or his colleagues because Hitherto they have shown no untrustworthy.

"Any country which we make with an honorable German government should be arrived at in such a way that it will be by no means the kind of advantage for ourselves and the humiliation of the German people.

"Let us determine and declare that when the night so utterly terms of peace shall be drawn up in a free congress of nations in which Germany, freed from Nazi tyranis, shall take her place among the nations of Europe, and that also the Czechs and Poles shall have their constitutions."

London, October 3 — (CP) — Mr. Chamberlain's speech shared attention with the expected arrival of a Turkish military mission, which the Information Ministry said would "discuss military matters in the common interest to Great Britain and Turkey."

Ford Believes World Disarmament Will Come Out of Present Conflict

Detroit, Oct. 3. —(AP)— Henry Ford said today he believed world disarmament would come out of the present conflict.

Ford, who believes there can be no lasting prosperity based upon reduced production, predicted a growing return to the land.

"Land usually follows every war", he said in an interview. "There will come back from war to find there are no jobs. Naturally they turn to the soil.

a use for everything you can produce from the soil", and added:

"Some day I'm going to make an automobile out of soybeans".

Ford reiterated his views of the failure of the gold standard in solving any economic problem and indicated he had given much study to the events that led up to the present situation in Europe.

"The people of Europe have been regimented so long and so severely that they have-pressed fertile soil for the seeds of the war makers—the small group of individuals who profit financially from war," he said.

"The way in Europe is that those was of it—is over", Ford said, "and chaos remains. It is a chaos out of which will come world disarmament a thing that every honest thinking person earnestly desires".

Anglo-Franco-Turkish Pact Already Signed

London, Oct. 3 (CP)—Havas News Agency reported last night it learned in reliable quarters that an Anglo-Franco-Turkish mutual assistance pact was initialled at Angora, capital of Turkey, late last week.

Havas added that the accord will come into play in case the war should be extended to the Mediterranean. It is seen in diplomatic circles as a rebuttal to Nazi assertions that the democracies' relation with Turkey would be weakened by the Soviet-German pact.

Moscow, Oct. 3—(AP)—Information observers keyed to the present swift pace of Kremlin diplomacy, speculated today as Soviet Russia might seek deals with Lithuania and Finland as next steps in strengthening her position in the Baltic.

Unofficial reports said the Lithuanian Foreign Minister would be summoned to Moscow as soon as conversations with Foreign Minister William Munters of Latvia, began last night, are concluded.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Naval warfare entered a new phase yesterday as the first sinking of a British merchant ship by an enemy surface vessel was reported. Until the Clement was attacked, German naval activity on the high seas was confined to submarines. It is not known yet whether the Clement was a victim of a raider, cruiser, a pocket battleship or an armed merchantman.

The attack occurred on the first few months of the last war, when German warships led the Royal Navy in world-wide search for them and all those on the sea when war broke out were caught and destroyed. Meanwhile they inflicted heavy losses on British shipping, and their hunt provided some of the most thrilling episodes of the war.

Then, however, surface craft operated before the submarine had proved its effectiveness, and before the German submarine fleet assumed its maximum strength. Submarine warfare was a Germany's second attempt to strike at the Allies on the sea. Now a German surface raider has appeared in an apparent lull in submarine activity.

Ships Present Problem

Co-ordinated action between submarines and surface vessels on the high seas might present a new problem, and it might be another German attempt to lessen British control of the seas. While it is doubtful if any considerable number of German warships may be at large on the seas, there may have been quite a few German merchant ships abroad capable of being transformed into armed raiders.

In the first few months of the first Great War, the loss inflicted by armed merchantmen on Allied shipping was negligible, but cruisers such as the Emden, which terrorized shipping in the Indian Ocean until destroyed by the Australian navy, accounted for many losses.

FRENCH TROOPS 'DIGGING IN' TO RESIST DRIVE

Drive Expected With Fading of Hitler's "Peace Offensive"

"GREAT ACTIVITY"

Patrols on Both Sides Quite Active During Night Says Communique

By JOHN MARTIN

(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Oct. 3 (AP)—Semi-official sources reported today that French engineering units were digging in on German soil to resist a land and air drive expected to come to the fading of Adolf Hitler's "peace offensive."

French sources estimated they held about 150 square miles of German territory containing about 65 villages.

"The engineers, working against time and under the constant threat of German artillery, particularly in the Saar Valley sector, were said to be "digging in" their own use captured German fortifications on the fringe of the Siegfried line.

The Saar as French patrols obtained strategic points the engineers moved up and started digging in against the possibility that one day they might have to defend themselves against a counter-offensive.

Wildly Cheering House Told Great Britain and France Will Not Be Threatened By Hints To Abandon the Purpose Set

Chamberlain Says Both Countries Determined Rule of Violence Shall Cease and Pledges of Governments be Kept

5TH PROGRESS REPORT

Prime Minister States He Has Seen Nothing That Would Lead Country to Modify Attitude or Change System Being Followed

By J. F. SANDERSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 3 (CP Cable)—British stands ready to examine any peace proposals Adolf Hitler makes but "no mere assurances from the present German government could be accepted," Prime Minister Chamberlain announced in the House of Commons today.

He assured the House the government would not treat lightly or with undue haste any peace proposals of specific detailed character.

Britain and France, the prime minister told a wildly cheering House, will not be threatened by vague hints of collaboration by Germany and Russia to abandon the purpose for which we have entered upon this struggle".

"No mere assurances from the present German government could be accepted by us," Mr. Chamberlain declared. "For that government have too often proved in the past that their undertakings are worthless and that often them that they should be broken."

"If, therefore, proposals are made, we shall certainly examine them and we shall test them in the light of what I have just said. Nobody desires the war to continue for an unnecessary day, but the overwhelming majority in this country and, I am satisfied, also in France, are animated by the firm belief that rule of violence shall cease and that the word of governments, once pledged, must henceforth be kept."

300 ARE HELD IN THREE CAMPS

Official Announcement is Made at Ottawa as to Internment Camps

Ottawa, Oct. 3 (CP)—Approximately 300 persons are now interned in three Canadian internment camps in Quebec, Ontario and Alberta, it was announced officially from the Prime Minister's office here today.

Prior to detention, all facts in the case were reviewed by Minister of Justice with the assistance of an advisory committee, the announcement said.

Generally speaking, those detained will be interned on the ground that they acted in a manner prejudicial to public safety.

Section 21 of the Defence of Canada Regulations empowers the Minister of Justice to detain any person if satisfied that detention is necessary to prevent any particular person from acting in any manner prejudicial to the public safety or the safety of the State."

Peace Move by Italy Unlikely, Say Informed Italian Quarters

Rome, Oct. 3—(AP)—Well-informed Italian quarters said today that it was unlikely that Premier Mussolini or Count Galeazzo Ciano's conversations with Adolf Hitler would lead to any immediate peace move on Italy's part.

They said the Italian Government would not lend itself to a futile gesture which promised no success under present conditions.

In Italian quarters the next move was expected to come from Hitler.

An authoritative source said Italy would still seek to limit the war by pursuing peace means while watching for a practicable opportunity to promote peace. This source, however, also said, was based on the conviction that in a prolonged war the most likely winner would be Bolshevism.

In Fight to Finish Impressions Gained By Correspondents

By HENRY CASSIDY

Associated Press Staff Writer

With the French Army on the Western Front, Oct. 3 (AP)—Under front line shellfire I have just seen French forces attacking in the Saar Basin of Germany.

I also entered captured German ground with advance troops in the Warndt Forest, west of Saarbrucken, and went through subterranean galleries of France's Maginot line on the first authorized trip of accredited war correspondents to the Western front.

Everywhere the impression that French officers and troops gave was that they were carrying on the fight to the finish and that while they were not making any very extensive territorial gains they were taking positions of high strategic importance.

The war on the western front thus far is a cautious sparring match with the French doing the feinting.

There have been no big battles. The troops are not even in trenches. They are skirmishing in forests and ravaged villages.

Serious Business

But despite the mildness of the action as compared with the gigantic battles of the last war, this is serious business.

From a front-line observation post, with Brighton and German shells screaming overhead, I saw a French battery scores-e direct hit on the heights of Berus just west of Saarbrucken which constitute the present objective of French attacks.

PRIME MINISTER, ONTARIO PREMIER MEET AT OTTAWA

AVOID OVERLAPPING

Ottawa, Oct. 3 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Dominion cabinet today conferred for 2½ hours with Premier Hepburn of Ontario and three other Ontario spokesmen.

The estrangement between the Prime Minister and Mr. Hepburn apparently was forgotten as the two groups discussed the most effective means of governmental co-operation in the national war effort.

"I can't imagine any conference being more helpful," said Mr. King at the meeting's close. Premier Hepburn, at his side, nodded assent.

The Prime Minister expressed his "deep gratitude" to Mr. Hepburn, Lieutenant-Governor Albert Matthews, Lieut.-Col. George Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, and Provincial Comptroller Chester Walsh, who came to Ottawa and conferring as they had done.

The conference studied methods of co-operation and the avoiding of overlapping in war effort," Mr. Hepburn's office said. "It studied the steps which would be most effective in prosecuting our war effort."

A number of "concrete matters" would be discussed subsequently between the proper Dominion and Provincial officials, he added.

It was later learned that some of these unnamed matters are to be discussed later today by the Ontario representatives with Defence Minister Rogers. It is reported that the supervision and financing of several Ontario regiments may be included in that discussion.

Highlights of Chamberlain's Address

London, Oct. 3 (CP)—Following are the highlights in Prime Minister Chamberlain's speech to the House of Commons today in which he discussed the results of the visit to Moscow of the German foreign minister and delivered his fifth progress report on the war.

"I see nothing in what has happened that should lead this country to modify the attitude which it has felt it right to take."

"No agreement between Germany and Russia on the subsequent partition of Poland between them has, of course, changed the position in Poland but it by no means follows that the arrangement will conduce to the ultimate advantage of Germany and still less should it affect the aims of his Majesty's government."

"There is nothing in that agreement that should cause us to do anything other than what we are doing now—mobilizing all the resources of the British Empire for the British Empire for the effective prosecution of the war."

"The reason for which this country entered into the war has been frequently proclaimed. It was to put an end to the successive acts of aggression which have menaced not the freedom and the very security of all the nations of Europe."

"No threat would ever induce this country or France to abandon the purpose for which we have entered this struggle."

"The responsibility for the war rests upon those who have conceived and carried out this policy of successive oppression and it can neither be evaded nor excused. I would add one thing more: No mere assurances from the present German government could be accepted by us."

REWARD POSTED FOR WHEREABOUTS OF MISSING BOY

Ontario Provincial Police today announced that a reward had been posted for information leading to the locating of 13-year-old George Connor of Toronto who has been missing from his Toronto home since early in August.

Inspector Frank Gardiner today stated that the Provincial Police were also seeking the whereabouts of 36-year-old Arthur N. Armstrong, with whom young Connor is believed to have left home over a month ago. Provincial Police have preferred a charge of abduction against Armstrong, who they are also seeking. Inspector Gardiner stated that a Dominion-wide warrant had been issued by Toronto police for information which would lead to the location of young Connor.

George Connor is 13 years of age, stands 4 feet 8 inches tall and he weighs 85 pounds, while Armstrong is 36 years of age, stands 6 feet tall and is tattooed on the right forearm.

MONEY IS TAKEN FROM BOY'S PURSE

Said to have taken $4.75 from a purse he carried home by a five-year-old boy, three teen-aged Belleville girls were apprehended on Front street yesterday afternoon and escorted to the police station where they admitted taking the money.

The three girls are said to have stolen the money from five-year-old Bobby Stewart, 32 Frank street.

The boy was sent to a nearby grocery store by his mother to make a small purchase and was given the $5 bill. The purchase was made and Bobby was returning to his home. About a block away from home he was stopped and the money was taken from him, he said.

Plainclothesman Fred Jard apprehended the girls as they were treating themselves to sodas at a local store. He said they had spent $1.15 and had $3.60 in their possession.

U.S. TOURISTS HAVE FINE FISHING IN TRENT

All the good fishing does not occur during the warm summer months in the vacation spots of this district. Mr. and Mrs. Ellis and Mrs. William Hadfield, of Kenmead, Pennsylvania, have been guests in the district for the past two weeks.

With their host, noted Trent Ni-er guide, in the lead, they took their dinghy out and explored the haunts of the muskie and pickerel of the Trent River over the week end. The result: two muskies, weighing twelve pounds each, nine bass, the biggest tipping the scales at a little below six pounds, and one pickerel which weighed seven pounds; all of which is not a bad day's fishing in any man's country. Mr. and Mrs. Hadfield left for their home yesterday.

NO FROST DAMAGE REPORTED HERE

"Three while frosts and then comes rain," the oldtimer at the city market stated this morning. "There was a heavy white frost yesterday and another one today, that means rain, and more Johnnydays", he added.

Vendors at the city market today reported that heavy frosts had occurred north of Marmora, leaving a trail of blackened vines and foliage in their wake.

Farmers and other residents of the immediate district however, report that no damaging frosts have arrived as yet, although yesterday and today thermometers hovered dangerously near the freezing point.

STIRLING

NEW POST OFFICE AT STIRLING IS OPENED MONDAY

Village's Most Attractive Building Equipped With Latest Equipment

SORTING ROOMS

Stirling, Oct. 3—(Special)—One of the finest additions to the village of Stirling is the new Post Office building recently completed and opened for public service on Monday morning, Oct. 2nd. Situated on the southwest corner at the intersection of Highway No. 14 and Charlotte St., it is regarded as the village's most attractive office building with all the latest equipment to meet the needs of serving the people of the district in the fastest and most efficient manner. The interior of the building houses storerooms, sortation rooms for use by the rural mail couriers as they prepare the routes distribution. These rooms are in the basement with a central doorway leading to a gravel driveway at the rear of the building. Couriers therefore can now arrange their loads without congesting. Sorting cases and paper sorting racks will be added to the equipment of this department within a few days.

Spacious and Modern Office

Under the supervision of A. J. Thomson, architect, of Belleville, the building was erected and completed by the Sullivan Construction Co. of Arnprior, Ontario. Clerical boxes for outgoing mail letters, parcels and circular matter are so designed to convey all such matter to a central point from which the mail is gathered several times during the day for cancellation and dispatch. The three windows in the office are arranged to meet the needs of stamp sales, general delivery, postal delivery and dispatch and general information regarding postal regulations. The interior decorations follow a color scheme of velvetone cream and leather brown, featuring the natural finish of birch and maple trim and floors.

The final transfer of office equipment from the old Front St. office to the new location was made on Saturday evening by Postmaster F. T. Stulin, assisted by the district postal inspector of the Peterboro Post Office Department and Mr. McLeaming, who has been appointed caretaker of the new building. For the past thirty-seven years the post office has been located in the McMeekin Building, to which it was moved when the building was first erected.

Modern Equipment

The new building contains a modern heating plant of the very latest type. Sortation cases for outgoing distribution and local sortation. Post box lockers have easy access to post boxes immediately upon entering the building and the general outlay makes for more efficient public service. Mary Hulin has been officially appointed as assistant to Postmaster Hulin, and when the system and routine is established the work will be accomplished with greater ease. Prior to the appointment of Mr. Stulin as Post Master the mails were handled locally for years by Postmistress, Mary Judd, who occupied the position for half a century.

DEMOCRACY IS SUBJECT OF TALK

Based on Liberty and Equal Right of Man to Personal Happiness

"Democracy is more than a system of government, it is a way of life," assured Nelson McEwen, National Boys' Work Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. in addressing the Belleville Y's Men's Club last evening at the "Y". In choosing "Democracy" for his theme, Mr. McEwen linked the subject with boys' work in the "Y", of which he is paramountly interested throughout Canada.

"Democracy means the rule of the people. It has respect for the minority and obeyed its root in the caveman, who learned to strike back for his very existence.

"Democracy is based on liberty and the equal right of man to personal happiness. True enough it sometimes means a life of giving, but that is because it implies a value, that we as men appreciate.

"However, I do feel we must give others a chance to live democratically. Let them enjoy democracy and I know of no better foundation for its teachings than in our own boys' work of the Y.M.C.A." added Mr. McEwen as he concluded by stating his listeners that they must do their part towards assisting in the preservation of democracy now.

In his capacity secretary of the Boys' Work of the Y.M.C.A. in Canada, Mr. McEwen addressed the Belleville Rotary Club yesterday and will talk to the Kiwanis Club on "Boys' Work" during his stay in Belleville. He was introduced by J. E. Shortt, secretary of the Belleville Y's Men's Club and a member of the club for his message by President Harold Vaughan. William Connor, well known Belleville musician, rendered two well-received piano solos during the entertainment recess.

Imperial Oil's Entertainers Appreciated By Large Crowd

Every Member of Cast an Artist and There Are No Dull Moments

HELD AT COLLEGIATE

A show with sheer artistry, tuneful melodies, hilarious comedy, graceful dancing, and the clever versatility of every member of the cast, the "Three-Star Entertainers", Imperial Oil's popularity on the boards of theatres and parlors of Canada, practically "brought down the house" at the Belleville Collegiate Institute last night.

The spacious auditorium of the institution was crowded to capacity. Long before the theme song of the troupe, rang out, large crowds were turned away from the doors. Popularity of the show, broadcast earlier in the day, was responsible for a record attendance.

From the time Roy (Personality) Barry, genial and clever master-of-ceremonies stepped in front of the footlights after being welcomed by His Worship Mayor Jamieson Bowe, until the "curtain" for the National Anthem rang through the crowded auditorium, every concert violinist, to the hilarious capers of the entire troupe in the "hill-billy" number that was called back three times, proved itself an admirable entertainer.

Providing the musical background was a five-piece orchestra whose capabilities were also brought well-merited acclaim. Ted Thompson, versatile pianist and mirth-provoking comedian, was the favorite with the large crowd. Betty Bonnie, dancing diva, clever dancer and comedienne, shone in several specialty impersonation of the "hill-billy gal" band leader's daughter, outstanding.

Clever Artists

Florence Court, tap and toe dancer, is an artiste of no mean ability. Fred Lambert, with "Oscar" contortions of facial features, cleverly proved himself a clever young man with ventriloquist imitations and miracles on mouth-organs. Charlie Murray, a silver-voiced tenor, caught the spirit of the feminine part of the audience with splendid renditions of popular ballads. Roy Barry, master-of-ceremonies, likewise proved his stage ability, and by connection with a sense of humor, that immediately won him the favor of his audience.

Several skits interspersed the musical numbers, outstanding being the singing of "Dad McGrew" and a comic recitation by Barry with humorous sound effects by the orchestra.

Another humorous skit, that evoked roars of laughter from the audience, was the satire on ballet dancing given by male members of the troupe. It should have been dubbed "The Parade of the Gladiators" for the costumes that reminded one of the ancient Romans after a week-end with Bacchus were excruciatingly funny as were the dancing antics of the "Gladiators" themselves.

Other members of the cast include Lee Martin, orchestra leader, and trumpet virtuoso, who has appeared with Jack Benny, Eddie Canter, Sophie Tucker, and other stage and screen stars; Jack Wright, clever pianist, and Wm. Driver, saxophonist and clarinetist.

Entire Program Good

The entire program is of extremely high type, one that is full of entertainment, music and mirth and was thoroughly deserving of the loud acclaim given each number by the large, appreciative audience.

The three-star Entertainers are travelling across Canada on a good will tour for the Imperial Oil Company. Mr. Barry stated last night that this show is the summer counterpart of the Maple Leaf Hockey broadcasts, and is given free grain by local Imperial Oil dealers to patrons throughout the Dominion.

In addition to the show proper, the audience was entertained with musical selections given over the public address system by the band of the troupe's equipment. Members of the cast are travelling in a specially-equipped motor bus.

MRS. MORLEY MOY INJURED WHEN GUN DISCHARGES

Weapon Was Being Unloaded When Accident Occurred

CONDITION IS FAIR

Critically injured as the result of a shooting accident, Mrs. Morley Moy, twenty-seven-year old resident of Mountain View, was rushed to Belleville General Hospital early last night, suffering with severe gunshot wounds in the abdomen. Drs. Sloan and Anderson, Belleville physicians in charge, stated this morning that Mrs. Moy's condition was fair.

According to reports from the scene of the accident, Clayton Moy, youthful cousin of Morley Moy, husband of the injured woman, had returned from a duck-hunting trip, and was unloading his shotgun when the weapon exploded. The charge struck Mrs. Moy in the abdomen, inflicting severe injuries.

Mrs. Moy is a daughter-in-law of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Moy, well-known Mountain View residents.

Chungking, Oct. 3 (C.P.-Havas)—General Chiang Kai-Shek declared today that "peace can only come after fulfillment of all Chinese aims in this war of resistance." He said the Chungking government would refuse to recognize any Japanese-created government in the territory occupied by Japanese troops.

TAX ACCOUNTING MACHINE BOUGHT BY CITY COUNCIL

No Dissension as Lengthy Report Sets Out Details of Need for Same

BY-LAWS PASSED

Recommendation to Sell Some City Property Referred Back to Committee

Sale of city property and the purchase of a Tax Accounting Machine occupied the attention of the members of Council at one of the shortest sessions of the present term last night in the council chambers. In the absence of Mayor Jamieson Bore, who was busy at another city function, Ald. McLean Haig was appointed acting mayor by the members and capably filled the office.

In order to facilitate the setup now being arranged respecting the assessment and the tax bills, Ald. McLean Haig as Chairman of the Executive read a lengthy report from the committee appointed to look into this matter explaining in detail the work that will be saved and accuracy to be obtained and this report was adopted. Following this report a recommendation was submitted advising the purchase of a Tax Accounting Machine, which was unanimously passed. The report as read by Ald. Haig is as follows and speaks for itself.

Contents of Report

Interim Report No. 2
Committee on Co-ordination

Your Committee on the Co-ordination of the various City departments beg to herewith submit further interim report:

Following the recommendation contained in the last report submitted to Council your Committee has investigated different mechanical accounting equipment suggested to it for use in the Treasurer's, Clerk's and Assessor's Departments. The several kinds suggested have been thoroughly discussed with the representatives of the various companies manufacturing same.

In order to see these mechanical installations in operation and to adequately appreciate how they would fill do, it was necessary to visit the Municipal Offices in Kingston, Kitchener and Hamilton, which was done by your Committee in company with the city officials whose departments are immediately concerned.

After a thorough inspection and discussion your Committee are unanimously of the opinion that it would be in the best interests of efficiency and economy in the future-mentioned departments to immediately purchase a Tax Accounting Machine. This step has been approved by the Department of Municipal Affairs and we are glad to advise that our City officials are in thorough accord.

At the present time our assessment notices, assessment roll, tax roll and tax bills are written in long hand. The most of the information in each of these is repetition and the result is that similar information is written at first hand on four different notices or rolls respecting each piece of assessed property in the City, each year. Since there are approximately 8,000 pieces of property individually assessed in the city, this means 20,000 entries in long hand.

The Tax Accounting Machine will make it possible to write all the information which is repeated on the assessment roll and notice and the tax roll and tax demand at one operation, thereby reducing to this extent the necessary insertions from 20,000 to 8,000. Since a considerable part of this work is now done by additional help employed from time to time a saving will be effected to the city.

The Tax Accounting Machine is a combination calculating and type-writing device. Every mechanical operation is recorded and accumulated so that as the conclusion of each operation the figures may be checked both horizontally and vertically thereby reducing to a minimum the possibility of error. After tax rate is set each year by Council the Machine will be employed to calculate the total tax payable on each assessment and divide it into the number of instalments available to the tax payer.

This machine will simplify the work in our Municipal offices and modernize our operations and recommended by the Department of Municipal Affairs and is in keeping with best Municipal practice. It will reduce the possibility of error and make the work done in the various offices both more efficient and more economical. We do not anticipate that it will permit a reduction in our permanent staff but it will relieve the staff so that recommendations involving additional work which will subsequently be made by your committee and which your committee feels should be carried out may be followed without an increase in staff.

In closing may your Committee say that it is keeping in close touch with the Department of Municipal Affairs which is in complete accord with our work. Mr. A. J. B. Gray, Supervisor of the Department, will assist Belleville during the next few days to collaborate with the Committee and discuss with it changes in our present system which your Committee has under consideration. At the time the Committee will make a further report to Council. Your Committee wishes to also point out that upon enquiry, most Municipalities of a size comparable to Belleville and larger have or are installing mechanized accounting equipment.

Matter Referred Back

When a recommendation was presented to sell some city property in Foster Ward, the members after some discussion decided to refer the matter back to the committee where it will be fully discussed. Ald. Marshall, who is chairman of the special property committee, notified the council that the city has the future need land for industrial purposes in that area and as little has been done in this regard, he was of the opinion that some thought might be given to the question. Ald. Rollins said he was asked to bring in an offer for the property in writing and he had only conferred with the wishes of the council in committee. He expressed his opinion that the land in question was not in a good location for industrial purposes as other people owned land on both sides and it might be expensive to obtain the property if the occasion arose. Ald. Thompson was of the opinion, that if the land was to be sold, that the person making the offering should have it as the property would be improved under his ownership. Ald. Harvey and Ald. Allin were in favor of referring the matter back and when put to a vote this was done.

Permission Granted

The Kinsmen Club was allowed the use of Front Street to mark out a measured mile in connection with their drive for funds to assist in the work in this city. There was no dissention to the recommendation. The Council received a letter from the Minister of Agriculture, Hon. P. M. Dewan, approving the by-law limiting the time of delivery of milk in the City of Belleville and as soon as it is proclaimed the law will be in effect. Under the head of inquiries, Ald Logan asked if some criticism was not being heard from industrial firms respecting the recent assessment made and Ald. Haig explained that some had been made but in each case, when the assessment was explained to the heads of the industries, it was found they would not be paying any more taxes than under the old system. He advised the members if any other criticism was heard to notify the assessor, who could go to the industries affected and explain in detail the situation and a better feeling would prevail. Ald. Haig also explained that if any more fixed assessments were given in the future, the assessment would have to be approved by the vote of the people. Ald. Allin was in favor of the latest assessment possible commencing with good government in order that more industries would decide to locate in this city.

By-laws Passed

Some discussion followed the tabling of three by-laws for the conveyance of deeds to persons having purchased city property but the three were passed through the various stages by consent of the members. Ald. Thompson objected to the sale of a piece of property on Station Street stating that the full committee had not approved of the sale, he being a member of the committee. Ald. Rollins stated he believed he gave his verbal O.K. to at Ald. Marshall on the property. Ald. Lewis praised the work of Ald. Marshall on the committee and stated the objection was somewhat of a "comeback" but Ald. Thompson stated he was appointed Chairman of the Committee. Ald. Marshall explained he was out of the city when the committee was formed and when he returned he understood he was appointed Chairman as Ald. Thompson stated that he did not wish to hear any comments this year. "I have tried to do my work to the best interest of the city and many times have tried to reach Ald. Thompson by telephone to submit certain propositions to him but have always been unable to reach him and then I have secured the O.K. of Ald. Rollins. Ald. Rollins admitted that he had O. K.'d certain property but would state that which one I can not believed the one in question was one of the latter.

Ald. Allin moved that an embossed cast of arms of the city be purchased so that the Stationary Committee would have one for their own use and this was passed unanimously. A motion to draw a quick claim deed for a property on North Front Street was also passed. There being no further business the council adjourned.

EVENTFUL FIRST MONTH

Winston Churchill's summary of the events of the first month of the war was something so peculiarly British in its quiet presentation of facts, and so reliable and so firm-hearted. The First Lord of the Admiralty plainly told how Hitler had lost himself in world events. "It was for Hitler to say when war would begin, but it is not for him or his successors to say when it will end." Britain is determined to press the war against Germany "until decisive victory is regained." In biting words he said that the length of the war will depend upon "how long Hitler and his group of wicked men whose hands are stained with blood keep their grip upon the docile, unhappy German people."

It was a confident message he brought of British success in meeting the U-boat menace. "We have the oceans . . . We have the freely given ardent support of the 20,000,000 of British citizens in the self-governing Dominions of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa. We have the heart of moral convictions of India on our side . . . We believe we are entitled to the respect and goodwill of the world and particularly of the United States." He spoke of the resources of Canada and the new world as a decisive ultimate war factor.

He warned against too early confidence, told patriotic men and women their duty was to rise above fear and inconvenience and boredom.

V. O. N. CAMPAIGN

The Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada makes only one call a year for funds, and the present local campaign continues until October 7th. At this time of international strain when war efforts are put forth by various organizations, the V. O. N. feels that its essential duty must be carried on, the providing of competent nursing in the homes of the people in town and country throughout Canada on a basis adapted to the circumstances of the patient or family must not be relaxed at this time but rather pressed forward with renewed vigor and determination. As Lady Tweedsmuir said "essential home nursing must not be let down at this time." The home nursing is essential in times of war no less than for times of peace. The world war increased the demand for home nursing and service and of necessity arose local financial support was not lacking.

That fact and the fact that the realization of the local work of the order is so well known should lend courage to the V. O. N. organization and inspiration to the public to cooperate with donations.

'WASHING ON SIEGFRIED LINE'

The British people have a knack of introducing that humorous element into things which makes them cosmopolites. An instance is the little ditty "We're going to hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line" which is running the rounds of the night clubs. Half or more of the population can remember its "parody," which swung down the English roads to the English channel and on to France, was heard in trains and in a short time throughout the English-speaking world. It is still heard today, with "Keep the Home Fires Burning", which has pathos all its own and was never superseded throughout the World War.

Modern Britain has now taken the song of two Britishers of Irish extraction, Jimmy Kennedy and Michael Carr, to their hearts—"We're going to hang out the washing on the Siegfried Line,

Have you any dirty washing, mother dear?
'Cos the washing day is here.
Whether the weather may be wet or fine,
We'll just rub-a-dub-dub without a care,
If the Siegfried Line's still there."

The last words have a particular resemblance to the "Tipperary" line, "But my heart's right there."

The Siegfried line ditty may not be high class, it is a sort of spontaneous outburst, summing up the spirit of the people in the midst of the German menace for the second time in a quarter of a century. The fact that Teutonic mythology is recalled by the name of the German hero Siegfried would not be pleasing to the Nazis to have this figure linked up with washing, but that is what the ditty hints at—that there will be a great washing out of the dirt and crime of Nazidom when the British and French get by the line. The last line is intensely clever. The Nazi chiefs would shudder at the thought of the "Siegfried line" not "being there." But to the night clubs of London and the musical halls that possibility is already seen.

This ability of the British people to relax is always apparent.

SUDBURY, IN THE ONTARIO NICKEL BELT, MUST BE THE FASTEST GROWING COMMUNITY IN CANADA, or the North American continent for that matter—additional territory and population. Sudbury has just finished its annual assessment and claims an increase of population of 4,000 during the past year, with a total population of over 30,000. In the old days of slow but steady growth of Northern Ontario communities there was a disposition to pad the population returns to make a good showing as the livest burgs in the north, but of course, all that has passed away with the phenomenal growth of Timmins, Kirkland Lake, Rouyn, North Bay, Sudbury, et al. But gosh, all hemlock! when Bill Mason turns his Sudbury Star on the assessment returns and claims a population increase of four thousand in one year, that seems a bit of a lump to digest without olive oil or sumpin. Sudbury is the centre of the big nickel belt, with Copper Cliff the working headquarters, and depends for its prosperity mainly upon the local nickel and copper mines. Sudbury was a town of about 5,000 up to around 1914 when it started with the war to expand with increased mining development in and around Sudbury, and north and west of that community. North Bay, old-time rival of Sudbury, will never stand for such a terrific increase in population for Sudbury, and something will have to be done about it — although the fact that Bill Mason owns the North Bay Nugget as well as the Sudbury Star may have a softening effect on any North Bay objection. However, North Bay has Callander and the Quints on its front door stoop, and that's an extra population of more than one thousand a day on the average in the summer season —and Sudbury has no Quints.

FOLKS TRAVELLING UNDER ASSUMED names are generally regarded as suspicious characters by the police, but Brockville Recorder Times calls attention to the fact that the two most quoted figures in the public eye of the world today are travelling under assumed names. Says the Recorder Times: "It is a strange coincidence (but quite in accord with their characters) that the two men who are today regarded as the greatest menaces to world freedom, should be both travelling under assumed names. The dictator we know as Stalin (meaning steel) was christened Joseph Dhugoshvili, and his mother called him Soso, while the boy who became Adolph Hitler bore quite a different and less pronounceable name during his early days in Austria. .. The rank-and-file of a democratic people know them, however, by many other and far from complimentary aliases."

BELLEVILLE'S TOWN CLOCK has its off times and is even accused of being temperamental. One sidewalk observer, who is well acquainted with the face of the Town Clock through close acquaintance and frequent consultation, says that on the down trip of the minute hand three minutes are gained on account of the weight of the hand, and the same three minutes are lost on the up trip because of weight. Burdened by its weight of years and its modern temperamental vagaries Belleville Town Clock still carries on and gives reasonably good service.

Treating Mentally Disturbed Patients With Table Salt

While examining a former world's champion athlete, now a graduate, I asked him how much weight he had gained since he retired. He told me that he lots from 7 to 10 pounds but that he usually had this weight lost by noon about the following evening. That is, he picked up 10 pounds during the 24 hours.

"I am very careful not to allow myself to become dehydrated," he said, "as I need this water to protect the underlying tissues from wearing out. I use up water and some fat tissue during the bout. I feel tired and lack desire for work if I get down too fine due to lack of water in my tissues."

I have spoken before of the custom now common in many factories of supplying 25 grain tablets of table salt to their workers during the hot weather. They are to be taken free of salt with each glass of water. Salt holds 70 times its weight of water in the body tissues so anyone with its chief symptoms—tiredness and mental wanderings — is prevented.

Drs. E. M. Bowman and S. Kolnen, both of the University of Neurology and Psychiatry, Chicago, tell of their experiments with table salt by mouth or by injection into the veins in decreasing the death rate of mentally disturbed patients with mental disease.

Patients with acute and functional disturbances and alcoholic delirium were treated. This treatment with salt also shortened the period of excitement. Fever due to too much water having been lost by the body was prevented or successfully treated by this method.

Fluids were given in large quantities and the patients were given 15 grains of the hydrochloride of table salt every four hours to help the tissues hold the fluids. Results were good in all forms of disease except in those in which orange juice with a tablespoonful of sugar to the glass.

In a series of 92 cases of alcoholic delirium treated during the six months ending June 1st, with this treatment, of 37 cases only 3 died. Of twenty-two patients with dehydration— lack of water in the tissues— due to dementia praecox, persistent day dreaming, manic depression, and dementia paralytica—not severe—only one died. Treatment, 8 died, whereas in a series of 14 cases receiving the salt treatment, none died.

Warsaw

Today is the day on which, according to the Wednesday announcement of Nazi German High Command, Warsaw is to surrender. However, from other sides and sources, and in the face of silence from the heroic radio station of the doomed city, it is certainly at this writing, that the German High Command has been, with a good deal of technical argument on both sides, over-optimistic. For last week gives New York a population of approximately seven and a half millions, a reduction of two years ago for Greater London, covering but this has been a matter of government bureaus where safety is more important than speed. Warsaw, before the eight hundred thousand inhabitants.

But at the moment of writing there is no question that New York is in the lead. London has been bombed more than once, and many school children, mothers or infants and aged persons, have been evacuated to the open country, and presumably their offices have been transferred there to London. It is a reasonable guess that this has been done by the local government bureaus where safety is more important than speed. And, finally, there are the in-

Mayor Enlists As Private Croll

Mayor Dave Croll, K.C., M.P.P., Chief Magistrate of the City of Windsor, has enlisted in the Black Scot Scottish as a private.

Mayor Croll has his place in the ranks with the fighting men of Canada and the Empire Hosts.

If Mr. Croll had enlisted as a lieutenant, it would have been news. It is fast coming to the point when Mr. Croll goes in as a private soldier, seeking no favors, asking no privileges, but donning the uniform and shouldering a musket.

As Mayor of Windsor, Mr. Croll could have had a commission. He have obtained a commission, or to secure some special position in the army or in the war services of Canada.

As a Member of the Provincial Parliament, Mr. Croll could have used his office to have secured some special privilege. Indeed, as a member he is entitled from service.

But, he is content to march in the ranks. His example in that respect should help recruiting in all parts of Canada. It should be especially an urge to duty for all those who were not born in this Dominion, but who have come here and found that Canada has been a good country in which to live.

Mr. Croll was born in Moscow. He is 39 years old and came to Canada from Russia with his family, when he was a boy. He has never sought to deny the fact that he is of Russian Jewish birth. Many times he has been attacked and bitter tongues have wagged about his being Russian born and Jewish. Always he has said simply that it was his boast that he was born in Russia and he is Jewish.

Mr. Croll is married and has three little girls. In addition, he has been helping to support his brother, who lives in Windsor.

After working his way through college and becoming a lawyer, Mr. Croll began to practise law in his native city of Windsor. His rise in public life to become Mayor of Windsor and Member of the Provincial Parliament for Windsor has been rapid. He has won the confidence of the people.

Mr. Croll's loyalty to Canada and British have been disparaged and he has met the criticism.

The answer to all those charges is the fact that the Mayor has enlisted in the ranks in the Army. He is ready to go wherever he is ordered. His life is now at the service of his country. — Windsor Daily Star.

HITLER SENDS DUCE MESSAGE ON THREE POINTS

By Louis Lochner

Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 2.—(AP) —Reichsfuehrer Hitler today sent Premier Mussolini what Nazis said were the three main points of his conversations with Il Duce's son-in-law, Foreign Minister Galeazzo Ciano. These points were given authoritative

1—The possibilities in Europe, including Italy's share in what may happen.

2—Germany's conception of various spheres of interest in Eastern Europe.

3—The possibilities of giving effect to the German thesis that the war must be localized.

These sources intimated further that Hitler, in his speech before the Reichstag, some time this week, will give the world Germany's conception of the peace possibilities.

Count Ciano left Berlin today for Rome, concluding the visit he came to Germany, the Rome-Berlin axis partners since the outbreak of the war.

Clergy Take Up Pen

Alarmed by the empty churches, which Sunday after Sunday have been confronting them, the Kitchenerville Ministerial Association instituted last Sunday a "Back to-Church" day. The Canadian Statesman, Bowmanville's weekly newspaper, supported the scheme with a whole heart by turning its editorial page over to the clergy for the publication prior to the event. Others have seen editorial pages with far less general appeal to reader interest than that produced by the Bowmanville churchmen.

What does a clergyman's editorial page look like?

The leading article emphasized that a good community needed more than buildings and industries and trade; it needed safe streets, safety for life and property, impartial justice for all, a high moral standing, fine opportunities for learning and growth of character, cultural advantages within reach of the humblest. "For all these things the churches in any community are laboring. They have a right to expect you to join with them."

The second article discussed the why and wherefore of a vacant pew, finding the two main reasons:

Sunday visitors who drop in unexpectedly at 10.30 with a carload of friends eager to "eat a talk and join a hot pot luck in the kitchen."

Radio churchgoers who curl up in a big chair with a pipe and a box of smokes for seven hours between comic strips. "It does not occur to him that no part of the two dollars and a half he pays for a radio license goes to the maintenance of the church."

The third article is a careful analysis of the difficulties the rural church is facing. In these days of depopulation of farming communities, it is further hurt by the good roads and good cars newspaper, supported the scheme with a whole heart by turning its editorial page over to the clergy for the publication prior to the event. Others have seen editorial pages with far less general appeal to reader interest than that produced by the Bowmanville churchmen.

Canada's Trade

Fifteen freighters carrying wheat corn, metals, manufactured goods and other products of Canada have been escorted safely into the ports of the United Kingdom.

In The Great War, the sheet anchor of Canada's foreign trade and the preservation of the Canadian market was the protection of Navy and so it is today. Without the command of the seas immemorially held by British men o'-war, the economic and financial fabric of the Dominion would be rendered untenable under terrific strain, if not shattered.

In its peacetime and in war, the British taxpayer makes the full contribution to the upkeep of the Navy, which, it is true, is life or death to Britain, but which costs not much less so for the Dominions and outlying parts of the Empire. Since the first traditions of naval history are being honored by the men who are doing their duty on the high seas and the intrepid, gallant merchant marine, almost unrestricted. Germans have no love for the British convoy system and the truth is the truth in the last statement that Nazi warfare by submarines right now is in about the same parlous condition as it was in the first months of the Great War in 1918.

The importance of the success of the British convoy system under former government in Britain, but the deficiency has been made good. The navy was without a shipyard navy, the only possible instrument of defence and protection for the British people. For the benefit consequent upon the British part of this Dominion should be far more naval-minded than they are. —St. Catharines Standard.

London's Population Away

Debate on which is the largest city in the world is obviously adjourned for the duration of the war. The rival claimants have been New York and London, with a good deal of technical argument on both sides. Now comes the news that last week gives New York a population of approximately seven and a half millions, a reduction of two years ago for Greater London, covering but this has been a matter of government bureaus where safety is more important than speed. And, finally, there are the institutions of higher learning.

Thus in the current number of Science for the second time since the evacuation of the University of London. Its enrolment of approximately 14,000 students should be one-third of the whole English student body, and larger than Oxford and Cambridge combined. Then, too, the Royal Society and most of the United Kingdom of its two most famous schools of arts and sciences, Imperial College, belong to Bristol and University College, Nottingham has come to the University of Wales at Aberystwyth, and the women are being accommodated.

Of the great medical schools, St. Bartholomew's Hospital and College is going to Cambridge, together with the London School of Medicine, and Guy's is going to Oxford. Other medical schools, including the London School of Economics, have moved to Glasgow, Aberdeen and St. Andrews. Science is thus doing its war by demobilizing in the sense of getting back to her normal life. —New York Times.

Part of Deal

On March 3, 1933, the Hitler Government of Germany arrested Ernst Thaelmann, Communist leader in the Reichstag.

As part of the Nazi deal with Russia, it is reported that Thaelmann has been released from the concentration camp where he had been imprisoned for six years.

You can figure out for yourself what the German man in the street thinks of that stuff. For six years he has been told Thaelmann is an enemy of Germany, and now he is expected to swallow the story that the Communist leader is all lily white and pure.— Windsor Daily Star.

Healthful Recreation Important Phase of Boys' Activities

The vital things of life, important to the proper up bringing of the youth of Canada, as laid down in an outstanding address which the speaker called "The Bill of Rights for the Boy" were presented in informative detail to the Belleville Rotary Club, at their weekly luncheon yesterday by Nelson McEwan, National Secretary for Boys' Work of the Y.M.C.A., in Canada.

Healthful recreation, camping experience, constructive work, education, responsibility, personality, and the philosophy of life, were vividly detailed by Mr. McEwan, who told the clubmen that "the boys of today are living in a vastly different age to what we did. We lived in a horse and buggy age. They are living in an airplane age. Yet we must take some credit, for people who did so quickly adjust themselves from the horse and buggy age to the swifty moving age of today should be proud".

Healthful Recreation Important

Healthful recreation is one of the most important phases of boys' activities, the speaker said. "Too many of us suffer from spectatoritis; are too content to watch others play. The boys of today should have the opportunity of indulging in a variety of skilled play, not necessarily to be on winning team or any one particular phase of athletics". He stressed the importance of everyone learning to swim. "The death-toll from drowning is reaching tragic proportions each year", he said.

Changing was necessary, Mr. McEwan pointed out. "I crave the opportunity for every boy to get this experience, not just for fresh air and sunshine but the opportunity to have the chance to live with other people and take part in social activities under Christian leadership. He needs the opportunity of belonging to a group, with other people of his own age, who like him, who know what he does and care how he does it."

The chance to mingle with boys and girls of his own age is given in conference work, the speaker declared. "Here the boy is exposed to the ideas of others. He gets the opportunity to mingle with adults and those of the opposite sex. There is a necessity for more social contact with girls so that an exchange of ideas will result in mutual understanding".

Secure Education

The speaker urged the "boy who can take it "to get a college education. "The present education-al system is based too much upon a university level," the speaker regretted. "There are a great many boys who have not the means nor the ability to get university training, he pointed out. "We should see that they get the equivalent in training with their hands that the universities cannot give them".

There is a great need for responsibility in the boys of today, Mr. McEwan stated. "We need a group of boys who can take on a job and see it through, but we should judge them on their own level and not on that of the adult. We must give them the responsibility they understand. Most important of all, they should learn how to spend money as well as save it."

Too many boys and girls are suffering from thwarted ambitions, the speaker said in advocating the promotion of personality. "They have the right to do what they want, and what they would like to be in life. Every boy needs something that matters, on which he would bet his life". Mr. McEwan said, "not a stable unchanging thing, but an evolving process on which to do work out his life. This when a crisis comes he will have full understanding and know where he stands.

All Doing Boys' Work

Every man in this club is doing boys' work whether he knows it or not. In a closely-knit community such as this the boys are looking you over. They will pick you and say I want to be like him." The speaker urged the clubmen to see what is happening to the boys of the city, and do all they could toward assisting them. "There will be no immediate dividend", he said, but after all, the greatest investment is the best. There will be heartbreaks, but there will also be times when you can say "I have helped at least one boy to find himself."

Mr. McEwan was flittingly introduced by Rotarian Joe Sifton, with Rotarian Harry Ackerman extending the appreciation of the club. President Howard Carter was in the chair.

Financial Report

During the meeting the financial report of the Rotary Regatta held here this summer was read by General Committee Chairman McLean Haig. Informing the club that the credit balances was a trifle over $140, the chairman urged that the club repeat its aquatic activities next year. "We have learned a lot from our mistakes, and I foresee larger dividends another season", he said.

Constipated? Then Ask Yourself This Question!

If constipation has you bogged down so you feel tired, low, all played out . . . it's time you asked yourself a question!

What have you had to eat lately? Just meat, bread, eggs, potatoes? It's no surprise you're constipated! The system says you don't get enough "bulk" in your diet. And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food but a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body—food that leaves a soft "bulky" mass and helps a bowel movement.

Eat All-Bran every day—drink plenty of water, and gain a new lease on life! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ont. Sold by every grocer.

Floor Cleaning Made Easier

By ELEANOR ROSS

THERE'S SOUND LOGIC in the custom that impels the Dutch to part their wooden clogs at the threshold whenever they enter their houses. This practice not only makes for personal comfort but saves meticulous Dutch housewives the trouble of removing the tracks of dust or dirt-laden clogs.

We don't park our shoes but we have found that smooth, easily-cleaned floors and floor coverings are best for our homes. Only when floors have been neglected, when antiquated methods are used, or where there are bare, unfinished boards to contend with, is it necessary to turn on the elbow grease in order to keep them clean.

Painted floors or hardwood floors that have been shellacked or varnished, then coated with wax, thrive on a daily sweeping with a clean soft brush, and a thorough but damp soapy cloth every week or so. Floors covered with linoleum or oilcloth will do credit to the kitchen or bathroom if mopped with tepid suds.

Tiled Floors

Tiled floors require scrubbing or mopping with hot soapsuds if they are to look their best and shining. Get after stains at once; don't give them a chance to sink in and streak the grout. Rinse thoroughly, daily washing will keep the floors attractive and obviate the strenuous work that may be needed if the washing is put off for more than a week.

No matter how clean the rest of the house may be, dirt clings and dirty up the house in record time and nullify all the other good work done.

Good, thick soapsuds, with a minimum of water will do the trick and rinsing water need to be changed often; otherwise, the dirt is merely transferred from one spot to another.

You can't do a good job without good tools, whether it be in the kitchen or the factory. So, immaculately-clean brushes, mops, and all other equipment used in floor-washing are necessary. These tools may be had with long handles for the benefit of women who prefer to work in an upright position instead of going after dirt directly on hands and knees.

Starting Early On the Road To Beauty

Is getting early training in the ways of beauty

By HELEN POLLETT

LITTLE GIRLS flippity-hop to the beauty shop. They lag along with maha and have a grand time; get their locks properly shampooed, which seldom happens at home, since mamas don't know the tricks of the trade. They also meet manicures which inspire them to keep their claws clean and pretty. Children can't learn too early in life to have pride in appearance. They get started along the right beauty road.

The conscientious mother will take her child twice a year to the dentist for a record of weight and growth, a thorough medical examination, plus a foot power. The dear child's Family Nuisance to the dentist. Every year she will see that teeth are well brushed. She will not accompanie on laundry, but will be indulgent to the matter of clean frocks and undies. A little girl who doesn't mind soiled clothing and dirty hands is likely to develop into an untidy woman.

Sharing lessons may help a child acquire grace and social manner Shyness can be overcome by developing a child's talent and providing her with playmates of normal character and behaviour.

Excessive sweating of the feet caused mocerations that llvite ringworm, underarm sweating, gas on the foot. The flesh softens, little cracks appear.

Before using soap and water, bathe the feet with clear water and dry thoroughly. This treatment at once removes chemicals placed upon the skin by the evaluations from the sweat glands. Use soap and cleansing rinse with clear tepid water, dry and apply a foot powder. Change hosiery every day, shoes twice a day.

Excessive moisture of the skin is often due to nervousness. To overcome perspiration, get lots of sleep, lots of outdoor life; live tranquilly and cultivate mental health, which means a cheerful outlook and courage to take troubles and disappointments on the chin.

On Wednesday evening, Sept. 20th the family and friends of Mrs. Wm. Brown gathered with her at the home of her eldest son Noble in honor of her 87th birthday.

Mrs. Brown enjoys good health and was able to join in the fun and good wishes for her birthday and many were the gifts and good wishes showered.

During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Archie Gresitz, niece and nephew of Mrs. Brown brought her a letter and birthday card from Queen Elizabeth Aid where Mrs. Brown made her home for a number of years before going to Belleville to live with her daughter Mrs. Gresitz.

The letter as follows pleased Mrs. Brown very much as it sendt many a message from each of her old friends.

Dear Mrs. Brown:

Please Family With These Ideas

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

HERE WE come with the kitchen market basket filled to overflowing with good recipes and food ideas. Step right up and help yourself from the following pertinent paragraphs.

Ever stuff and roast broiling chickens in a pan? Try making onion stuffing. Put strips of bacon on the breast of the bird and there's a tricky baste with hot orange juice and melted butter.

Pretty-up a salad with a Banana Fan. Use crosswise halves of a ripe banana (peeled, of course), splitting each half lengthwise, then opening as a fan on your plate.

Flavor lurks in every single jar of prepared horseradish. Boiled beef cries for it, and it is good in cooked salad dressing and sour cream dressing; also with cucumbers.

Pears, zarip with their sweet juices, are again with us. Stew a few and for a real treat serve with old-fashioned gingerbread, topped by whipped cream.

Cabbage Surprise

Cabbage Surprise is just the dish to get you want to please the family with a new addition to the menu. It is made with one cup thinly-sliced onions, three tablespoons butter, two cups cooked, shredded cabbage, two chopped pimentoes, two tablespoons flour, two tablespoons prepared mustard, one teaspoon salt, one eighth teaspoon pepper, one beaten egg, one and one-third cups milk, one cup soft, stale bread crumbs and one cup grated American cheese. Saute onions in one tablespoon of butter, add cabbage and pimentoes. Blend flour, mustard, salt and pepper. Combine egg with milk. Add gradually to mustard mixture; blend well. Add seasoning mixture, pour into shallow, buttered baking dish. Melt remaining butter, add crumbs, stir thoroughly, sprinkle cheese. Sprinkle over top of casserole. Bake in 325 degrees F oven for 30 minutes. Yield: six portions.

Surprise Rice makes a swell supper dish. It is made with two cups boiled rice, one sweet pepper, one small onion, chopped fine, one cup milk, one cup milk, butter. Remove seeds from pepper, chop and parboil. Add pepper and onion, chopped fine, to the rice. Mix thoroughly and place in a buttered baking dish. Add a layer of the sausages which have been partially cooked and cover with rice. Pour milk over all, dot with butter. Cover and bake for 30 minutes. Remove the cover and bake for another 30 minutes, at 250 degrees F. Yields eight servings of one cup each.

Fashion Flashes

Fallle for Fall seems to be the rule everywhere. A delightful afternoon frock is of soft brown faille made with a snug bodice and a slight drape in back. Gilt fringe helps give the touch of gleaming gold so much in evidence this season.

No matter how gay and spirited colours may be, it is the black frock that is always in most important. This year, dull black highlighted with chunky gold jewelry is bound to be smart. Even trimmed tiny hats, is the rule. The fashionable is slender over the hips and back fullness. Snug bodices with gilt or jewelled buttons is a good style.

There's always smartness in a well-cut tailored frock. Sometimes a new model is golden brown duvetyn, has beaver revers extending from shoulder to waist and the upper part puffed to make a soft frame for the face.

Night owls are going in for those grand suits of black moire or faille, with the front of the jacket back pipeling peplumed jackets. One model has tiny pipeling of gold braid lined in white faille.

Gay evenings in store, judging by the new evening frocks. A lovely model is in tricolored rose faille with the skirt all-over quilted with tiny bowknots.

Advice to the Lovelorn

Switching Jobs a Possible Solution

Fay Married Bickering

"In this day of clubs" writes a woman correspondent, "I have an idea for a club which would straighten out more matrimonial tangles than any suggestion up to date.

"In my case," she continues, "it happened to be quite necessary. I was my husband's secretary before we were married. In the first years of our marriage we were prosperous, things ran smoothly, we had a nice car and a house almost paid for. Then the lean years set in. I was a good sport, gave up the car and, I had, with four little children it wasn't easy.

"You know what the care of four children means when one of them is a baby, and there is the everlasting dish washing, vegetable straining, diaper washing, airing to be sterilized, bottles to be made, meals for the older children, meals, and running the house.

"Then the assistance I had was a high school girl who came in the afternoons to help me, and I did engage diaper service for the baby, after I found out how much it cost to do the washing myself.

"I knew my husband was worried over the financial problem. He started out for himself he had been manager of a highly successful department store. He is the type of man who, when things don't go smoothly is contemptuous, rude and sarcastic, and for this reason he had lost a good deal of his trade.

"Seeing me in the corner one evening, while the high school girl washed the dishes seemed to get on his nerves, and he said he wished he had nothing to do but read the paper and stay home, that it must be positive vacation for him if he could do my work.

"That got me, Miss Fairfax, as six o'clock in the morning was my riding hour to get the day really started, and I seldom went to bed before eleven. I waited until I was perfectly cool and then wasn't a trace of anger in my voice and said: "Dear, I'm sorry you have had the house for two weeks and I'll go to your office. Are you going?' I kept right after him from morning 'til night when he finally agreed. Now, I wasn't going to trust one precious baby's digestion to his messing with the baby formula, as per the milk bottles ready and in the refrigerator before I started to work, for there was nothing to do but warm them.

"For the first few day it was like heaven. The decent orderly routine of even a struggling business days after the heller, stellar work of tending to four children, cooking, and so on.

"When I got home those first evenings, we sat down to a good dinner with no fuss, which caused something of a mutiny among the children. Then I asked to have the high school girl in to do the dishes, you may believe.

"Then I found that a note for $500 would be due at the office by the 15th—and I hadn't a cent. I asked my husband about it. He said he had made no provisions for paying the note because there was no use in money. I looked into all the sources of credit. Before he had been finally agreed to lend me the money at a higher-than-usual rate of interest. He is the type of man my husband. There was nothing else to do but accept these terms.

"At the end of the first week, my husband begged to take over the job and save me the fee. He ordered had colds from wet feet, and I knew he was pleased to get into

BRITISH PEOPLE CALM, UNITED AND STEADFAST

Miss A. Harold Arrives Home With Thrilling Story of First Days of War

BACK ON NEUTRAL SHIP

Belleville Resident Lived in Countryside Town While Waiting for Boat

Safely home after a holiday in Europe that combined a delightful summer's travel, with the thrill of a sudden change to grim wartime atmosphere, Miss A. Harold, John Street, has returned to Belleville from New York, where a liner of a neutral country landed with tourists bound for Europe. The ship, the latest and fastest model of the fleet, made the crossing quickly without any unfortunate incidents, although a few of the passengers breathed a sigh of relief that they were twenty-four hours closer home.

The British port for weeks before the sailing was a exciting place as thousands of Americans travelled at boat times. Suddenly the sailing was cancelled, exit permits had to be obtained, and when passage was finally secured the travellers were taken on board between lines of police, immigration officials and Scotland Yard men. In the case of Miss Harold, and her niece, Mrs. J. R. Bowerman, of Toronto, there had been long delays as their boat, a freighter, was withdrawn. A Canadian ship waited orders from the Admiralty before proceeding and it seemed that there was no way of leaving England before the expected Western front attack which was expected to menace London. Passage was booked on a liner but others already booked had become panicky and gave up their reservations, so await an Admiralty call.

The original plan was to leave the port in daylight, as no one wished to be travelling in the Channel danger zone at night. But the neutral liner which Miss Harold travelled docks out of the port and it was necessary for the fourteen hundred passengers and all their luggage to be transported by tender to the boat. A Japanese officer with one hundred pieces of luggage to go through the customs delayed matters, and with the usual difficulties of embarking, it was six o'clock in the evening before the liner began its hazardous voyage home.

Vessel Shines With Lights

In vivid contrast to the blackout in London was this first night, and following nights on the liner, just how was remembered for its blackouts and the eerie atmosphere of deserted streets, in close quarters, but on board the liner, all was ablaze with lights after sundown. The vessel shone with brilliance in the darkness of the Atlantic. Inside, the lounges, dining and great signs were painted on its surface to make it clear that this was a boat of a neutral country, flaming each side of the vessel were electric lights that spelled HOLLAND.

Every precaution had been taken to ensure the safety of the passengers. The search was reasonably quite calm with the exception of two Australians, who refused to undergone inspection in their trip. The scene when the liner arrived at the landing stage in New York was hectic as relatives and friends rejoiced at the safe arrival of the passengers. And once again there was the delay as the Japanese officials thoroughly searched through the customs. The voyage had been uneventful to its end, and the ship after delivering its passengers safely returned to the home port at Amsterdam and will probably suspend sailings.

Thrilling Days Then

The visitors were thoroughly impressed by the stillness of the Dutch people in the face of wartime privations. There was no talk of war, but calmly and methodically the people went about their tasks, accepting without the slightest grumbling each new regulation that rationed provisions, fuel and electricity. All were united in a steadfast purpose to do their bit. They did not want war but war was their job for the time being and they would complete their work well.

London in early September took on a grim and unusual appearance, as its beautiful parks were torn up for air raid shelters, its theatres closed and the windows of public buildings disappeared behind sandbags and tape protections. In the quiet countryside town where Miss Harold and her niece awaited word about their boat, before leaving for the port, fifteen hundred school children from the London area were sent, and every home was required to care for one or more of these little ones. The tiny travellers accepted conditions unphilosophically although many mothers who accompanied them from London, and had to leave them, were heartbroken.

The visitors from Canada had been abroad since June when they had stood in a freighter with ten other passengers. Their holidays had included week in Scotland and England and among the lights of their sightseeing was the visit to Harewood House, the home of the Earl of Harewood and the Princess Royal, which once a year is open for inspection at a fee which is donated to a hospital. The beautiful estate in its wonderful furnishings was a delight and of special interest were the half dozen chairs covered with petit point worked by the Earl of Harewood himself, Holland and Switzerland claimed the visitors for their time, the week of the appeal of these places, particularly Switzerland will not soon be forgotten. It was while in Switzerland that international developments seemed to make a speedier return necessary, and the travellers turned again to England for a waiting boat, and then for a boat that would bring them safely home.

Each traveller carried home from England vivid impressions of a land where brave people, courageously faced an unpleasant task, the horrors of war, determined to see it terminated effort to do their part, and demonstrating that spirit that has aided the British Empire the force it is today.

REPORT PLOT TO KILL HITLER

Unconfirmed Story is That Gestapo Discovered Plan in Hitler Elite Guard

London, Oct. 3 — (CP) — The Daily Sketch today reported that a plot to kill Fuehrer Hitler during the tour of inspection of the Polish front had been discovered by Heinrich Himmler, chief of the German Gestapo.

The report lacked confirmation but the Sketch said reports reaching Denmark declared Germany and members of the blackshirted Hitler elite guard were implicated in the plot.

Another similar story maintained by German police officials confirmation of the plot was seen in publication of a book, "Memoirs for the Fuehrer, the Daily Sketch said.

PRIME MINISTER

While today's conference lacked the general enthusiasm of a party reunion, after several years of differences within the party, was marked by an atmosphere of definite cordiality.

The Prime Minister was smiling broadly as he made his brief unprepared statement to the Conference standing by Premier Hepburn and surrounded by other members of the Ontario delegation, and the Dominion Cabinet. The Ontario Premier's attitude, while not demonstrably, was also unquestionably businesslike.

His delegation remained in its private railway car at the Union Station until 10 a.m. Mr. Hepburn, the former and the others walked to the East Block of the parliament buildings for the conference.

On the steps of the East Block the Ontario delegation met the co-incidentally met Defence Minister Rogers, who as labor minister had wide experiences with Mr. Rogers.

But all former acrimony appeared to be forgotten when Mr. Rogers and the premier greeted each other with "Hello, Norm; hello, Mitch", and shook hands cordially.

In the corridor leading to the private meeting room, the Ontario delegates met and shook hands with Premier Hepburn's colleagues in the personal friendships with several other government officials.

Sharp at 11 a.m. they entered the prime minister's office where the conference began.

It is understood that the Ontario representatives are seeking some form of compensation for damages to revenue in war arrangements.

The problem of the utilization of Ontario's huge resources and the payment of guards on power dams was also expected to be one of two points at issue.

While the attitude of the premier and the others appeared quite cordial, the general impression was that the Ontario delegates would try to impress upon the cabinet the necessity of reaching some definite conclusions on these matters.

SEES EUROPE AT CROSSROADS'

Hitler's Newspaper Says Peace Offers Not Those of War-Tired States

Berlin, Oct. 3.—While government circles made no comments, they interpreted Germany had no desire to "Germanize" the people of German origin, an assertion which led observers to believe some form of autonomy would be granted to the Poles.

Commenting on German-Russian proposals to end the war, the Essen National Zeitung, which has connections close to Field Marshal Hermann Goering, said they must not be regarded as "the peace offers of war-tired states."

At New Crossroads

The paper declared the desire for an end to hostilities expressed by Germany and Russia in their Moscow pact also has been a prominent feature of Italian policy.

"All three powers," National Zeitung added, "want peace, and in case of necessity are ready to enforce it by the power of arms."

Hitler's Vosskischer Zeitschrift expressed belief that Europe, following completion of the Polish campaign, has "arrived anew at a crossroads—the most serious, perhaps, in many years."

War news in Berlin, meanwhile, remained meagre. Reports from the Western Front reported nothing except local artillery and reconnaissance activity.

News from Poland, where the last resistance was reported ended with the surrender of Polish forces on the Hela, Peninsula Sunday, was reported to be quiet while German troops were continuing occupation of Warsaw without incident.

Under the Defence of Canada Regulations, all enemy aliens over the age of 16 are required to register. Exceptions are made in favor of those who, not being naturalized British subjects, have been by authorities under the Sovereignty or control of the German Reich on Sept. 3, 1939.

Loyalty Not Impugned

"Registration," it was pointed out, "is a technical, administrative measure, and does not in any way impugn the loyalty of those called upon to register.

"So long as they peacefully pursue their ordinary avocations, enemy aliens in Canada will be allowed to continue to enjoy the protection of the law and will be accorded the respect and considerations due to peaceful and law abiding citizens.

"They will not be arrested, detained or interfered with, provided they comply with registration regulations."

Empire Cause 'Sacred as Crusade'

Lord Queenborough Compares Enemy to 'Barbarian Hordes'

London, Oct. 3.—(CP Cable)—In a message to members of the Conservative organization he heads, Lord Queenborough, president of the Royal Society of St. George, today declared there could be no compromise with an enemy whose policy and actions were based on violence, blackmail and oppression.

"No overtures designed to secure a disgraceful peace at the expense of those to whom we have pledged our support will be entertained for one instant," he said. "We cannot, will not, rest with the perjured, blood-stained men who have plunged their unhappy country, and with it our own, Poland and France, into yet another hideous suicidal struggle.

"The enemy confronting Britain today, Lord Queenborough said, has done his work deadly to the souls and bodies of all free men and civilization. Barbarism has swept across Europe after the collapse of the Roman Empire. Thus the cause the Empire had embraced was as sacred as that which led our forefathers on the great crusade 1,000 years ago.

HIGHLIGHTS

"For that government have too often proved in the past that their undertakings are worthless when it suits them that they should be broken.

"The overwhelming mass of opinion in this country, and I am satisfied also in France, is determined to meet this new form of violence shall cease and that the word of treaties shall be pledged must henceforth be kept."

"On the Western Front some local progress has been made by the French which has enabled them to secure useful points for the preservation over the German position."

"A large British army has been transported to France and is taking its place alongside our French allies. We have reason to be proud of the efficiency with which this complicated movement has been carried out.

"Reconnaissance flights both by day and by night are being made by the Royal Air force units in France. There have been encounters with enemy fighter aircraft."

"Aircraft of the coastal command are continued to carry out anti-submarine and other routine patrols. Advantage has been taken of the light of the moon to continue the relentless hunting of submarines during the night hours. A number of U-boats have been sighted and attacked."

"Attacks were made on units of the German fleet by aircraft of the bomber command on the 29th of September, with the result that one attacks . . . We suffered some losses but German losses admittedly had two of their attacking fighters were shot down."

Evidence has been received that a German raider is operating in the South Atlantic. This form of menace will be dealt with according to pre-arranged plans."

"I should like to tell the House of the splendid help we are receiving from . . . Newfoundland and Southern Rhodesia. In Newfoundland arrangements are already being made to recruit for the Royal Navy some hundreds of men from the Newfoundland fishing fleet".

IN FIGHT

Soon afterward I saw a rustic horse-drawn cart carry two bodies out of the Warndi Forest, east of Beuru. Then I was told a counter attack by a German infantry patrol had been repulsed.

French officers estimate the total German casualties on the west front since the war began a month ago at about 3,000, of which 500 to 600 were believed to have been killed.

French losses were described as few.

Strictly Local Attacks

French strategy has been one of strictly local attacks to rectify their own lines, obtain information on the opposing forces and cripple the Saar coal and steel industry. In the latter connection they already have achieved important successes.

There were no indications that any general offensive was in prospect from either side in this heavily fortified region.

French officers said one of the sensations of the war for them had been the performance of the new 155 millimeter guns, which are the heaviest in the French artillery. In the first evidence of war, 75 came from French artillery.

Close behind the front we left our cars and plodded through red mud. Then we came to the edge of a wood through a pine forest to the advance observation post of the colonel commanding the attack. The scene was the Meuten valley, dominated by the Siegfried line some 800 feet and about two miles within German territory west of Saarbruecken.

Pounded Pill Box

On the preceding day French infantry had seized the German fortified position of Oberbarren, a town of 2,500, in a surprise attack on the edge of the Beruz Heights. They also had taken the farm on the Beruz settlement of two farms and a chapel, now in ruins.

On the Beruz crest French guns pounded a German pillbox observation post, constructed of steel and French infantry under cover of the woods on the hillside began a sharp, swinging carefully cast in an effort to go around to the town of Beruz behind the heights.

Watch Tower Hit.

As I watched French guns fired rhythmically, each detonation sending a cloud billowing into the valley. A white stone tower which once was one of the heights already had been destroyed. Direct hits were scored.

At the close of a half-hour barrage the grey pillbox smoke emitted a smash at the very point of the German observation post. Then after a brief interval, white flags of military communiques call German surrender.

There was a faint bumping noise then. Albert Lauth, with rifle in the air, and German aides emerged on the hills behind us. The German officers were blindfolded.

As we filed back to our cars a heavy artillery duel was in progress. It was only at night that French artillery would move out to improve their positions.

Driving south from the Beruz battlegrounds we passed a village which we were forced to cross a bare ridge under fire of German batteries. The five cars of our party accelerated and raced at top speed into a clump of trees on the road ahead of us.

Not Fired On

The caravan was not fired on.

As we reached a French border post, the newly captured town of Warndi Forest, an engagement had taken place. A French patrol came in to report they had met and turned back a German patrol. Five enlisted men carried a blood-spattered German helmet, two machine guns and an assortment of hand grenades and other trophies of victory.

Behind them came a party carrying two German dead. They were young, blonde infantrymen. Among them, not with animosity, but with the curiosity of youth crowded around French troops.

The French patrol of 15 said they encountered 30 to 40 Germans in the Forest, dropped into position and fired as the Germans advanced. The Germans were killed immediately, one just as his bullet-clip was moving through a machine gun. Two others were wounded gravely and the others withdrew, leaving their dead, medical and equipment. The French had four wounded slightly.

SOVIET MAY GAIN

As a result of the newly formed friendship between Premier Stalin and Chancellor Hitler, Soviet Russia will, in all probability, soon come into possession of the Baltic provinces which were taken away from her by the Bolsheviks at the Treaty of Brest-Litovsk early in 1918. These States are shown on the above map in black. In addition to the Baltic provinces, Russia also lost Finland and Bessarabia, as well as a large portion of Poland which she has now taken back.

NAZI PRINCIPLES REJECTED

Early end of the war through collapse of Germany's Hitler was seen as a possibility by Sir John Salmond, marshal of the Royal Air Force. "The war may not last as long as some people expect because the country of this murderer has of itself rejected in great measure the principles he has forced on it," Sir John said in a speech in Eastbourne, England. "Action does not appear on the surface, but exists underground, he said.

Ruffing Is Doubtful Starter In First Game As Both Teams Rehearse For Opening Tilt

Yankee Hurler Suffering from Arm Ailment Since September 1st

PEARSON MAY START

McKechnie Says Dreringer Will Open Series for Cincinnati Reds .

By JUDSON BAILEY

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—A pitching problem had New York Yankee masterminds fretting today as the world champions and Cincinnati Reds rehearsed for tomorrow's opening of the 1939 World Series.

Charley Ruffing, rugged right-hander who started the first game of the series last year and also opened the all-star game for the American League in July, has had an arm ailment. He vowed he was ready to work but Yankee Manager Joe McCarthy had not yet decided whether to lead with his ace.

Ruffing has not thrown a business ball since the middle of September, when the last place St. Louis Browns chiselled 13 hits off him in less than nine innings. Ruffing has made at least one recent trip to a muscle specialist in Brooklyn and may or may not have reached the physical fitness he proclaimed.

May Start with Pearson

Marse McCarthy, like a lot of other persons, wishes he could be sure. If the Yankee skipper should decide to hold back Ruffing, he undoubtedly would open with Monte Pearson, the chunky Californian who won one game in each of the last three World Series for the Yanks.

Pearson's record of 12 victories and five defeats dwarfed beside Ruffing's 21 and seven, but he finished strong and his experience as much as his curve ball, second only to Tommy Bridges, in the American League, made him the logical second choice.

Lefty Gomez, just out of the hospital and still taped on the back and side where he strained a muscle, did not rate consideration for the first game, although a late appearance at any time during the series was in doubt.

He has had six World Series games with never a setback and in the Yankees' original plans was figured upon for the second game pitching spot.

Three for Relief

Oral Hildebrand and Bump Hadley, both well-seasoned performers, were in line for a starting call somewhere along the line. And Rookies Atley Donald and Marius Russo, a southpaw, likewise are potential starters, if McCarthy should need to dig that deep into his staff. It seemed likely that Steve Sundra, Johnny Murphy and Spud Chandler would be held strictly for relief purposes.

The Reds arranged to follow the Yankees onto the Stadium this afternoon for a final workout. Manager Will McKechnie announced he is settled on Paul Derringer to hurl the first game for the National League champions.

Bucky Walters, the converted infielder, who combined with Derringer to win 52 games during the season, was certain of the second game assignment. These two and Gene Thompson, a promising 24-year-old rookie who finished the season with two successive victories, were also the choice to work the two or three games that will be played in Cincinnati starting Saturday.

ST. KITTS DOWN ELMWOOD PATS BY 20-10 COUNT

Athletics Will Now Play Medicine Hat Incas in Next Round

MUCH TOO SMART

Morton and Fitzgerald Score Five Goals Apiece in Clean Fast Game

(By Hugh C. Chadderton)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Oct. 3. (CP)—Suburban Elmwood was overwhelmed its third bitter taste of big-time competition today but the magnificent play of their conquerors was some consolation.

Elmwood Pats went down 20-10 before the great St. Catharines Athletics in the Red-Motorola standard-dean play-off in Dominion playdowns last night. Athletics played a two-game total-score total-dean-total play-off in Dominion playdowns last night. Athletics now meet Medicine Hat Incas in National quarter-final that even the best-informed of Winnipeg sup-porters did not expect.

Before the game the majority of the fans thought Elmwood would compare favorably with the Eastern winners and play-off fever had been running high in the North Winnipeg arena where ice heroes got its introduction to the Middle West nine years ago.... Elmwood had challenged the east three before in 1935 and 1937, and Orillia Terriers came out on top both times by identical scores, of 23-8.

Athletics stepped over Pats with ease before a slim crowd of 700. Despite a last period rally in which the Manitobans counted six goals in the finally five, there was no doubt as to Athletics' superiority.

After the game coach Art Brown of the Eastern champs said: "We're as sharp prepared to leave for their next hurdle, Medicine Hats Incas. The sudden-death game in Medicine Hat will be played tomorrow, the winner meeting the Inter-na Pacific Coast for the Mann Cup final with the British Columbia champions, New Westminster Ananacs.

The well-drilled Athletics followed the Eastern Ontario Senior A league territory and many dangerous attacks ended when the ball entered the St. Catharines zone.

The Eastern champions walked on four times goals in the first seven minutes and ended the first quarter in No. 3 Half-time score was 11-3 and after three periods 15-4.

Morton Leading Scorer

Punk Morton, leading scorer in the Ontario Association this season with 24 goals, counted a unsolet three goals apiece. Bill Wilson had three goals, Jack Gowen two and Frank Madsen, Harry Green, Spark Urquhart, George Hope and Wandy Mc-Gibbon one apiece.

Forward Johnny Ames led Elmwood's scorers with four goals while rover Scotty Sinclair and Defenceman Frank Mulvey had two each. Bill Adams and Andy Miller got the others.

Coach Athletics, accustomed to a rougher game than is played here, settled down to a wide-open, passing game when the ice proved fast. Referee intended to stay out of the penalty box.

Six penalties were called four against St. Catharines and two against Pats.

ROCHESTER WINGS EVEN THE SERIES

Defeat Louisville 13-3 by Blasting Out 20 Hits Off Two Hurlers

Louisville, Ky., Oct. 3 (AP)—You might knock a good man down, but it's difficult to keep him down.

For example, take a look at the Junior World Series between Rochester of the International League and Louisville of the American Association.

Louisville held to 14 hits in the first three games, Rochester, league batting champion, had a field day with the ball last night as six Louisville pitchers for 20 hits in 13 innings and evened the series at two games apiece.

Louisville, which finished next to last in team batting in its league, made 10 hits but tight pitching in the pinches by Bill Ryba and John Grodzicki and timely batting by Harry Davis and Marty Marion pinched off most of the scoring chances. Ryba thus avenged his defeat in the first game.

Manager Bill Burwell of the Louisville Colonels likely will call on big Jim Weaver to hurl tonight's battle with Skipper Bill Southworth probably will start Si Johnson for Rochester. Weaver shaded Johnson in the second game, 2-1.

The teams are to complete the four-best-out-of-seven game series at Rochester, starting Wednesday night if they play tonight as scheduled.

CAN CINCINNATI REDS END YANKEES' SERIES DOMINATION?

Leading figures in the annual drama of the world series, beginning tomorrow in Yankee Stadium, are shown here, starting with the most potent factor in this and past three world series, Yankee power at the plate. Storming up out of the dugout, from left to right, are: Frank Crosetti, Red Rolfe, Charley Keller, Joe DiMaggio, Bill Dickey, Joe Gordon, George Selkirk, Babe Dahlgren, Jake Powell, Tom Henrich, Buddy Rosar and Ernest Jongeson, Bennash than, in pitching posse, are Paul Derringer, left, and Bucky Walters, right, greatest one-two combination on the mound in the National league since Grover Alexander and Eppa Rixey pitched the Phillies to their only pennant in 1925. Between them Derringer and Walters rolled up 52 victories during the season. Inset in the centre is Red Ruffing, winner of 20 games for the Yankees in each of the past four seasons and their mainstay on the mound in the coming series. At the bottom, the two leading batters in the Cincinnati line-up, Frank McCormick, first baseman, left, and Ival Goodman, outfielder, right. McCormick led his league in hits and runs-batted-in this past season, while Goodman, when not out with injuries, enjoyed his best year at the plate.

WRESTLING FANS GET RETURN GO UPON REQUEST

THREE BOUTS

Belleville wrestling fans placed their stamp of approval upon last night's mat-show by grappling aloft when three rousing bouts were staged at the Rome Arena with a new wrestling circuit presenting new wrestling faces, all of whom proved entertaining in every bout.

Again new faces will appear locally when three bouts are scheduled by promoter under the same management at the Hume Arena on Friday night. In the semi-final Joe Malick, the former Canadian amateur champion from Regina, who wrestled one full hour to a draw with Rudy Epps last week, will meet the Masked Marvel, who the promoters claim is a former world's wrestling champion.

Alex Pirra, Boston heavy, will meet Chief Little Bear, a full-blooded Indian from Oregon. Piers proved a capable wrestler and worked himself into the hearts of the Belleville sport fans for his clean-cut style of grappling and sturdy grappler.

The opening bout will see Tiger Daniels, of Regina, meet Young Griffins of Niagara Falls, N. Y., in a return grudge bout. Daniels won over Griffins last week in a gory battle, that saw Daniels resort to rough tactics in order to win. Griffins strenuously protested last week's final decision and the scrap terminated in a general free-for-all outbreak of fisticuffs outside the ring as the patrons favored Griffins' argument, and attacked Daniels to provide additional thrills for the general audience.

By BILL BETT

Central Press Canadian Sports Writer

Mr. William McKechnie, grim-faced Scot who pilots the destinies of the rollicking Cincinnati Reds, is about to get his great chance for revenge. And if Mr. McKechnie is thinking about revenge — his thoughts must be grim indeed. For vengeance, for him, has been long delayed—11 long years, in fact.

Mr. McKechnie had been managing National league ball clubs off and on since 1922. And in that time he's had plenty ups (such as defeating the Washington Senators in the 1925 world series), and downs such as the year 1935, when his Boston Braves lost 115 games, the National league's record all-time low, but his bitterest baseball moment must have been that day when the New York Yankees crushed his St. Louis Cardinals to earth for the fourth straight time.

That was back in 1928, and it's great Yankees were having tasted blood by annihilating the Pittsburgh Pirates in 1927 in four straight, made Mr. McKechnie and his Cards look positively minor league by smashing them for four straight defeats.

Bill felt especially bad about that because he had just entered that niche in baseball's hall of fame strictly reserved for managers who win a major league pennant in their first year with a team. That beating also let to McKechnie's dismissal in mid-season of the next year.

For the next eight years Mr. McKechnie toiled along and hard, utilizing his fine capabilities as manager to bring a pennant to Boston but, despite his admitted fine ability as a pilot, he could not raise the Braves (now known as the Bees), above fourth place.

Bill finally left Boston and accepted the task of managing the up-and-coming Cincinnati Reds last season. He brought the club in fourth, and around Crosley field the rabid, pennant-starved fans began to smell a flag.

This year he quickly brought his Reds up to the league leadership and kept them there, with more than able assistance from his pitchers, despite repeated challenges by the Chicago Cubs and St. Louis Cardinals.

Here is McKechnie's managerial record since he first took over the reins of the Pittsburgh Pirates for the last half of the 1922 season:

Year	Team	Position
1922—Pittsburgh (a)		Third
1923—Pittsburgh		Third
1924—Pittsburgh		Third
1925—Pittsburgh (b)		Won
1926—Pittsburgh		Third
1927—In retirement
1928—St. Louis (c)		Won
1929—St. Louis (d)		Second
1930—Boston		Sixth
1931—Boston		Seventh
1932—Boston		Fifth
1933—Boston		Fourth
1934—Boston		Fourth
1935—Boston		Eighth
1936—Boston		Sixth
1937—Boston		Fifth
1938—Cincinnati		Fourth
1939—Cincinnati		First

NOTES: (a)—Became manager in mid-season, succeeding George Gibson. (b)—Defeated Washington in world series. (c)—Lost to Yankees in world series. (d)—Succeeded by Billy Southworth in mid-season.

So, after 11 years, Mr. McKechnie has caught up with those Yankees and his big chance to even the score with the club that was so downright mean to him back in 1928.

Of course, it is an entirely different Yankee team, the outfit that will play in the 1939 world series, than the machine which mauled the old Yankees still in uniform, all American and National league opponents back in '27 and '28. Lou Gehrig, the only rogue of the old Yankees still in uniform, is on the bench and won't play.

However, if McKechnie can turn the tables and slaughter the Yankees in a surprising upset, the baseball world will forget all about what happened to him and the Cards in 1928.

A Yankee defeat in the world series this year is unthinkable to American league fans. But if the history of 1914 in Europe can and is repeating itself today, perhaps baseball history of 1914 can do the same.

It was back in 1914, you remember, when the lowly Boston Braves came out of nowhere to fell the Connie Mack's great Philadelphia Athletics in four straight, world series outfielder was more famous for his speed and base stealing than for baseball playing. In Lone Star academic circles he was known as "One-Man Track Team."

Bill Stewart, Jr., son of the big league umpire, is entered at Notre Dame. He's a star in football, ice hockey and baseball.

A change in the main bout of Friday night's wrestling show was announced last night when the matchdoubtless meet the approval of Belleville sport fans. Joe Malick, former Canadian amateur champion from Regina, who wrestled Marvel as Rudy Epps was forced to return to his native Columbus over the week-end. Malick pleased his way into the hearts of Belleville fans last week when professional wrestling returned to popularity in Belleville with three rousing bouts on the mat. He will be repeated in a return match between Alex Pirra and Chief Little Griffins. Daniels won last week in the Hume Arena, but Griffins protested vigorously about the decision and had the majority of the fans with him in their protestations. A new face will appear in the third bout when Chief Little Bear, a full-blooded Indian.

Pete Beach's Albert College gridders played a return game in Kingston Thursday night with Kingston Collegiate and lost by a 11 to 5 score. Albert had started a 2-2 win over the Kingston "Irish" the previous Thursday night in their opening tilt. Lougheed with a try, Woolley and Latimer accounted for the Albert scoring.

Arnold (Stub) Ehbier shook the ball of Belleville from his heels and might-y legs last night, when he will join Leo Coyer, who took up residence in the Royal City some time ago. Ehbier was one of the better players brought along under the tutelage of "Toots" Holway. Ehbier is an aggressive right wing player and led the local junior hockey team in scoring last winter. It will be no easy task for Coach Holway to win a game, but if rumors can be believed we are convinced the right boards will be well patrolled when the local juniors swing into this season's junior O.H.A. campaign, as one or two new faces are slated to be seen in a Belleville uniform next winter.

There is better than an outside chance that Harold (Oatsy) Phillips of Bloomfield may be with the Belleville juniors this winter. Phillips tended goal for the Oshawa Junior "B" squad last winter when they climbed to the championship of Ontario. It was a give-and-take game but Garcia uncorked a few torrid rights in the seventh, that left Apostoli on the canvas on three different occasions, which forced the referee to stop the fight. Incidentally from our telescope position it would seem as though there are far too many T.K.O.'s for the good of boxing nowadays. No wonder the oldtimers say the present crop of leather-slingers are "cream puff fighters".

One smart New York writer suggested recently that Hubbell should repeat what he did during this present world series. "Remember the year we broke out before, 1916? Well that year the so-called world's money was all on the Athletics at heavy odds, when the fast-stepping Boston Braves with Rabbit Maranville as shortstop stopped mighty A's and took the series in four straight. Let my memory serves me right. Well this is another year and the experts are once again all for the Athletics, but don't forget the previous comparison between year and baseball," wrote the Gotham scribe.

SPORT SPICE — Judge Landis turned the four umpires likely to handle the world series; they are Bill McGowan and Bill Summers from American league circles and Babe Pinelli and 'Beans' Reardon from the National league.... Bob Feller was named as baseball's "star of the season" recently. It seems that Feller and right baseball are credited with saving baseball from a disastrous slump this year .... The Lou Ambers-Henry Armstrong featherweight championship bout has been postponed from Nov. 1st to Dec. 1st; it seems Ambers is getting married this week.....

Between the Lines

Tom J. Calling

Baseball's most important question today is: Can the New York Yankees win their fourth consecutive world series and in four straight?

When the Yankees won the 1939 American League pennant Marse Joe McCarthy emailed the late John McGraw's record of piloting a major league club to four successive flags. One of the first to resent the Yankees winning was Mrs. John McGraw, who openly declared she did not want to see the day any big league manager would equal her late husband's record in this respect. McGraw led his Giants to National League pennants in 1921 to 1924 inclusive, while McCarthy's charges have won the American League for the past four years.

Getting down to the bare facts of the present series it would seem as though the Yankees have to pin their faith on Bucky Walters and Paul Derringer, Cincinnati moundsmen, who won 52 of the Reds' 97 victories this season. Already the Yanks have won nine more games on the season's schedule than the Reds, the former finishing the season with 106 wins. It is safe to assume that Walters and Derringer will hurl the first game for the Reds, with Derringer, veteran, perhaps getting the logical choice. No doubt Red Ruffing will again get the Yankees initial game pitching assignment, the big red-head seemingly being a first game winner for years standing. As in former years, however, the tight spot on the National League's defence versus American League powerful offence. The Yankees are 2 to 1 odds favorites.

Most momentous decision Carl Hubbell, of the Chicago Cubs, ever had to make was when he turned down a $5,000 contract and salary increase from Southwestern University down in Texas. Oddly enough Carl is a southpaw fair to middling outfielder was more famous for his speed and base stealing than for baseball playing. In Lone Star academic circles he was known as "One-Man Track Team."

Experts Pick First Three In American Loop

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—Baseball's experts who voted last April in The Associated Press' annual pennant poll, successfully predicted the National and American Leagues' pennant winners.

Seventy-eight of the ninety participating writers picked the Yankees to win the American League pennant, and 43 nominated Cincinnati Reds in the National League. Nevertheless, the consensus left something to be desired. It placed the first three teams in the American League—New York, Boston and Cleveland—in their proper positions, but missed the remainder. In the National League, the consensus was accurate only in placing the Reds first and the Phillies last.

Meanwhile the press, commenting on the reported sinking of the 9,561-ton, three-funnel German Cleveland off the coast of Brazil yesterday, speculated on the significance to the case of Germany's speedy pocket battleships might have been turned against the British.

The sinking was attributed by the Admiralty to an armed raider, but there was no official confirmation that the raider was the "raider" was a regular warship.

33 Vessels Lost

Sinking of the Clement brought British shipping losses since the start of the war to at least 33 vessels totalling 200,000 tons. It was reported since the 4,566-ton freighter Hazeldale was torpedoed off the east coast of Britain.

The Admiralty said 33 members of the Clement's crew had reached Maceio, Brazil, and that 156 others were aboard the Brazilian steamship Itapagipe.

An official of the Booth Steamship Company said the Clement, which owns the vessel, told the Press Association:

"It seems fairly definite that Captain P.C.P. Harris and Chief Officer Arthur Ayre are being held prisoner. While we are still waiting for confirmation the information indicates that all the Clement's lifeboats have either been picked up or reported."

The Daily Mail said a news bulletin from Montevideo, Saturday last night contained "a veiled threat" against the new 23,000-ton Cunard White Star liner Mauretania.

Ships Ill Present

There were indications that the British Home Fleet had suffered no losses since the Admiralty's aircraft carrier Courageous. Captain Alan Alan Kirk, United States naval Attache, said last night he had visited the Fleet Sunday and the normal activities, including sports of the capital ships, was present. Kirk said he had attended religious services aboard the aircraft carrier Ark Royal, which German officials had hinted was destroyed by Nazi planes.

The Admiralty announced last week that German planes had attacked the Home Fleet in the North Sea and "destroyed" an aircraft carrier. A subsequent German announcement by British officials if they could account for the Ark Royal.

A casualty list issued by the Air Ministry last night showed 16 British fliers killed, seven wounded, three missing and five believed interned in neutral countries the war started.

Rejection Stressed

Allied determination to reject any peace proposal based upon recognition of acts of violence was stressed by the press.

"Any deal to end the war now that Poland is conquered will be flatly rejected by the British certain in the House of Commons," said The Daily Mirror. "The Premier will make that clear. The war cannot be called off merely because Poland has been crushed and will repeat his pledge—endorsed by Winston, Chamberlain, Lord and the Admiralty) in his broadcast — 'to redeem Europe from perpetual and recurring fear and from oppression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and their liberties.'"

The Daily Herald—"Hitler's part is not to demand peace with threats but to sue for peace. Let him tell him what terms would be and what Britain and France could demand.

"Satisfaction of these points would be unconditional. They would provide ample basis for any at-around settlement with Germany."

AT THE McCARTHY

"Missing Daughters"

Thousands of people disappear without a trace every year. In every big city, police have long lists of missing girls who are anxiously sought. There seems to be some sort of despairing hysteria which grips a young girl when she realizes that her dreams of stage prominence and movie glamour will never be fulfilled. Too often, the girl tries to hide her failure from friends and relatives by disappearing from sight.

The inner workings of the Bureau of Missing Persons, that colorful and efficient section of the metropolitan police department which handles the cases of those vanished girls is now being shown on the McCarthy Theatre screen in the feature production "Missing Daughters." The gripping camera and the high-powered arc lights of the films were turned over the tragic true-life case histories of stage-struck girls. The sensational stories picked up by the whispered confidences between the bureau and amateur detectives.

The resulting film is hailed as a stirring drama of human interest, which transforms cold statistics into gripping romantic melodrama, telling the story of a young girl's struggle who hopes to become a great actress. Then, the dramatic battle and warfare between a radio commentator and the leader of a "hostess club" ring. Richard Arlen and Rochelle Hudson head an unusually fine cast, along with Marian Marsh, Jean Rae, Isabel Jewel in the story of "Missing Daughters." And that famous trio of love roles are handled to perfection on the screen one of the most dramatic and thrilling films within the past five years.

"Missing Daughters" is the first of a series of thrills—and who knows?—perhaps heartbreaking, in addition to "Missing Daughters," includes the first authentic expose of the racket which preys on girls by taking place all over the world, "Smashing the Spy Ring." Other features include one of the most thrilling mystery stories ever told. Always just seem to be able to put over a thrill that is more that he portrays, Ralph Bellamy, co-starred with lovely Fay Wray, in the two parts of this mystery-drama, "Honeymoon, Inc." Tommy, Ann Dorans, Walter Kingsford, Lucien Littlefield, Steven Hull, "Football Giants," an interesting sports subjects adds enjoyment to the two-hour program of presentations of the above feature productions.

AT THE STRAND

"Each Dawn I Die"

"Miracles For Sale"

For a single picture to have seven fitting replies, it would, indeed, be a rare one. Plenty of films surround their ace with a fine supporting cast, but subordinate villains invariably are called henchmen. The novelty of the current setup in "Each Dawn I Die" lay in the fact that none of the seven "heavies" was a henchman. Each was an individual specialist in skullduggery, hence, the race for marquee billing was wide open.

George Bury, Thurston Hall, John Wray, Joe Downing, Alan Baxter and Willard Robertson were the seven. Each was a handicap. Jory and Hall played the crooked prosecutors who framed James Cagney into the penitentiary on a "bum rap" and kept him there. Wray was a brutal screw and Downing the sly trusty who were convict "stool pigeons" and Baxter, Bury and Robertson was a vicious deputy.

Combine that line-up with the fact that Cagney, Jane Bryan and Alan Baxter are absolute tops in screen menace and add Cagney's personality, the ace "heavy" of a decade ago, in the prison warden role, and it is easy to see why the cast is the one to pick.

Producing the two stars in an extraordinarily able cast, Playing opposite Cagney in her first lead in a picture, Miss Bryan, in this role gives a rare picture of tender delicacy, sympathy and pathos, as the sweetheart of the wrongfully imprisoned man. The only other woman in the cast is Frances Farmer who gives an intensely moving performance as Cagney's mother.

"Miracles For Sale"

The year's best selling mystery novel was brought to the screen last filing mystery we refer you to "Miracles for Sale" produced by Mr. Metcalfe's companion feature attraction at the Belle, with the popular romantic team Robert Young and Florence Rice in the leading roles, and featuring Frank Craven and Frank Craven in supporting roles.

The popular Belle news of the day will be presented on the same program.

IL DUCE

Italy's desire to keep clear of the war seemed all strong as ever. Informed circles said they expected Italy to keep her present nonbelligerent status as long as possible and at least for some time to come.

At "Decisive Point"

These sources expressed belief a call by Germany for Italian help would come only when aid actually is needed and that such a request now would be a sign of German weakness.

The authoritative Fascist editor, Virginio Gayda, wrote yesterday in Il Giornale d' Italia that European powers were at a "decisive point." Gayda spoke of "Italy and Germany" and other Fascist editorials mentioned the word "Axis" after a month of disuse. However, the press refrained from any bellicose utterances.

The final Italian casualty list in the Spanish war was published yesterday, bringing the total to about 4,000 dead and 15,000 wounded.

Shannonville

Shannonville—A most successful euchre was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Cole under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild of Trinity Church, Tuesday evening. A most enjoyable evening was spent. A delicious lunch was served by the ladies. The prize winners were: Ladies' first prize, Mrs. Houston, consolation, Mrs. Herb Houston; gents' first prize, Mr. Earl Murphy, consolation, Mr. Keith Carbolt. The gathering was then called to order and the following address was read by Miss Ida Cole:

Dear Phyllis and Barney:

Your many friends are gathered here this evening to celebrate with you one evening in your recent marriage. We might take this opportunity also to extend our best wishes and hopes for future happiness and success that a long life time together can bring.

We have known you, Phyllis from childhood and have followed your future with interest and now in this important undertaking of making a home, wish you well. To you Barney, although not entirely a stranger to many of us, we would have you feel the welcome of our affections and sincerity of our wishes.

May we leave with you a quotation to guide you as you travel through life

Think not that romance is ended
That youth's curtain has descended,
And love's pretty play is done
For its only just begun
Bliter cares will some day find you
Closer, closer, they will bind you
If together you will run
Cares grow sweet when lovers share them.

Never stoop to unbelieving
Even when your heart is grieving
To what comes of winter weather,
In disaster stand together
Hope and love will conquer in night
Love shall bring you to the light.
Now we ask you to accept these gifts and hope that we will always be remembered by you both.
Signed on behalf of the friends and community, Jean Kent, Bertha Kent.

Mr. and Mrs. B. Parsons made the presentation. Dainty refreshments and a delicious lunch was served by the hostess and helpers. Then a social evening was enjoyed.

CEFERINO GARCIA NEW CHAMP OF MIDDLEWEIGHTS

Scores Technical Knockout Over Fred Apostoli in Seventh Round

SLUGGING MATCH

From Opening Gong Garcia Carried Battle to Heavier Opponent

By WHITNEY MARTIN

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 3 (AP)—The long trail ended today for Ceferino Garcia, the fog-fisted whirlwind from Los Angeles, but not at the original destination.

Thrice thwarted in bids for the world welterweight title, the Filipino won the world middleweight crown. New York and California precincts last night by scoring a technical knockout over Fred Apostoli of San Francisco after 2:59 of the seventh round of a bitter slugging match.

Garcia carried the message with a series of rights and lefts which sent the befogged titleholder down in the fourth before Referee Billy Cavanaugh, with Apostoli down a third time, waved Garcia away and ended the fight.

In the clinches Apostoli had slightly the best of it, but at long range Garcia's blows carried the more authority and he virtually ignored Apostoli's tatooing left.

Each got his licks in during the fourth round the ringing in earnest: Rights and lefts rammed off the jaws of the willing Apostoli. Finally collapsed, took a two count, rose to face another barrage and again went down.

He took this count on his knees, head erect and eyes staring vacantly into space. He managed to get up, but Referee Cavanaugh waved him and it was all over.

The bout, the first of the indoor fistic season, drew 11,464 spectators and left Garcia with a purse of $18,031. Garcia weighed 135¾. Apostoli the limit of 160.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK — By R. J. SCOTT

The Gold Piece

By FRANCES ELLIOTT

He told the coroner how on the morning of September tenth he took the man up to 504, which was the bridal suite.

The man was a young guy with black eyes and he had on a gray suit and a pink flower in his buttonhole and his nails cleaned up with a manicure. Johnnie took the man in the front room of the suite and pulled the curtains up and hung the quiet sign on the door. The girl wasn't with him but the man said she would be along in a few minutes.

The big gold piece the man gave him for a trip burned like fire in his pocket. He didn't tell the coroner about it for he would think maybe he croaked the man.

He kept thinking of one time he had picked up a piece of money that fell from the pocket of a sailor who had drowned himself. And an old sea captain grabbed it away from him and threw it in the water.

"Don't you do that as long as you live!" he told Johnny. "Touch the coin of a man who's croaked himself, there's a curse on whoever handles it and you want to get rid of it as quickly as you can."

If he could only slip the gold piece to somebody. But to whom?

He had kept a tight lip about the wedding breakfast. When the man had asked him to come back at his lunch hour he had thought it was a good break. And then look what a break it turned out to be.

The man sure knew how to order. Mushrooms as big as saucers, fried chicken, avocado salad, raspberry parfait. And rose sprigs out of the vases.

While Johnnie stuffed himself the man drummed with his fork and then he told about the doll. Why she didn't show up was because she told him that morning she was going to marry another guy. When he she thought he was in for the big money he was FOOLED, see, for she was his doll then, all right. But when he was down for the wedding she walked out on him.

"And so, Kid, I thought I would go on with it," he said. He had just enough money to pay for the dinner and the gold piece which he gave to Johnnie. And then all of a sudden he yelled—

"Just a headache powder, Kid," and as quick as a flash he poured on a cup of coffee from the pot and grabbed a white powder out of his pocket and sifted it into the cup.

Johnnie shook all over, remembering how his knife fell out of his hand. He tried to knock the cup off the table but the man tilted it up and the hot coffee ran down his throat and then right away his gullet began to rattle and his eyes turned back in his head, as he fell over the table—

The maid told the coroner how she came down the hall and found the door to 504 open. the table turned over, flowers and stuff all over and the man on the floor. The house doctor said it was cyanide and the man was dead before he got there.

The coroner called the girl in front of Johnnie. She was a flashy looker with big baby blue eyes and a hard stare.

She said Julian Clisby—that was the man's name—roomed at their house. She had been out with him a few times. He always talked like a millionaire even when he couldn't pay his room rent. He had some invention that was going to bring the big money but it never did. She was engaged to another man and she didn't see why they were trying to hang anything on her.

"Are you asking me?" the girl said. She dusted her nose with a powder puff. It was already as white as a blizzard.

She was the doll, all right. From things the guy let fall she was nothing but a cheap little painter's number. And a good guy had bumped off Clisby and the bride had sat with a bunch of orchids on her fur and a diamond on her hand as big as a headlight.

Getting off well, she was.

When the inquest was over and the girl started to go, Johnnie pulled at her arm. "Didn't you drop something, lady?"

The girl looked down at the big gold piece shining on the floor. She scowled at Johnnie and looked around to see if anybody was looking and then she reached down and scooped up the gold piece and shoved it into her bag.

As she walked away Johnnie called after her. "It'll be a good luck piece for your wedding day. And the lucks all yours, Baby," he said under his breath. "You've sure got something coming."

Tweed and Madoc High Schools opened the rugby season on the local gridiron on Thursday. The visitors who fielded practically the same team as last year, outclassed the locals 18 to 11.

The visitors opened the scoring early in the first quarter when McCoy carried the ball over Tweed's goal line for a major score. The locals who favored the aerial route for their gains tied the score on a run of forty yards by Counsyea and two forward passes. B. Hawthorne scored Madoc's second touchdown in the second quarter on a series of bucks to make the score 10 to 5. The visitors picked up their remaining points by kicking singles.

Counsyea who scored both of Tweed's touchdowns played a bang up game, as did G. Wagar. Parrit and Luffman. The home team showed some excellent tackling with Connor and Rivers especially effective. - Stewart. Munroe and Harris turned in nice efforts for the visitors.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct 3 (AP) — Stock market leaders ran up boosts of fractions to around a point today but fell back in the session's end. Near the fourth hour prices were well mixed.

Stocks resistant most of the time were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Eastman Kodak, Kennecott, Briggs Mfg., Peoples Gas, Western Union, Westinghouse Electric and Caterpillar.

Backward were International Harvester, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Johns-Manville, American Telephone and General Motors.

C.P.R. and Dome inched forward in the Toronto mining while McIntyre Porcupine drifted lower. Dominions 4½ were under mild pressure in the bond market.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 3—(CP)—Abitibi issues were among the few active on the dull board on Toronto Exchange today. Publication of new proposals for the company's reorganization evidently was not greeted with any enthusiasm, the common dropping almost a full point to 1.35 and the preferred slipping ¼ to 16.

Indices were mixed at golds, industrials and Base Metals slipping off with Golds and Western Oils improving. All changes were fractional. In the slowest session in five years sales totalled only 8,000 at noon and 89,000 at one o'clock.

Western Oils which were firm to strong in early dealings slipped off in the afternoon. Calgary and Edmonton held a 5-cent advance however, Home dropped to 2.70, off one.

Trend Gwillie was the only interesting Base Metal, gaining a few cents at 2.25. Golds were almost entirely neglected. Active with Abitibi issues in the Industrials was Steel Canada which, while strong, up a couple at 42.

Prices Steady On City Market

Little change was noted in prices at the city market today where a good early-week offering of vegetables was available. Egg quotations were steady, with a small stock offered at 25 cents a dozen for "A" grades. Chicken was not as heavy as usual with a few choice four-pounders and birds quoted at from $1.10 each.

Peaches and grapes offered by the "steamer" men handled a good fruit display with the former selling at 25 and 30 cents the six quart basket and the latter in blue and white varieties offered at 20 and 25 cents for the same quantity.

MacIntosh Red apples were offered at 40 cents the bushel, with Wolf Rivers and Alexanders selling at 30 cents for the same basket. Other fruits on display were quoted at 40 and 50 cents the basket respectively, with a few items offered at 5 and 10 cents each.

Potato prices were steady with bushels available at $1.10. Sweet corn in diminishing quantities was offered at 10 cents the dozen ears with home-grown tomatoes moving well at 60 cents the bushel. Other vegetable quotations were firm at week-end prices.

Butter, Egg Prices Show Improvement

Toronto, Oct. 3. — An improved tone was evident in both butter and eggs at Toronto yesterday.

Trading picked up in the afternoon on the butter market and clearance sales of 1,000 to the wholesale trade at 27½c per pound. No interest could be aroused in the western make at 26c to 28½c.

While fresh receipts were ample for the demand on the egg market, prices were steadier, with offerings clearing more readily under better inquiry. Grades A-large and A-medium rose to the range at 30½c to 31c, while B's were 26c respectively in the graded division. Other sections maintained former levels.

FRENCH TROOPS

Liaison Lines Established

Liaison lines have been quickly established with the French ready across the border, at points along the northern half of the front where the French have made advances.

"Great activity" by patrols on both sides during the night was reported in the French army communique this morning.

Latest official advices from the front reported no heavy fighting in the offensive zone between the Rhine and Moselle rivers, while last night's communique said "local infantry attacks have been resumed near Saarlouis and east of the Saar while German detachments fell on German localities behind our line."

French units also were engaged in a "war of mines." They were reported to have exploded a number of them from safe distances. Artillery aided in this by raking Hunnish-appearing territory given up by the Germans.

String of Mines Set Off

One shell set off a string of mines almost 1,000 yards long. They exploded like a string of mammoth firecrackers.

Aside from constant localized parrying efforts the Germans showed little activity, it was reported. This led military observers to believe they had orders to remain strict fighting while Berlin concentrated on diplomacy.

The German staff still held strong frontal positions immediately before Saarbrucken, it was reported in clarification of previous advices that this capital of the rich Saar industrial basin had been dislodged or encircled.

The French were said not to have given battle before Saarbrucken because of the terrific obstacles of encirclement to a frontal movement. Moreover, the encirclement movement, it was believed, might precipitate, it was said, because the French feared action for their advanced wings on either side of the city.

Quick Action Needed

Some French military writers, in analyzing the French defensive power, argued that the Germans failed to take Saarbrucken "right in view" of the quick action they thought Germany needed to counter the British blockade.

Genevieve Taboulis, authoritative French communist, said today that the absence of an official communique from Saarbrucken of Italo-German talks was proof of Berlin's increasing nervousness over co-operation between Berlin and Moscow.

It is remarkable that no bellicerous communique was issued at Berlin," Mme. Taboulis wrote in L'Oeuvre. "German-Italian meetings always have been followed by publication of communiques in Berlin. On the other hand the word 'Axis' has not been mentioned in Italian newspapers nor in official communiques in recent days."

Deakes Not Agreeing

"Diplomatic circles note that since the opening of hostilities Italy has withdrawn more and more to an attitude related to its own interests. The appearance of the Soviet Union has provoked some nervousness in Rome and Italian newspapers and editorials are arousing Italy's attention. It is not believed that Hitler's desires will be realized by the Italian Government.

"It is understood that Hitler is insisting on disarmament, the reentry of the Reich into general agreements, reconstitution of the Grand Duchy of Warsaw', partial reconstitution of Austria-Hungarian Empire and the return of the new frontiers of the Reich."

Importance Emphasized

London, Oct. 3—(CP)—The importance of the French advance in the Saar was emphasized today by British newspapers.

"It would seem that the Germans are beginning to feel deep concern over the French advance on Saarbrucken," said the Manchester Guardian. "This advance, although it seems very small on the map, is of considerable importance, and has not been made by easy operations.

"The French are on three sides of the Saar capital, while the forward side is so constituted by artillery fire that none can approach it," said the Daily Mail Post.

"The line about Saarbrucken is regarded by the enemy as a key sector of the Siegfried defences. At present the enemy seems to give ground, and lost more at Saarlautern yesterday, where an high ground is now in French hands."

WIDELY CHEERING

Fifth Report.

It was the prime minister's fifth progress report to the country since war was declared a month ago. He defined the three big developments of the past week as Germany and Russian partition of Poland, the Russian invasion of the Baltic states of Europe and the German-Russian economic agreement.

He declared "there has been in some quarters a demand that his Majesty's government should define their attitude in the face of these developments but I see nothing in what has happened that should lead the country to modify the attitude which it has taken in the past."

The partition of Poland was a blow to that country, "but it by no means follows that the arrangement will endure to the ultimate advantage of Germany and still less should it affect the aims of his Majesty's government."

"There is nothing in that agreement that should cause us to do anything different from what we are doing now, mobilizing all the resources and all the might of the British Empire for the effective prosecution of the war.

Reason Often Proclaimed.

"The reason for which this country entered the war has been frequently proclaimed. It was to put an end to successive acts of German aggression which threatened the freedom and very security of all the nations of Europe.

"If Poland was the direct occasion of the war, it was not the fundamental reason. That cause was the overwhelming sense in this country and in France, with all its implications, of the state of affairs in which the whole of Europe were faced, with the alternative of surrendering their freedom or of mobilizing their resources in a supreme effort to defend it."

He declared no threat would cause the country to abandon the purpose for which it had entered the war.

Germany and Russia were obscure that "the only alternative was the liquidation of the war, the prime minister said. That is seems to combine the suggestion of some proposal for peace with a scarcely veiled threat of the consequences if the proposal should be refused."

Don't Know Proposals.

"I cannot anticipate what the nature of such proposal might be," he added. "But I can say at once that no threat would ever induce his majesty's government to abandon the purpose for which we have engaged in this struggle.

He was referring directly to the Russo-German agreement on Poland and also to the reference in the alternative of Russo-German "spheres of influence" in British and Prance refuse."

The passage in the declaration, Mr. Chamberlain declared, "seems to convey the...suggestion of some proposal to be made, coupled with a veiled threat as to the consequences if the proposal were refused."

"I cannot anticipate what the nature of any such proposal might be," he declared.

"But no mere assurance from the German government could be accepted by us.

"We declared the war to continue for no less purpose than to end the overwhelming opinion in this country and in France, with all its implications, of the state of violence and chaos which, as the free world of government — once pledged — must henceforth be kept."

Nothing to Modify Attitude

"I see nothing in what has happened which should lead this government to modify the attitude which it has taken in the past. There is nothing in the agreement between Germany and Russia that should cause us to do anything different from what we are doing now."

The prime minister said the Russo-German agreement had "made no mention of Poland "but it by no means follows that the arrangement will endure to the ultimate advantage of Germany and still less should it affect the aims of his Majesty's government."

Reason Often Proclaimed.

"The reason for which this country entered the war has been frequently proclaimed. It was to put an end to successive acts of German aggression which threatened the freedom and very security of all the nations of Europe.

"If Poland was the direct occasion of the war, it was not the fundamental reason. That cause was the overwhelming sense in this country and in France, with all its implications, of the state of affairs in which the whole of Europe were faced, with the alternative of surrendering their freedom or of mobilizing their resources in a supreme effort to defend it."

He declared that Britain's war aim is to "put to an end the successive acts of German aggression which have threatened the freedom and very security of all the nations of Europe."

Reporting on conduct of the war, Mr. Chamberlain said that on the Western front "some 200,000 progress has been made by the French while the British Field Force has made useful points for observation over the German defences."

'Large British Army' Alongside French

He added that a "large British army" is taking its place alongside the French.

The Prime Minister told of day and night reconnaissance flights by Royal Air Force units and said "there is no question of establishing enemy fighter aircraft."

Admiralty announcements by the Prime Minister on the treasury bench as First Lord of the Admiralty and as Malaky was hunched penalively over the rail of the diplomatic gallery.

Leaders Concur

Labor and Liberal leaders concurred in the Prime Minister's statement. Clement Attlee, Labor leader, said "we must carefully examine every kind of a proposal for peace, but we must deal with realities and it is no good thinking there is peace when there is no peace."

Sir Archibald Sinclair, Liberal leader said: "So long as Germany is governed by Hitler and the people who surround him, we will constantly be confronted with the impossibility of submission to his will and the dread alternative of war. This country was never more united, better prepared to buy at the price of freedom and the moral values of civilization."

David Lloyd George, speaking for the Welsh Nationalists, said the end of the war, declared: "If peace depends on the word of Hitler we shall have to wait a long time. No peace could ever get some other and more assured guarantee."

GERMANY CANNOT

"The war is only a month old. But the major factors are already emerging. The British and French fleets will control the seven seas despite submarines and airplanes, and can sit there until their enemy is exhausted.

"By their sea power the allies can protect England and all the outlying possessions of both empires from invasion. Their man power and that of France unites form a blunder into taking wild adventures in military offensives.

"Aerial warfare may be destructive, but that works both ways and perhaps never before, has it been more conclusive of any war.

Thanks Canada's Support

"German shipping is already driven off the seven seas in 30 days. Italy would have the same fate if she joined in, which at the moment is extremely improbable. I am confident that our submarine warfare will make this dominance of sea power may be damaged, but cannot be destroyed over a year.

"The submarine may be troublesome, but it is not decisive. The progress in methods of detecting submarines is very great indeed and this type of warfare is less dangerous than formerly. Even in the last war it had no paralyzing effect upon naval command of the seas.

"The losses of merchant shipping by the first month are much less than in the first month after the intensive submarine attack began in 1917. Then as now, the allies may have lost perhaps 200,000 tons of merchant ships. They have 20,000,000 tons left, and can hire more. They cannot be driven out of either their materials by any combination of European powers. France can, whether in Germany, or even Italy or even Russia, send troops to invade with troops either England or the British or French possessions in Africa, India, Australia or the western hemisphere. Allied sea power will prevent it.

French Army Best In World

"On the military front the sole point of attack is on continental land. Hitler would very much like more powerful fortifications and armies than in 1914. I am confident that the British army will confirm that it takes two or three times the superiority in men to attack to overcome the man power behind modern fortifications than was necessary in the last war. The French army is the best in the world."

As to Germany's air power, Mr. Hoover was quoted as saying "no doubt Germany has a large air force or not.

"I doubt the most indeterminate phase of this war so far is the effect of the improved aircraft. The allies have a great numerical superiority of Germany, which is not certain, but probable, and in other air fleets, yet again in the defence there is the effect to superior numbers by the improved anti-aircraft guns and other grounds protections. The increased power of defence above air attacks can have no conclusive effect on the capture of a country that comes from invasion of troops alone.

Economic Front Vital

"The economic front is as vital in this war as in the last war. In foodstuffs Germany starts the war on bread cards. The French are practically self-supporting in food. The British Empire has enormously increased its food production since the Great War. That enables England to obtain most of her supplies from within her own dominions.

"Germany, except for coal, potash and nitrate, does not possess a full supply of any essential raw material for war.

"The allies, on the other hand, produce in their own empires 90 per cent of the needed steel, all their coal, and all the oil, copper, lead, zinc, tin, nickel and alloys that they need. And besides, the seven seas are open to them for everything else.

"... Purchasing power for supplies from outside national borders is vital to belligerents in modern war. The Allies have large gold stocks. Germany must buy her large deficiencies from other nations. She has no consequential amount of gold and her credit is not large. She must continue to keep people working and producing with which to pay. That decreases available man power".

Tradition of Theatre Upheld by Girl Performer

Bonnie Sewrey Give Fine Performance Despite Fact Her Mother Near Death in Toronto

"The show must go on." Irrespective of what happen behind the stage, or in the private life of an actor, when the "cue" comes, they must be ready to appear. Long known as one of the finest traditions of the theatre, the finest quality of an artist when they bury personal emotions beneath their greasepaint, or stage personality, was perhaps never more exemplified than it was here last night.

Those of the large audience that filled the Belleville Collegiate Institute to overflowing to witness the Imperial Oil Company's "Three-Star Entertainers", realize that beneath the exterior of pretty Bonnie Sewrey, girl-star of the show, that her heart-strings were being wrung like a near-broken heart.

Little did it dream that as the attractive singer and comedienne literally captured the hearts of her audience with an outstanding performance, was on the verge of tears, behind a mask of melody, mirth and mould. A true trouper, her performance did not suffer. She was called back time after time and graciously responded.

But in her dressing room it was another Bonnie Sewrey that was apparent. For, a few hours previous to the rising of the curtain Miss Sewrey received word that her mother was on that "borderline" between life and death in her home in Toronto. At first she was tempted to leave immediately for the bedside. But the fine artist that she is, she knew the footlights awaited her. Tradition demanded that she stay and uphold it and the spirit of cheer that has made the Canadian stage one of the finest institutions in the dominion.

Immediately after the show, with the plaudits of her public still ringing in her ears, she dashed away from the theatre to get in touch with her family. There was no news at a late hour last night.

Last night's show attended the sterling performance of her troupe last night would have recognized the sorrow-stricken girl who sat in her bedroom in a Front street hotel all night, armed with appropriation and partial dread, the ring of the room telephone.

SOVIET MAY SEEK

Some sources expressed belief Finland "would be next" in the series of rapid negotiations, which doubt have brought Russia increased trade concessions with Estonia and the right to establish naval bases in the Gulf.

Report Denied

(Reports Finland had received an invitation to send an envoy to Moscow were denied authoritatively in Helsinki.)

The possibility of diplomatic moves affecting the situation in the Black Sea hovered in the background, meanwhile, as Turkey's foreign minister, Shukru Saracoglu, remained in Moscow for further conversations with the Soviets.

No comment was forthcoming on the two-hour conference which Joseph Stalin and other Soviet officials held last night with Munitions Minister of the Latvian Minister's arrival.

Diplomatic circles took it for granted the conversations were aimed at obtaining from Latvia assurances about the future of the Estonian Foxtrot.

Their significance lay in indication here whether a visit might be expected to the Kremlin soon by the Rumanian Foreign Minister, Grigore Gafencu, who earlier had been reported planning a trip to Moscow.

(In Bucharest, it was said Gafencu had decided to decline his visit to Moscow, possibly until the Turkish Foreign Minister stops in the Rumanian capital en route to Istanbul.)

It was understood that British Ambassador Sir William Seeds and the French Charge D'Affaires, Jean Payart, had called on the Turkish delegation yesterday, but the British Embassy declined to confirm or deny the report.

Conflict Will Likely Produce New Weapons of Destruction, New Uses, Developments of Old

By HAROLD PETERS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

One thing that seems certain in an unpredictable war is that the conflict will produce new weapons of destruction and new uses and developments of old ones. Only the first battles are no indication of what form the innovations may take.

In his "conqueror's speech" in Danzig in mid-September Adolf Hitler referred to the invincibility of the British navy on water but added that Germany also had a formidable arm. While most military observers believe he meant air power—full air force, others believe he might have referred to some secret weapon.

The war in its opening stage, however, failed to bear out the penny-dreadful rumors of the past few years that scientists had developed fantastic rays—rays that would take life at various distance, rays that would put gasoline engines out of commission by neutralizing the electric spark—that Germany had available a wood-burning plane operating cheaply and efficiently.

Scientists Work Constantly.

In laboratories and machine shops scientists of the belligerents have been work constantly over new ideas. Any successes they achieve will become known only when they are used, as was the case with the two main surprises of the first great war. The first was poison gas and the second the tank.

Development of the machine-gun from a comparative toy, of the depth charge and the convoy system as weapons against the submarine, were other products of the 1914-18 demands for new arms.

One new weapon—defensive only—to emerge from this war is yet untried. It is the fantastic looking balloon apparatus that London sends up to snarl hostile airplanes which may seek to bomb it.

Riding at various heights, attached to cables and supporting horizontal vanes, these balloons are intended to prevent planes from approaching London at heights that would allow accuracy of bombing.

Poison gas was the first startling surprise of the last war. It was sprung by Germany on the Canadians at Ypres April 22, 1915.

Depended On Wind.

Professor Haber, a distinguished chemist of Jewish origin, propounded the idea of poison gas warfare to the German high command but found them skeptical and slow to appreciate its possibilities. They insisted Haber to the use of cylinders instead of shells, so that the use of gas depended entirely on favorable wind.

When gas was first employed the German high command failed to provide the reserve manpower and extra ammunition necessary to capitalize on the wide gap the gas opened and thus failed to reap the advantage they might have. Quickly gas masks were developed, warnings arranged to signal approach of the deadly chemicals and gradually the weapon lost its first effectiveness.

The tank, too, failed to be used to its fullest extent while the element of surprise was still present. It was a British invention, developed by Col. E. D. Swinton of the Royal Engineers.

Colonel Swinton persuaded Winston Churchill—then, as now, First Lord of the Admiralty, of the value of the machines and demanded that they be not used until sufficient numbers were available to obtain the full effects of their surprise appearance. The British command in France agreed but in September, 1916, ordered their premature debut.

Order Reinstated.

Although proved their effectiveness despite their small numbers, an adverse report to London caused cancellation of an order for 1,000 which had just been given. The order subsequently was reinstated.

The German verdict was that the tank proved the most dangerous and decisive weapon to be employed against them. Their recent mechanized onslaught in Poland showed what extent the tank has become a major factor in modern warfare.

The machine-gun nest—the start of the last war was "an overrated" weapon, in the opinion of Sir Douglas Haig. But before the war was over Earl Haig, as he became, saw his forces equipped with 32 light machine guns to a battalion and almost as many heavy machine guns. Credit for this went to Lloyd George, then prime minister.

Double for Good Luck.

Haig was quoted as saying early in the war that two machine-guns a battalion were "more than sufficient". Sir Eric Geddes was sent to France to look into the possibilities of the weapon. It is related the head of the British machine-gun school suggested Britain needed 20,000 of the rapid-fire arms, while Lord Kitchener was reported to have said four to a battalion would be about right.

When Sir Eric reported back to Lloyd George, the prime minister is said to have told him: "Take Kitchener's maximum, square it, multiply the result by two—and when you are in sight of that double it again for good luck."

The answer was 64 and that is approximately the number of machine guns British battalions had at the end of the last war. Today the number is much higher.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, Oct. 3 (Special)—Competition has been and extremely exciting when athletes of St. Peter's Separate School took part in the school's annual track and field meet here Friday afternoon. Weather conditions were ideal for the games and the thirty-four well carded events ran off without a hitch. Running and jumping events featured the program while novelties provided a great deal of interest for the many onlookers who gathered to watch the sports exhibition. Harry Norton has been crowned the 1940 boy's champion and will be presented with a silver trophy for his fine display, while Eileen Jordan and Mary Dolan share the girls' honors and are to be given medals for their triumphant efforts.

Send Telegrams and Flowers

The many Trenton friends of P.C. Fred R. Blucher who was killed on duty west of Toronto on Saturday sent telegrams of condolence and wreaths of flowers to his wife who lives in Toronto. The late traffic officer was a frequent visitor to the Trenton police station when he was stationed at Cobourg before he was transferred to the west.

R. and P. E. Notes

The soldier boys of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment here resumed mind marching every day providing the route carried them past the Canadian Dominion Factory recently opened at the southern end of the town on Dufferin Ave. For the last time the regiment was in the vicinity of the doughnut factory the heads of the firm invited the entire body (156 strong) onto the factory property and fed them with nice, fresh doughnuts. Of course the press missed out by one town block, having left the parade at the corner of Wragg and Division Streets. Yesterday's parade in the morning took the greatly improved Trenton roads along Quinte Street to Dundas onto King to Division to Front and back to the drill ground on the bay shore behind the post office. Another parade was Friday and a lot of local businessmen profited when recruits straightened kinks and accoutre or made substantial payments on same. Major D. Graham, second in command of the regiment, headed the marchers today. To whom it may concern: Canteen tickets are issued here this coming Thursday. Uniforms are slow in arriving and apparently the government issuer is withholding old stock which is being replaced rapidly by the new and modern battle suit. Incidentally an issue of the latest uniforms was expected to arrive here yesterday. Anyway the volunteers are anxiously awaiting their new outfits. The delay is host the photographers, too, since a host of recruits have promised to have pictures taken in their new outfits.

Magician Demonstrates That Hand is Not Quicker Than Eye

Ed. Charles Shows That Diversion of Spectator's Attention is Very Important

WORKS SMOOTHLY

In a brief chat with Canada's Leading Magician, who is slated to appear at the McCarthy Theatre for the latter half of this week, a reporter discovered among other things that the hand is not quicker than the eye.

As baldly explained by Mr. Charles, whose suave and easy manner bespeaks the seasoned trouper, a modern magician depends not, so much upon speedy movements of the hands as upon the ability to divert the spectators attention, either by means of a gesture or verbal suggestion, which results in the audience looking 'in the right place at the wrong time.'

To break this statement down still further, he demonstrated with a coin which he casually caused to vanish and reappear and all without the slightest semblance of speed or for that matter any untoward motion.

As he smilingly vanished the coin once more, appeared by merely closing his fingers over it, slowly and deliberately, the reporter was thoroughly convinced that speed of digital movement is not essential in the performance of sleight of hand in the modern manner as it is exemplified by Edward Charles.

A daring expose of the minds of members of the editorial staff of this newspaper was made this morning by Mr. Charles. Whilst all the ease of the experienced "mind-reader" he extracted the innermost thoughts of reporters and editors as they sat at desk and typewriter.

Initials of friends, secreted within the minds of the scribes appeared magically on the back of a cigarette-box. The Queen of Hearts disappeared into thin air from the face of a pack of cards and reappeared in another position within the deck. He selected numbers and letters, thought of by the newspapermen, with an uncanny accuracy.

It was a clever demonstration, that not only brought out Mr. Charles' ability along these lines but the clean thoughts and minds of the members of the newspaper staff.

Such deftness of applied psychology, if it is any criterion of the things he is capable of when surrounded by a ten of magical equipment, surely indicates that Belleville theatregoers are in for a superlative magical show at the McCarthy.

Weather Too Good For Good Hunting

"There have been reports of some exceptionally fine duck shooting for the opening of the season, especially in the western section of Prince Edward County around Consecon and Weller's Bay" revealed Game Warden Herb McCabe when referring to the subject today. "Numerous hunters have informed me they secured limit bags of ducks without much difficulty west of Belleville. However, east of the city hunters are only meeting with average hunting luck, which might be attributed to the fine weather conditions,' explained Inspector McCabe as he added that the wild ducks were remaining out in the open waters to the east owing to the fine weather.

Inspector McCabe also stated that the partridge hunting season for this section of the province would include two six-day shooting periods, the first period is from Oct. 9th to 14th, inclusive, while the second is from the 6th of Nov. to the 11th., also inclusive.

P. E. Canning Factories Accept All Grades Tomatoes at Present

With over two million pounds of canned goods cleaned out of warehouses during the past two weeks, canning factories in the district of Prince Edward County are rushing operations to as much speed as possible before the annual Autumn freeze-up occurs.

While the tomato and corn crops have been productive of more than average yield, the small acreage contracted this year will bring the stock of canned goods well below that of other years, it was learned from a reliable source.

All grades and grades of tomatoes are being accepted by factories in an effort to bolster the Autumn supply of canned goods.

However, Country Charting Course on Assumption Diplomatic Moves Merely Lull Before Storm

IMPERIAL CABINET

Times Gives Hint of What is Required of Germany Before Peace Can be Secured — Other Terms Are Stated

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 4 (CP)—Anthony Eden, the Secretary for the Dominions, told the House of Commons today that Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa were sending cabinet ministers to London to confer with the British government "as soon as practicable".

The Dominions Secretary was loudly cheered when he made the announcement in reply to a question by Clement Attlee, leader of the opposition.

Mr. Eden said the Dominions had been sounded on the proposal and added: "I am glad to say that the suggestion has been welcomed and the governments of Canada, the Commonwealth of Australia, New Zealand and the Union of South Africa are each arranging to send a cabinet minister to this country to confer with us as soon as practicable.

There have been reports here that Canada would be represented by Finance Minister J. L. Ralston or by Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence, but they lacked confirmation.

During the last war an imperial war cabinet was established as a permanent institution in northern and solidify all war effort. Nothing like that is under consideration at present.

Why The Weather?

Evolution of climate! It seems contradictory considering the constant reiteration that climate has not changed, to talk of the evolution of climate. While climate does not change perceptibly in a lifetime, there is abundant evidence that it has changed in historic times, and, of course, there must have been great changes in climate to account for the Ice Ages, the last of which reached its peak 20,000 years ago. Theories of ice age origin are various change in the amount of radiation from the sun, variation of distance of earth to sun, shifts in position of the poles, changes in composition of the atmosphere, rearrangements of elevation, area and disposition of land surfaces.

GERMAN THRUST THROUGH ALSACE IS CONTEMPLATED

For Centuries Gateway Between Vosges and Jura Mountains Route of Invaders of France

UNUSUAL ACTIVITY

By CHARLES FOLTZ
Associated Press Staff Writer

Basel, Switzerland, Oct. 4—(AP)—Rumors of an impending German thrust at France through Alsace and historic Burgundy Gate were heard today with reports of the strengthening of Nazi upper-Rhine garrisons and unusual activity along the river.

For centuries the gateway between the Vosges and Jura Mountains has been used by armies invading France from the east. The Romans were said to be concentrating soldiers, many of them veterans of the Polish war, at Black Forest and Upper Rhine forts.

At Istein, Germany's "Rhineland Gibraltar", shielded lights were reported at night over the Rhine shallows on the German side. Pontoons have been shipped into the Rhine Valley by the score.

A German strike from the Istein area probably would be rushed across Alsace territory between Mulhouse and the Swiss frontier which forms the southern tip to Burgundy Gate.

MAX ZEREBNY GOES UPON TRIAL

Is Accused of Counselling Edward Koshul to Murder Steve Kir

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 4 (CP)—The trial of Max Zerebny opened here on a charge of counselling Edward Koshul to murder Steve Kir.

Mr. Justice A. W. Greene and a jury heard Koshul testify that Zerebny, a native of Austria, had agreed to loan him $250 if witness would put poison in the whisky in Steve Kir's cellar.

Kir and Zerebny worked at the same factory and Zerebny said he was in love with Kir's wife, Koshul testified. He said Zerebny declared he and Mrs. Kir were "in love with each other," and Kir "should be done away with."

Koshul abandoned the idea of poisoning Kir and told him of the plan. The result was that Kir left town and stayed at the home of a friend in Guelph for two days.

Koshul testified that subsequently Zerebny gave him $145 in cash and a cheque for $100. He was supposed to get an additional $100 to pay some gangsters to erase Kir, but this was not paid, he said.

MISFORTUNES END IN DROWNING

Party of Seven Now Reduced to Six After Struggle Against Poverty

Parry Sound, Ont., Oct. 4—(CP)—Word that Joseph Shields of Vancouver was drowned in Otter Nalcott River was the culmination of a series of misfortunes which have taken at a little from and seven in a battle against poverty. Shields was drowned last Saturday and his body was recovered yesterday.

Shields joined Mr and Mrs. Edwin Carpenter of Toronto and their four children in their struggle to make a livelihood after they took themselves off the relief rolls.

The group acquired an old power boat last year and started to find a living from fishing and trapping. One accident after another befell them and the last Carpenter's wife and children were left in Toronto while the two men set off alone.

News reached here that Shields' body had been found on the river running into Georgian Bay. Apparently he had fallen out of a canoe while on the way to join Carpenter who was on his boat anchored in the Nalcott since early summer.

When the group first left Toronto in their battered old boat the skies were clear, but they were tossed in a heavy sea. Police and lifesavers towed it back to Toronto.

Then a storm smashed the rudder of the boat, which was towed again they were stopped at the locks of the Trent Canal by minor conditions. Last spring they finally reached the Georgian Bay area. Now the group is reduced to six.

Soviet Intervention, Antiquated Technique Explanation of Defeat

Editor's note: The following article was written for Havas News Agency by Lucien Romier, Director of the Paris newspaper, Le Figaro. He was a veteran correspondent during the Great War and is a well known war historian.

By LUCIEN ROMIER
(Copyright 1939 by The Havas News Agency)

Paris, Oct. 4 (CP-Havas)—Careful study of official communiques, dispatches by correspondents returning from the battle zones and analyses by military experts now permits accurate explanation of Poland's crushing defeat by Germany.

The real reasons behind the debacle are twofold—intervention of the Soviet Union, and the equipment and campaign plan of the Polish army, which were 25 years behind the Nazi machine.

At the beginning of the invasion semi-official circles in Berlin said Poland would be conquered in two weeks. It took nearly a month, and then only because the Soviet armies came sweeping in from the east.

Arrival Exactly Timed.

The Russians, in fact, arrived at the exact moment when part of the Polish forces was beginning to get in full swing and when the enemy's mechanized units were already shoving across breakdowns because of dwindling fuel and the strain of battle.

Joseph Stalin's manoeuvre should have been anticipated. The British Blue Book shows that on Aug. 15, when everyone thought the Danzig problem was soon to be solved, and when the German-Soviet non-aggression pact was still more than a week away, the Wilhelmstrasse informed the British ambassador that the Soviets would join in the partition of the Polish spoils.

Bolo on the diplomatic and military front, the Poles suffered from a lack of information, a weakness which has lost many wars. It is now clear that the Polish general staff was completely in the dark before the invasion began, concerning the new technique of lightning thrusts and heavy air offensives which the Germans had elaborated.

Spy Service Accurate.

Nor were the Poles aware of the immensity of the German troops concentrations on the north in East Prussia and on the south in Slovakia.

On the other hand, the Reich intelligence service was so accurate and so well organized that the Germans were able to fight the war almost on time-table schedule.

Poland's military tradition resulted on the sheer courage of the Polish soldier and the mobility of the cavalry. There was a fatal disdain for trenches and fortified works. These principles were futile in the face of the ultra-modern German tactics.

France to Carry on War 'Imposed on Us', Demands Security

Paris, Oct. 4—(AP)—Premier Daladier told the Chamber of Deputies foreign affairs committee tonight that France intended to continue the war that has been imposed on us."

"France does not wish to live longer in the state of insecurity of these last years," the Premier told the committee in a three-hour session.

"She refuses to bow to violence and accomplished facts. She wishes to put once between two aggressors but durable peace guaranteeing absolutely her national security within a system of security for all nations."

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Soviet Russia's recent dealings with neighboring nations bear a close resemblance to those practiced by Nazi Germany, just as Nazi methods in internal politics during the rise of Hitler to power resembled Communist Methods.

Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland were instances of the successful working out of the Nazi diplomatic technique which Russia now is applying to Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania. Poland resisted the technique to the point of war, but so far the little states standing in the path of Russia's expansion show no sign of taking that risk.

The technique consists first in finding a grievance, if possible, against the country upon whose territory the Nazi or Soviet government has designs. Persecution of a minority is a good one.

Troop Concentration

The next step is on the borders of the threatened state. Then an invitation is issued to the government of the threatened state to discuss terms of a settlement.

By Tuesday days the Russian Empire extended to the Baltic Sea and included the new independent republics of Lithuania, Latvia, Estonia and Finland. Soviet Russia was unable to hold these territories by force of arms following the Communist Revolution. Now, apparently, the Soviet Government, by applying the new Nazi technique, hopes to work its will with them.

Already Estonia has conceded Russia the right to maintain garrisons and fortifications on its soil. Lithuania and Latvia are now going through the formal process of negotiations which may end in similar arrangements.

The most powerful and most northerly nation of the Baltic group is Finland. With winter coming on it may be more difficult to move Soviet troops to the Finnish border. So Finland may escape Russian diplomatic advances for a time.

Both Clubs Play Errorless Ball, Yankees Having Three Double Plays

By JUDSON BAILEY
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Yankee Stadium, New York, Oct. 4 (AP)—In a dramatic, noisy ending Charley Keller tripled and Bill Dickey singled him home in the ninth inning today to give the world champion Yankees a 2-1 victory over Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the 1939 world series.

The sudden ending of one of the tightest baseball tests in recent series' history came with one out in the final frame. Keller sent a tremendous drive to the centre field wall, 407 feet from the plate and Ival Goodman barely got his hands on the ball. Joe DiMaggio was purposely passed and Dickey rifled a liner into short centre with the count one and one.

Second Inning.

Reds—On the first pitch McCormick lined a sharp single over Crosetti's head into left centre field for the first hit of the game and a roar from the crowd. Ottawa, Oct. 4 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King today announced that Resources Minister Crerar would go to London "shortly" for "personal consultation" with the United Kingdom Government, in accordance with the announcement made earlier today in the British House of Commons that the Dominions would send ministers to confer with the British Government.

The Prime Minister said Mr. Crerar would also confer on "the situation" with members of other Commonwealth Governments who may be in London at the same time.

Truck is Stolen And Owner Sent on Wild Goose Chase

Stratford, Ont., Oct. 4 (CP)— Some thief not only stole Henry Goldstein's truck with about $4,000 worth of automobile parts aboard, but it appears he made a goose call that brought Goldstein on a wild goose chase from Toronto to Stratford expecting to recover it.

The truck was stolen Monday night in Kitchener. On Tuesday someone telephoned Goldstein's office in Toronto and informed an employee that the truck had been recovered at Stratford with its cargo intact. The person calling said he represented the Provincial Police.

Kiwanis Club To Conduct Chicken Bingo

The Belleville Kiwanis Club will conduct a chicken bingo in the old A & P store near Victoria Avenue on Front Street on Thursday and Friday night of this week starting each evening at 7.30 o'clock according to an announcement made by the executive committee in charge of the Kiwanis luncheon held on Tuesday at the Quenna Hotel. Herb Muir is chairman of the committee and has devoted a great deal of his time to the event. Kiwanis has fostered a much better feeling between the town and urban district by assisting the children of Hastings County to the better enjoyment. The money derived from this project will be used as the money from the Carnival of the weekly war work and assisting any deserving young folks, that will in any way benefit the city.

Herb explained to the members, that last night's food and hand-made barred rock day-old chicks were distributed to 40 children of the county, each being given twenty-five Rock chicks. They also were given a feeder trough, drinking fountain for their chicks and 25 pounds of starter mash. In addition to each recipient was requested to look after his or her chicks in a humane manner and in the fall return to the Kiwanis Club 30 pounds of chickens live weight. "Every chick set was taken", said Herb Muir, "and already reports of losses have been obtained and in many instances there are 15 and 18 birds are reported after losses and returns to the club have been made."

A special prize has been donated by the Swift Company for the best group of chicks raised, and cash prizes were also awarded. Mr. Linn Fair, assistant representative of Hastings County and Mr. Hunter of the Swift Company kindly consented to act as judges and on October 17th the 40 Junior farmers will take stock of the Kiwanis Club, when the various prizes will be awarded. From this contest the Kiwanis Club will receive approximately 180 chickens averaging five pounds a piece and these are being prepared for market by the Swift Canadian Company and will be used for prizes at the bingo. This is an opportunity to secure a lot of fine fall fed chickens at a right price and also assist the Kiwanis Club in a worthwhile project.

No matter where you are, you are never far from a gasoline station: distribution is the basis of that business.

It is a fundamental too, in the telephone business. The telephone is available almost everywhere, a constant, dependable service at small cost.

Of more than five million conversations on Bell Telephone lines daily, thousands are made on impulse — a quick wish to talk immediately to someone in the next street, in another town, or on another continent.

We don't know when or to what point you may next want to talk—nor do you, perhaps. But it is comforting to think that it doesn't matter, really, since you can place a call wherever you are, whenever you choose.

"I'll tell you . . ."

"Why my children aren't cross any more..

"It was getting so that I didn't know what to do with them. I was so worried and nervous about THEM that Jim was actually worried about ME.

"But not any more. Everything is fine now.

"And rightly enough, it was a school chum who is a hospital dietician who straightened it all out. I met her at an alumni tea one afternoon. When she asked about the children, I told her my troubles.

"Donnie seemed run down and was as cross as could be. And Carol was so irritable. In fact, she was so cross and cranky that the kindergarten teacher said that I might have to keep her home unless she behaved better

"Do you know what she told me? She said that there are a lot of small children who act like that because they are HUNGRY. I couldn't imagine why she told me that! I told her that I gave the children three standard meals a day . . . that should certainly be enough. Then she told me that growing children often NEED to eat more often than adults. She suggested that I give them a sandwich to eat at recess time, and to be sure to give them a glass of MILK after school.

"She was right. In a short time the children were back to normal. Everything is fine now. And Carol's teacher said that she was as sweet as could be.

"I phoned my friend to thank her for her help. Then she gave me another tip. She said,

'Be sure that you always give your children the BEST quality milk!'

EFFECTIVE PROSECUTION OF THE WAR

The British Empire will not abandon the purpose for which it entered the struggle. While Britain stands ready to examine any peace proposals Hitler makes, no mere assurances from the present German government can be accepted by us," said Prime Minister Chamberlain yesterday. Britain and France will not be threatened by hints of Russian consultation.

The British Premier fastened upon the German Government the crime of broken undertakings, "their undertakings are worthless when it suits them they should be broken."

He made clear the British aim that there should be an end to the rule of violence and to the breaking of promises.

Everyone feels as Mr. Chamberlain that "nobody desires the war to continue for one unnecessary day," but the Allies' purpose must be achieved.

Mr. Chamberlain made it clear to Hitler and the German Government that the invasion of Poland was not the fundamental cause of the war. The Allied nations had felt the stab of affairs intolerable in which the countries of Europe were faced with the alternative of jeopardizing their freedom or of mobilizing their forces at regular intervals to defend it. The war was to end the successive acts of German aggression menacing all Europe. When the condition is satisfied the war will end.

That is the British stand. It is clear that Britain and France have not only their own welfare at stake but also that of civilization. It is no mere matter of boundaries and revival of old hatreds. It is modern war against a vicious principle of gangland in international affairs.

Nothing is transpired to make Britain and France veer from the course they have set before themselves.

AS SACRED AS THE GREAT CRUSADE

Lord Queenborough, President of Royal Society of St. George, was outspoken in London yesterday when he declared that the enemy confronting Britain today is "just as implacable and as deadly to the souls and lives of all free men as the barbarian hordes who swept across Europe after the collapse of the Roman Empire," and that "the cause which the Empire has embraced is as sacred as that which our forefathers on the great crusade 1,000 years ago."

Hitlerism represents that barbarism, whose policy is based on violence, fear, blackmail and oppression.

No compromise with that enemy, "with the perjured, blood-stained men who have plunged their unhappy country and with it our own, Poland and France, into yet another hideous suicidal struggle," is the view of Queenborough.

This war is a crusade, for never before did an empire have a more clear issue.

Today a world, a far more wide and civilized than that of the days when the Huns and other tribes overran the crumbling defences of the Roman Empire, depends for its very safety on freedom. It is more than a war of boundaries, it is a war of principle against barbarism, cruelty, injustice to weaker states, and against the breaking of international pledges.

HITLER SHOULD KNOW

In the past few days Adolf Hitler has surely not had any doubts about the attitude of Britain and France to his veiled proposals of peace, backed with a hint that Russia might "consult" with Germany on the question of the reply of the two democracies to the peace threat.

He may have perhaps up to a short time before his blow at Poland trusted that the Allies would not enter the war, but now he knows for certainty they have entered, and that they mean to end his principles and not sheathe the sword until that time comes and it is removed as a force in international affairs.

He has been told the word of the German Government is worthless, when it deems it desirable to break agreements. Does Hitler think anything has happened in the past month to lead him to believe that the Allies think him anything but what he has been told they think him? If he thinks the carving up of Poland is an end of that country he is mistaken.

There is in some circles belief that the German Government may unleash an intensive war against Britain and France in the air, on the sea and on land, that is on the French front. Such a threat is typical of the Nazis just as calmness is typical of the English.

By this time the German Chancellor must know that in the peace which is to come, Hitler will not have any hand to play. He must be off the political scene for it must be with a responsible government which can be trusted to keep its pledges.

Hitler now knows what Britain and France think of him. The man who endeavors to terrorize neutrals must realize how much true democrats must scorn him for the cowardly attacks on neutral shipping and on Poland.

UNCLE SAM HAS UNDER ARREST A DRAFT DODGER who has been on the loose since the Great War. He is a German named Bergdoll, who claims to have commuted between Germany and the United States for the past twenty years, sometimes entering the United States from Montreal, at other times using the port of New York. His mother, wife and children have continued to reside in the United States and he has visited them regularly. His last trip he came in openly under his own name and that was more than Uncle Sam would take, so he was placed under military arrest. Another chap, a gangster, Public Enemy No. 1, called Lepke, lived quietly in New York City for the past two years while the police were looking for him. He finally gave himself up to Walter Winchell, newspaper columnist, who turned him over to G. Edgar Hoover, Big G Man. Reminiscent of the lad who purloined the University proofs in Toronto for the Toronto World and a scoop. There was an investigation into university affairs after sub judice, and the final report was to be printed and released simultaneously to all newspapers. A young reporter ascertained where the report was to be printed and secured proofs were being read. He intercepted the final proofs and hastened to his paper with them, The World, which printed the report the next morning. A warrant was sworn out for the reporter's arrest and a big fuss made by the other papers, but the lad who knew every Toronto "dick" by sight stuck around for a while then took a vacation in the North Bay district until the hue and cry died down then returned to his desk and assumed daily reporting without trouble. None so blind as those who do not wish to see.

"IT IS NOT SIN WHICH KEEPS THE BRIGHT LIGHTS, CHAMPAGNE CORKS AND SIN PALACES OF THIS GREAT CITY GOING, said the Rev. Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, of New York City. "Staleness," says this metropolitan preacher, "keeps the bright lights going and the champagne corks popping. "It is not wickedness of heart which makes men, (and occasionally the ladies), no better than they should be, so much as thinness, flatness and lack of interest in the spirit. It is not the bar fly's throat that is parched, but his life history. At first glance it is not an altogether agreeable thought. We all know what are the wages of sin, but the wages of sin is a pale pale spectacular; there is a certain crimson grandeur about being wicked, only a gray headache in going stale. The Manhattan minister speaks on about a certain crimson grandeur about being rotten, and only a gray headache in going stale, but he has not experienced the dark brown taste of the morning after nor gamboled with pink elephants and all the other panoply of the state approaching damnation in what is known as the D.T.'s. Better to stand a little staleness than to fool too much about the bright lights and the night clubs of the metropolis with their side shows of gambling joints and worse.

"NUDE REALITY" SHOULD BE CLOSELY SCRUTINIZED IN THE DISCUSSION of United States neutrality, said a radio commentator who drew a possible parallel between the United States staying out of the war long enough to have to stand alone against the dictators and battle on home soil. Looks like the politicians are trying to make a bloody political football out of the neutrality issue. The politicians should beware of the purge which keeps politicians from even speaking their minds in dictator countries. The pity of it is that the freedom of the world should be jeopardized by party politics.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Oct. 4th, 1919

The Belleville Industrial Corporation has been organized with a capital stock of $200,000.00 of which amount Mr. R. J. Graham is prepared to take fifty per cent. and the citizens at large to take the balance. The organization has been effected to bring industries to Belleville and a charter has been applied for. The price of shares has been fixed at $10. At the organization meeting the following provisional directors were elected: Mr. R. J. Graham, Col. L. W. Marsh, Mr. C. Reid, Mr. W. C. Springer, Mr. W. B. Deseron and Mr. H. W. Ackerman. The Belleville Industrial Corporation will get in touch with prospective industries, examine their merits and requirements as to site, additional capital required and other details, and assist them as required where such assistance is warranted by the facts. The Graham Company, upon whose suggestion the Belleville Industrial Corporation was formed, has already got in touch with people by investing $100,000.00—a very commendable proceeding. If industries are secured, an important question to be considered is that of housing. It is up to the City Council and the Civic Housing Committee to get busy at once and see that Belleville's progress is not interfered with by lack of houses, which might cause some good industry to go elsewhere.

30 YEARS AGO

October 4th, 1909

Mrs. W. W. Chown of Simonton, Alberta, formerly of Belleville, is expected to arrive here today on a visit to friends.

The fishing at Zwick's Island seems to be about as hard a nut to crack as some of the bigger variety which grows on that beautiful spot. However, there is one thing to be sure of Zwick's Island is a park—it does not leak quite as badly as the average pleasure boat after Lake Ontario.

Mr. Frank Lynn, an old Belleville boy, now of Medicine Hat, Alta., is a passenger on the flyer which went west yesterday and many old Belleville friends were all the wide sea passage and connecting the Indian and Pacific Railways, delay is regarded as virtually impregnable.

It is no secret that this extravagant attention has had in mind the promotion of a fresh interest in Japan's advance as a world power. The Anglo-Japanese Treaty that gave Britain her first real friend in the Orient, was the response hopes of "southward expansion" by way of Singapore, as an obstacle. Now, with Japanese troops in South China, and with the Japanese mandated islands in land, south of Hong Kong, the fortress of Singapore is more important than ever.

It is noticed that Singapore's defence is solely a land and air combination. The theory is that Singapore must have strong naval forces free to go where needed.

To Any Lengths

Singapore's defences include the most powerful anti-aircraft weapons. An air force is building rapidly. Two aerodromes already made are garrisoned there. And the navy has a naval base at Sakdol, 15 miles from Singapore City, in an area cleared from tropical jungle and fully completed.

One of the weak links in this defence, in common with that of Hong Kong, is food supply. Singapore cannot import what it feeds. Even if the entire Malay Peninsula could be turned into food production the task would not suffice.

In Singapore now are some 6,000 Japanese, most living modest and skilled laborers, and fishermen. Their position has its difficulties. They are watched closely. But there has been no trouble between Chinese and Japanese here, despite a fairly lavish patriotism on the part of the former. Singapore is too well policed, and too cautiously organized in the future to permit anything like riots.

Singapore Guns Defend Position In the Far East

Singapore, Oct. 4—(CP)—The story of Singapore's ear-splitting 15-inch guns is full of romance and very appropriate to the times. It is now practically complete, as soon as you raise the question of modern-day military significance the world-famous centre of the British Empire's shipping.

"Well," says your host, smiling broadly, "we're supposed to have the three largest guns in the world here.

"Really tremendous things, these guns. Made during the Great War and intended for a superbattleship and then sent out here instead. So large that the military people have to issue a warning in the newspapers when they intend firing them for practice—so that people living within a radius of several miles can get their pictures off the walls and get cotton in their ears."

A Joke, But—

This is offered as a mild joke, as you look across the open hotel verandah at the palms, with the ship-crowded harbor only a short distance away, but not quite. And jests like this your sense the serious concern in Singapore over the role of affairs in the Far East. Also, the public satisfaction with the manner in which Singapore is being fortified against possible attack.

For the famous 18 inchers, guaranteed to burst eardrums at 100 yards, are but a small part of the armaments the British have assembled at this gateway ocean crossways. And this tropical island, about 20 miles long and 15 wide, commanding the nine-mile-station to see him for the brief time allowed. He was on his way to Toronto where his wife and son resides. It will be remembered that Frank Lynn was one of the men who went from here with the first contingent to take part in the Boer War in Africa and he went through the entire campaign.

The World of Tomorrow—Cancer Cures

As I was about to enter the Bright's disease exhibit at the Chicago Century of Progress, a young woman said to her companion, "Let us go in about here and learn just what the surgeon did when he removed the troublesome and dangerous appendix."

At the New York World of Tomorrow, an exhibit of interest to thousands was that of cancer, sponsored by the New York City Cancer Committee. The slogan "Fight Cancer with Knowledge" is the first thing that strikes your eye on viewing the exhibit. The attention is drawn to the figure of a woman, transparent and lighted from within at a single spot in the breast. At this point the glow spots appear at other points. This figure illustrates the spread of cancer, if unchecked, from a local (located at one spot) infection to other parts and organs of the body. You learn here that cancer can be cured if treated in the so-called "beginning" stage; that the second stage makes cure more difficult; that the third stage is fatal and that in the next stage cure is impossible.

"It is the purpose of the exhibit to acquaint in the simplest terms the importance of early and proper treatment. It is pointed out at each stage that a cure in large proportion of cases is possible if this baffling disease is taken in its earliest stage.

Modern methods of cancer operating room with every aid needed to remove cancer successfully.

The X-ray section illustrates this discovery of this valuable aid by a replica of Baron Roentgen's original experimental laboratory, and the X-ray machine of a million volts now available.

Thus briefly the knowledge of the most approved methods of discovering cancer early and the methods of its cure. The story here unfolded spells hope".

A SENSE OF HUMOR

(Christian Science Monitor)

In times when a community is passing through a crisis, a reliable information is scarce, and yet it is known that important events are happening. There always a temptation for people to base their conclusions on the number of news. Even those who accept this fact sometimes find it hard to be able to a sense of rumor, to develop a flair for a scare, and to become in the end a real lover for wild inventions. Too often authenticity is judged by the degree possessed by the rumor-monger in his rhyme, when protested that "Absolutely no evidence have I none, But my aunt's charwoman's sister's friend—"

That he had a nephew, who had a friend

Who knew for a fact that the Cabinet would end

No one, of course, would deny that there was a basis for such circumstances, a natural anxiety to learn as many of the facts as possible. But although the Great War their ears play truant at every life and death of the Allies, and even late the old Yorkshireman, and "hear all, see all, nay not!"

Diplomacy Record Of Double-Dealing

J. A. Spender, in The Sunday Times (London): "The history of diplomacy in the last twenty years, a generation after the event, is a record of double-dealing and misunderstanding, as indeed the word 'diplomacy' implies. The most striking fact about modern history in vain to find a public instance of this quality at all approaching the duplicity practised by Russia recently. Bismarck, while he was building up the Three Emperors' League went behind her back and concluded a secret treaty with Russia at her expense in 1879 and eight years later repeated the performance by making a secret treaty with Russia at Austria's expense. But these secrets were well wrapped in profound secrecy, and when brought to light they gave them the polite name of "reinsurance." It never occurred to Prince Bismarck that during events to invite the emissaries of one Power to negotiate with him in Berlin, and while they were still his guests and negotiations seemed to be nearing completion, to invite their opponents to come to the same place at the same time, and arrange with them to administer a public rebuff to those who came before.

LIVELY LINES

by

Arthur L. Burke

My old Uncle Dan was a born trading man,
That's the way he made all his money,
He'd swap his top coat for a calf or a shout,
His vest for a few pounds of honey.

He'd trade his best hat for a dog or a cat,
A jack-knife, a pencil or ring,
In fact Uncle Dan was the kind of a man
Who'd barter or trade anything.

His success came in trading by barter,
Till one starry night he fixed his keen sight
On the form of a neighbor's young daughter.

Her front name was Grace and she had such a face
That Mother love only could brighten,
But Danny remarked, as this maiden he sparked,
"I'll try all your burdens to lighten."

So he gathered this maid from her father in trade
For a buckboard, a pig and a sheep,
It was a deal of some size for this sort of a prize,
A bargain, thought Danny and cheap.

When dear Gracie learned of the trade that was turned,
She swore by the shades of her Granny,
She scratched and she fought, till everyone thought
She had taken the trade out of Danny.

Now Danny is sore, loves Gracie no more,
The nice things of life he's denied her,

But Danny has made his very last trade,
He's sorry this maid he went after,
When he tried to trade Grace, with her big ugly face
All he heard was the echoes of laughter.

Counting Sheep

One more ancient creed is slated for the scrap-heap. Sheep over the fence as a cure for insomnia are challenged by a writer in the Journal of the American Medical Association. He is opposed to counting sheep, reading in bed and other forms of mental concentration. The way to woo sleep is to avoid all set tasks and let the thoughts wander where they will. He would put up perhaps by urging the sufferer from insomnia to develop a state of mind indifference about the number of sheep going over the fence.

In itself his new doctrine about sheep counters and insomnia does not sound particularly helpful in our world today, where something can happen. For that matter, in the case of science and popular tradition, we have grown accustomed not to show surprise one way or the other. Every little while sheep are put forward to corroborate a popular superstition, as did once talk of sunspots; except that science calls it vitamins or radiation where folk traditions talk of magic.

On the other hand, every little while science will calmly throw into the discard a basic scientific belief, like fresh air for classrooms or the toothbrush for healthy teeth. That is why it would be no surprise at all to read in The Journal of the American Medical Association an article saying that laboratory experiments have shown that any arithmetical exercise like counting sheep increases the number of fatigue corpuscles in the blood by 30 per cent and so hastens sleep.

The champion sheep-counters in the world take the matter calmly, as the happiness of the world. Hitler and Stalin rejoice in the number of millions of sheep whom fate has placed in their power, when they drive here and there, as it suits their purpose. Hitler has 20,000,000 sheep who followed him when he led them against the Bolshevist enemy of mankind and who followed him now into a love match with their sister Stalin while shearing many sheep as Hitler. They followed Stalin when he waged war against imperialism and fascism and they follow him now in the same breath with Hitler where they can make themselves comfortable reading The Daily Worker.

Eggs and Chips

News filtering back from the Western Front indicates that eggs and chips are going to be a staple article of diet for the soldiers. Fried eggs with French fried potatoes made life bearable for more than one weary soldier in the last war.

The French seem to have been a lot of polling fat on the sleeve. They also have a good supply of potatoes all peeled and cut into slices. Eggs are in the cupboard. Windsor Star.

Siegfried

Has the Siegfried Line a vulnerable spot, as had Siegfried? The Winnipeg Free Press recalls the following fable:

Once upon a time, so goes the Nibelungen Lied, a famous German epic of the 13th century, there was a young man called Siegfried who was the youngest son of Siegmund and Siegfried. Now Siegfried was a very venturesome young man, and often went far afield in search of dangerous deeds to do. And on one occasion he attacked and slew a loathsome dragon. And because this dragon had magical qualities, Siegfried bathed himself in its blood and was immediately covered with a curious horny hide which was invulnerable. But it happened that in the course of this strange rite a leaf fell from a nearby linden tree and came to light between the shoulder-blades of Siegfried, and stuck there persistently. Wherefore when Siegfried bathed in him self there was one spot that was not covered with the invulnerable hide, and that spot was between the shoulder-blades. Now it came to pass many years later that Siegfried brought upon himself the enmity of Hagen, who slew him with and this brother himself an assassin to murder Siegfried. And because the assassin knew of the one vulnerable spot he aimed his blow there, and one day when Siegfried was drinking from a fountain the assassin pierced him with a spear between Siegfried's shoulder blades which was the location of Siegfried's one vulnerable spot. And that is the story of Siegfried.

Stirling

Stirling — St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling, was filled for both morning and evening services on Sunday as they marked the occasion of the Church's 82nd Anniversary. Rev. D. A. Mackenzie of Centreville presented two most inspiring messages appropriate not only to the occasion from the congregational standpoint but also particularly timely from the viewpoint of all christians as he dealt in a most capable fashion with the present day world crisis and its cause.

Special music included anthem renditions by a choir of twenty-four voices and vocal solos by Clayton Tummon and Arthur Duncan. The organ was augmented by piano accompaniment by Miss Grace Pitman and Mrs. A. H. Williams directed the choir and presided at the organ. Special musical numbers were as follows: organ and piano prelude—"The Son of God Goes Forth" (R. M. Stultz); "Melodie Antonale" (Ashford); Offertory—"Canzonette" (G. Cohlmann). GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Certain types of gifts are definitely appropriate for relatives and friends to give to the new baby. The godparents' christening gift to the child may be one of the more usual presents or it may be a sum of money or a check with which to start a "nest egg" or a bank account in the child's name. This may be added to, according to one's circumstances, as presents to remember birthdays, graduations, and other important events in the child's life.

Relatives, friends, and godparents usually send such gifts as a silver cup or porridge bowl often engraved with the name of the baby and sometimes with the name of the donor; especially if the godparent is the donor); a silver food set (small spoon, knife or pusher, fork); a pair of silver or gold or delicately shaded enamel baby-pins; a comb and brush set; a carriage set for the perambulator; a book for snapshots, or any dainty accessory of wearing apparel, such as a cap, booties, a dainty dress, a little knitted jacket, a coat and bonnet set.

If you are planning to give a christening present, choose a simple and appropriate one, appropriate for a baby and appropriate to your circumstances. Never give a ring or a bracelet.

Secret Marriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I was married three years ago but in order to keep my position until we get on our feet, we kept it a secret. Now, however, we want to announce it.

My husband would like to have a second marriage in our family church. He would like to have no one in on the secret, except the minister, and go through a second ceremony.

However, I do not think this is the proper thing to do. I think that we should just have a reception and announce that we were married a short time ago and are making it public.

Any information you can give us will be appreciated. Please advise us what is correct and just how it should be done.

Rowena

To have the correct point of view about this, because yours is the honest point of view. Your idea of making the announcement is excellent.

I am sure that you can persuade your friends that what he wishes to do is a deception. You and he are already marriage, and for you to go through with the ceremony again would be trying to deceive. I cannot believe that he would be willing to do this before God's altar. And it is inconceivable that if he let the minister in on the secret that the minister would perform the ceremony. Has he consulted the minister about this? Undoubtedly the minister's answer would convince him.

Courtesy Tip

Have you ever listened to the tone of voice you use when you answer the telephone? It's strange what happens to some people's voices when they answer the telephone. On other occasions, their voices will be well-modulated, pleasant, soft. But once they pick up a receiver their voices will become unpleasant, harsh, brusque. Try listening to what happens to your voice.

Glazed Ham Loaf
Scalloped Potatoes
Beet Relish Corn in Pepper Cases
Prune-Peach Mold Coffee

Glazed Ham Loaf—For the glaze take one-half cup vinegar, one-half cup water, one and one-half cups brown sugar. Boil together 10 minutes and baste loaf about every 15 minutes during baking. This recipe is enough for a large loaf. The ham loaf requires one pound smoked ham, ground; one-half pound round steak, ground; one-half pound pork steak, ground; one-half cup cracker crumbs, three-fourths cup milk, one-half cup tomato soup, one-half teaspoon salt, one egg, slightly beaten. Mix thoroughly. Bake at 375 degrees F. for one and one-half hours.

Beet Relish— Take three cups chopped boiled beets, two cups chopped cabbage, one cup grated horseradish, one cup sugar, one cup vinegar and salt to taste. Can cold.

Prune-Peach Mold — Ingredients: one cup cooked prunes, three and one-half teaspoons gelatin, one-half cup liquid in which prunes were cooked, three tablespoons lemon juice, one tablespoon granulated sugar, one teaspoon paprika, one-half teaspoon salt, two cups cottage cheese, three fresh or canned peach halves, one-half cup mayonnaise, salad greens, prunes, and peach for garnish. Pit and slice prunes, moisten gelatin in prune liquid. Combine with prunes, lemon juice, sugar, paprika and salt and heat just to the boiling point, stirring to dissolve gelatin. Cool slightly and combine with cheese, sliced peaches and mayonnaise and stir to blend. Pour into a mild or pan and chill until firm. Unmold onto serving plate and garnish with salad greens and cooked prunes that have been stuffed with cubes of peach. Serve mayonnaise or cooked dressing separately.

Hardy Fashion Perennials

By PRUNELLA WOOD

EVEN IF your new frock contrives to include front fulness, back fulness, nipped waistline, all the new shades and a cigarette silhouette all at once—not possible, thank heaven!—it will still be what is known as a basic costume. Meaning that it will cry out for new accessories. And if you are still wearing an old favorite . . . . ! So let's take a look at the new artificial posies. Not expensive, long lasting, amiable with the whole palette of fashion's colors, they are warranted to give a basic dress feminine look.

How about a bustle of white peonies which clips at the centre back of your waistline? Swell for evening. Or maybe you'd prefer to clip it at the nape of your neck, where its black velvet streamers give the George Washington coiffure effect.

Oktaktler, again the pouch bags are of green grenadine leaves and red blossoms; and the gold snood and bracelet ensemble, both sprinkled with gold daisies. Lots of lovely flower and feather doodads are now ready for your consideration.

New Uses For Old Furniture

By ELEANOR ROSS

IT IS EASY enough to discard, but it isn't so easy to acquire. This goes especially for furniture, and unless one is going to give pieces away, it is best to see if they can be used before throwing them out or storing them in the attic or cellar.

If the furniture originally was a good piece, the chances are that with a little alteration and doing up, it can be used again. In fact, the white elephant may become a prize pachyderm!

It is fun to renovate, to find new uses for things long thought past their prime. We often do it and enjoy our triumph. For instance, there's that chest of drawers, a good old piece or part of a set. Perhaps there is a large closet into which it will fit and so make excellent storage space. Or maybe there is a dark spot in the hall or on a landing where that chest treated to a bright paint job, will be just the thing to brighten up the corner. Or it might be very nice to use as a game storage space so that cards and games will be picked up at a moment's notice.

Make Extra Chest

If you want an extra chest of drawers, it is a good plan to remove the gingerbread and ornamentation from an old dresser, sideboard or dressing chest and refinish it as a chest of drawers. The dresser mirror can be treated to a coat of paint on the frame and then will be ready to hang anywhere in the house, especially if the mirror is large. Here is another bright spot for that dark corner, for there is nothing more cheerful in the house than a mirror.

An old-fashioned bed with a high headboard would fit into a room with more modern furnishings. Don't despair, however, but go in for a little furniture surgery. Substitute footboard for headboard and either repaint it or cover it with a gay cover slip to match the bedspread, and there you have a very modern bed. If a chest is too high, why not have it sawed in half and made into two smaller chests to fit smaller spaces? One on either side of a table would make a handsome grouping for a guest room.

Making Use of Lamp

If there is an odd floor lamp that doesn't fit in with your scheme, try painting the entire frame the color of the wall. It will seem to fade out of sight. There are many fixtures and fittings in the electrical equipment shops that will transform any type lamp into the latest in direct lighting fixtures recommended by today.

One of the best revamping jobs we have seen was that of an army cot. A box-pleated skirt was made and attacked to the frame. It was treated to an innerspring mattress and a tailored slip cover, made to tuck well under. A triangular pillow for each end finished a marvelous job. The pillow covers were open at the bottom so that they could be slipped over the iron foot and head pieces, then snapped closed to conceal the iron and hold the pillows in place.

Toppers of the Season

By ALICE ALDEN

THIS SEASON you'd no more think of exposing the back of your head than you'd consider neglecting to put on lipstick. At least, this is true for all but sports hats. That back-shade may be ribbon flaps or streamers, but more frequently it's a snood of mesh or fabric. The spider snood on the position-homing, left is draped from multi-colored hackle feathers encircling the crown. Gold wool snooding covers the brown felt sailor, right, tipped saucily over one eyebrow. Hats without ribbons or snoods which manage to cover the hair in back include profile beets dipping to the nape of the neck and rising high on one side.

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By VERA BROWN

CHAPTER I

The red haired girl behind the magazine counter in the hotel lobby slipped off the pump from her right foot and tried to keep on smiling. She'd bought the slippers in a rush and had to wear them even itchiey didn't fit. She simply had to smile for nice old Mr. Jenkins, the hotel's oldest permanent guest.

"We all missed you, Mike. Glad you're back with us." The old man beamed affectionately at the girl with the mahogany hair. She was a special pet of his. "How is everything at home now?" he inquired as he adjusted his gold rimmed spectacles and glanced at the headlines of h... newspaper.

Mike Shannon blinked her long lashes fast to keep the tears back.

"Somewhat better, Mr. Doctor says we can bring Jimmie home in about two weeks." She couldn't go on. This old man, treated at her over his glasses, patted her hand which rested on a pile of magazines.

"If I can help, Mike, call on me."

"Thank you, Mr. Jenkins," was she choked. Everybody had been so kind. Only—but that didn't help. She seemed to break all up inside when they tried to talk to her.

Eleven-thirty. Another fifteen minutes she could begin —putting in the stock and checking it. She couldn't speak of what Jimmie's doctor had said. The only way to Mike, of all her family, he had told the grim truth about her brother.

People had to tell Mike the truth. Perhaps it was because of her straightforward brown eyes and the way she looked at you, serious, but positively radiated real courage. You felt it. The doctor knew it. He knew that a lesser Mike would never walk again, never be well. He'd said in a few curt words just what infantile paralysis meant to a 14-year-old boy.

In time he'd tell Mike what was despair. She could not bear the thought. Mike, who couldn't even run in slamming the door, his red hair standing on end.

"It can't be true!" That is what she kept saying to herself. The doctor was mistaken. She'd see for her heart she knew it was true.... But something in the back of her mind that disorganized Shannon household. The family must be fed while her mother was at the hospital. All that fell to Mike.

Now she was back at work. Late crowds filled the lobby. Mike was busy. Magazines, newspapers, cigarettes. She smiled determinedly as four conventioners stopped before her.

"We're in before midnight for the first time in three days. We just can't take it any more."

Mike laughed, counted out their newspapers.

"Come and have supper with us now," said one of the men. Mike's heart-shaped face was a white blur in the high, bright lights of the shabby lobby. The usual "line." Mike managed them beautifully, sent them on their way. Wished why Downey had kept her so long.

There was no time for a last minute rush so it was well after midnight when Mike made up the long stairs to the cloak room. Thirty minutes and she'd be home.

If she could only sleep. She mustn't forget to put the milk bottles out for the morning and the oatmeal. It could boil while she was getting ready for bed.

The hall was dark when she opened the door. Surprised, she switched on the switch. The light flooded the place a tall man loomed. A hand went to Mike's throat. The stranger lunged forward, grabbed her, clapped his hand over her mouth. Mike, held in a vice-like grip, dragged her inside the doorway. She kicked one shot.

She could smell alcohol on his breath. Mike fought like the proverbial wild cat, kicking and scratching. She tried to free herself, get away, get her feet on the floor. For a moment she felt as if she was going to faint. The sickness of her drugs clogged. Then she's desperate effort she felt the hand clapped over her mouth. Bit it hard.

With a low cry, the man dropped her suddenly and left her standing like a ruffled kitten, while he nursed his injured hand. Mike was blind with fury. Her fear was gone. She stood there looking up at him, consciously that he was terrifically tall.

"What's the idea of biting me—of attacking me?" he demanded in a deep soft voice with a laugh in it. He held out his hand. "Shake on sex."

"Do you realize that this—this is Larry Regan's pitching hand?"

"I don't care if it is it Mussolini's. Get out of here! Get out!"

The giant grinned but he did not move a step. "That flipper will have to have medical treatment. I shall complain to the management. A man isn't safe in New York any more!"

Mike ignored the remark but then gasped: "Get out!"

"Do you want to cost me a hundred bucks? Do you want to throw me to the wolves?"

Mike grabbed her coat and hat, poised for flight. But he was between her and the closed door.

"If you're not out of here in two seconds, I'm going to yell at the top of my voice and then you'll catch it!" Her firm little chin rings around Dusty and they're kept me on the bench doing time since April."

"You weren't a sensation the the first of the season as I remember it."

Regan opened his eyes: "So you know a lot about baseball?"

"I've got a kid brother who loves it...." Mike's eyes filled with sudden tears. But Larry was too intent on his own troubles to notice.

"I got some signals mixed and Tom Marvin put me on the bench before everybody. I was doin' the best I could. Why over in Newark I was even hitting around .350—"

"This is New York. Perhaps you've heard."

"I know it's New York and I also know I'm going to be the greatest pitcher this outfit ever owned!"

Mike gasped. "How nice!"

He saw the set of her pretty mouth. "I know you think I'm boasting. I'm not. I've got the stuff of a Dean or Bithdolf if the outfit weren't all blockheads!"

Mike's heart went out to him suddenly. Boasting like a kid, he was. Trying to keep up his courage. Underneath he was scared and hurt and lonely. She could not find it in her heart to pity him any more. She let him talk on and on about himself, only half hearing what his said as she watched Regan's face.

He talked about Charlotte, Michigan. He'd come from there. About Aloysius "Wish" Malone who'd discovered him three seasons ago. He asked her to admire the big diamond he'd bought just as soon as he hit the big time, and he told her about his mother and father and their home in Charlotte....

It was an hour before she said with regret: "I'll after one. You've got to get back to the hotel. Good night."

She pushed two one dollar bills across the table to him. He grinned, nodded, picked it up and paid their check as they went out.

"I feel like back Mike was going to be useful to me in the future. Maybe I'll see you."

"Thanks, kid. You're swell!" Handsome meant it. "I hate to have you go in the front entrance with me."

The elevator was coming, Mike could hear the clanking doors above.

"Good night." She held out her hand.

Mike fled down the corridor and around the corner before the elevator doors were opened. Once safely inside her own room she sang in Times Square ...

"Why didn't I slap his handsome face?" she kept repeating. What a fool she'd been. Served her right! She had every reason in the world to hate him. But he was so pleased ... and then the tears came she hurled into a seat in the corner for having ridden home.

Thoughts of Jimmie came like an engulfing black sea. How could she have been so silly with Regan till A man across the way kept staring.

"I'm the kind of a girl men let go home alone!" she thought indignantly, and she could not be decided she'd never give a civil word to Handsome Regan again as long as she lived.

But in the dark stretch from the subway to the Shannon apartment and arrived out of breath she felt herself in quality for she did not want to awaken her mother.

She undressed quietly, did not awaken her sister, Mary, asleep in the other bed.

The next time I see Handsome, I'll freeze him so hard he'll have to spring to me any more," she decided finally and fell into a troubled sleep.

CHAPTER III

Mike was working from ten to six the next day. She found it hard to keep herself out of the Herald Tribune had gone on to the hospital when Mike awakened, and Mary and Jack were at school. The house was a mess. Mike tried to straighten things as she waited for the coffee to boil, but it was a hopeless task.

If Mike dressed with unusual care that morning, combed her rebellious red bob with more deliberation, she did not admit it to herself.

On the way to work via the subway Mike read the newspaper. She tried to appear unconcerned as she turned directly to the sport pages. There, a sports writer was giving the low-down on "Handsome Regan." Mike's heart Charlotte is causing Ace Barnes a lot of headaches," the writer commented. "Ace may take some drastic disciplinary action with the freshman pitcher.

That should make Handsome's day, Mike thought this morning.

She arrived at the hotel promptly at 10, and went to work. Morning lines were always busy, but Mike watched the clock.

It was not more than 15 minutes after Mike had come on duty that she saw Handsome coming to see Handsome towering there with a bandaged hand in a sling, evidence of condition. He appeared perfectly satisfied with the world.

"Hello, Mike, how's everything?" Just as casually as though he'd been greeting her there every morning for weeks. He bought a morning paper, but made sure as he took his change that she saw the splash of iodine on his left hand. She felt her cheeks burn, but she answered his greeting quite conventionally enough. Then he remarked:

"I didn't know you'd be to work so early. What time are you through tonight?"

Mike was sure she would not answer. But of course she did. Stiffly, coldly she said:

"What have the boys got to say about me this morning?" he said in a low voice, his head buried in his newspaper.

"Nothing very cheering." Mike could not resist that thrust.

"I suppose not. They like taking cracks at the rookie pitcher rapidly through the columns, spotted the one that had scored on Handsome. His threw down the paper.

"Mike, I'm not the guy right in the nose! He's got his nerve."

"Maybe it's true, what it says," he went on." Larry Regan. Maybe it is. But look what he calls me.... Red Riding Hood!"

An adoring bell boy came over with a message. There was a big stack of it, some in colored envelopes.

"Fan mail?" Mike's eyes were twinkling.

"Fan women. Tell me, Mike, why are women such nuts?"

"Maybe they're not."

Handsome did not answer as he flipped through the pile, picked out one.

"From home. I'll read it while I eat breakfast. Come and sit with me."

"I can't, I'm working."

Regan started away and turned back with an afterthought. "I'll be down for lunch, kid. Don't go home and sulk. Mike's protests. "Unless you're going to have Handsome came back to the hotel. That would avoid all trouble. Stood on her way home. She'd get away with Regan that time. She felt their curious eyes on her and was conscious.

Mr. Downey, the day manager, came over to her counter at six to talk to Larry as he waited. They plunged into arguments about the day's play immediately.

"Horton was off his game," Mr. Downey said firmly.

"He never was on it." Larry retorted coolly. Mike shrugged his shoulders, and smiled.

Mike came back slowly from the cloak room where the night before she had met Larry so unceremoniously.

"See this young man gets in at Convent Inn, Mike." The girl nodded.

"Horton Handsome?"

Larry grinned at him, waved his hand.

"He loves it." Mike realized suddenly. "It's like dope. He's had it, and he's watched him make it."

They strolled along in the early spring twilight. Mike was definitely felt peculiarly unhappy. Something warned her: "I shouldn't be here. I shouldn't be with one. Don't do it."

Then Larry took off his hat ceremoniously with a gesture turned it around, put it back on again. "What's the matter?"

Mike could hardly believe her ears. Then they both laughed. Mike felt happy. It was as it had been in the street. Walters rushed to the front. The manager came. People bowed, necks craned.

Mike was suddenly conscious of her cheap black frock. She could not realize she was the prettiest thing in the place with her amazing hair and her heart shaped face. But she knew her frock came from a basement sale and that her hat was last years.

"Now, people," Larry ordered. "Begin!"

"No high-ball. One glass of beer maybe. No more," Mike said firmly.

"O. K., Skipper. One beer, waiter."

Larry grinned down at her: "I can see you're going to be a good influence in my life." He shrugged. He was two days past. Any time not today I've been living on hot dogs because I've been afraid I may roommate of mine squealed."

"Do you mean to say you haven't been eating?"

"Not any too regular."

"Mike Malone's training table?"

"So. Ace says no more poker games for me when we're on the road. the gang's wild at me. Why should they blame me? Why don't they blame Ace? That's the one that squawked. I didn't."

"You and your old ball team!" Mike exploded at Wish Malone. "You all crazy, but sick of me!"

The club's veteran scout was horrified.

CHAPTER IV

Mike shook her head. "Larry, I think you're off to a wrong start."

"You're telling me?"

"Listen to me! Why don't they let you pitch? You started a couple of games early in the fall and—"

"That's why! The guys are just jealous." Larry was in the fan mail mood.

"Larry Regan! They wouldn't care if you got letters from the Queen of Sheba if you can win ball games!"

"Maybe you're right."

"What do you think? Use your head, Larry. You've been drinking. The club must know it. So do the newspaper men. See what they said about you today. Everybody can't be wrong."

He grinned at her: "All right. I'll go on the wagon. That is, if you'll set the example, keep me amused and let me talk baseball to you. Most women don't like that."

Mike was compelled to laugh. But the upshot of it all was that while the team was in town that month, Mike had dinner with Handsome much more frequently than she had any idea of doing. They ate often at the little place on Broadway.

Mike came back slowly from the cloak room where the night before she had met Larry so unceremoniously.

"See this young man gets in at Convent Inn, Mike." The girl nodded.

"Horton Handsome?"

Larry grinned at him, waved his hand.

"He loves it." Mike realized suddenly. "It's like dope. He's had it, and he's watched him make it."

They strolled along in the early spring twilight. Mike was definitely felt peculiarly unhappy. Something warned her: "I shouldn't be here. I shouldn't be with one. Don't do it."

Then Larry took off his hat ceremoniously with a gesture turned it around, put it back on again. "What's the matter?"

Mike could hardly believe her ears. Then they both laughed. Mike felt happy. It was as it had been in the street. Waiters rushed to the front. The manager came. People bowed, necks craned.

Mike was suddenly conscious of her cheap black frock. She could not realize she was the prettiest thing in the place with her amazing hair and her heart shaped face. But she knew her frock came from a basement sale and that her hat was last years.

"Now, people," Larry ordered. "Begin!"

"Begin yourself."

If Larry was a braggart, he had that quality which also invites confidence. He had good looks, ease. And Mike found herself telling him all about Jimmie.

"I'll come and see him just as soon as you get him home from the hospital. I'll bet I can get an autograph a ball for him."

"He'll treasure it always. And Wish Malone will run a mile to see a local celebrity. They make a fuss over hits."

All such talk opened a new world for Mike and she thoroughly enjoyed it. Handsome Regan seemed divious to the fact her clothes were not smart or expensive. He seemed to like to be with her, and she was completely happy.

It was two days after she had seen Wish in the restaurant that one noon he dropped in at the hotel.

"Did you think about what I said?"

Mike flushed...pretended not to understand. But she had thought of little else. Wish's words had brought home to her the disconcerting fact that she was being arrested in Handsome's ...

It had all been love with him.... That is the way all her arguments and self-reproaches ended. But she was scared. If she were? The idea terrified her. For Mike saw clearly that being in love with Larry would be almost insulting for any woman. Wish, watching her face, guessed something of what she thought and felt.

"I wouldn't be so bad, married to Handsome, He'll go a long way ....with the right woman."

"Whatever put that idea into your head?" she demanded to gain time before she had to get at the core.

"Well, you've got him on the wagon and he's not so quarrelsome in the shower rooms. He's difficult, Mike. The gang calls him Dean. He got off wrong. He broke up their poker parties. He's too good looking to be true. But he's a real pitcher. I've handled right."

"I'd hate to have the job."

"Well I wish you'd keep an eye on him. If he wants to get engaged to you, go ahead."

"And I'm supposed to marry a man who never thought of asking me, just so you can win ball games!"

"I don't put it that way. But he's not going to get it looking for help, Mike. You can give it. He's got an idea that readheads are lucky for him."

"How do you know he thinks readheads are lucky?" Mike had not asked. Wish began to wonder if he'd made a mistake. Mike was duck that one, Mr. Malone. Certainly we've been frank with each other.

"He told Sarge Westlake."

"Oh!"

"Now, don't get upset."

Mike upset the whole club knows now that Handsome is rushing me because he thinks I'm lucky!" Her eyes flashed. Wish was alarmed.

"Of course they don't! Sarge is the last man to talk to her, that is, talk. Why you should be angry I don't understand. Handsome just thinks you're a good influence in his life. Nothing else."

Mike exploded. "You and your old ball team. I never want to see any of you again. I'm not going to make a fool of Handsome, but not of me!"

Mike! Wish was horrified! Women were impossible. What should say—what could he say? He's a good influence in the life of a pitcher? Just a lucky charm for him, this to Mike. She answered abruptly:

"She might like to have the ball player care a little about her! Did you ever consider that?"

"Well he does and when he tells me about it, I'll take the whole thing up with him. This is all disgustingly silly. Twenty odd girls in the world besides winning ball games!"

Mike's eyes were bright. She was handsome while head was high as he said sternly:

"Those are true words, young woman. The ball games themselves! Don't you realize Handsome is good in this world, bringing happiness to him? Have a little faith in you. There's the making of a wild youngster into a real man! Any woman has a right to help a man who needs her. I mean that, don't you?"

"Of course, I do I'm the first to admit I want that World's Series money. Who doesn't? But I want more to see Handsome make good. Find himself."

Mike looked at Wish: "I feel as though I'd been to church."

"You have!" Wish's eyes twinkled.

"What do you really want me to do to help Handsome?" Mike asked.

The powerful athletic youth clapped a humbing hand over Mike's mouth as she struggled, scratched, and bit "like the proverbial wild cat."

"Now be reasonable," the man pleaded.

"Reasonable!" and Mike made a dash for the door but he got there first. He made a gesture toward her.

"Don't you touch me!"

"I am not going to touch you. I'm Larry Regan. I should have been in the hotel an hour ago. Outside in front of the front elevators sits a guy named Harper. He's been there since 10 o'clock. He wants to get me in bad, I tried to find the service elevator, got lost and when I heard you coming, I popped in here."

"You're drunk!" she snapped.

"That's what Harper thinks! He's a stooge. The big boss has him watching me The big boss is Ace Barnes. Ever heard of him?"

"At last! Slow I admire your knowledge of baseball. Haven't you ever heard of Larry Regan?"

"Certainly, and nothing good!" retorted Mike, remembering some things the sports writers were saying about the young man.

"So you're the one called 'Hand-some' she added with a bit of a laugh in her voice. For the first time she inspected the man before her. "Handsome! Is that what they called him that. Mike saw Regan's laughing blue eyes, a little bloodshot now, his wavy black hair, that unmistakable Irish map of his.

"Nobody calls me 'Handsome' to my face!" Regan warned crisply.

"Not more than a dozen of them dred thousand baseball fans," she retorted. "So you don't like to be called 'Handsome?' That's too bad. Just get out of here. And the next time you attack a lady—"

"Of all the nerve!"

"Well I am hungry. First, let's go and get something to eat. I'll explain things then. It'll will cost me a hundred dollars. Besides, you've got to show me how to get upstairs to my room by the freight elevator."

"Is that all?"

"Yes, all I can think of at the moment."

"How nice. Would you like to suggest the Waldorf?"

"No, there's a spot around the corner. We can sneak out the back way."

"I'm going home. My plans do not include supper. I'll show you out on the door.

"I say, look here. You can't leave me starving in here. Besides, somebody may come along if we stay here arguing. You wouldn't want to have to turn me over to the enemy."

"Of all the conceit and brass I ever heard of!"

Larry's blue eyes were twinkling. He knew the sign.

"Come on, we've got to eat if I'm going to pitch tomorrow. Besides, you owe me something, practically ruining my pitching hand!"

"Your pitching hand!" Mike's voice was full of contempt.

"I can pitch!"

"Who says so?"

"I do. I'll tell you about that while we eat. Come on."

He grabbed her arm, and pushed her through the door. As they reached the hallway, they could hear three girls from the dining room coming up the stairs.

"Now don't compromise me," Regan murmured in Mike's ear. She jerked her arm away from him, but he pushed her on ahead of him. The girls spoke, and stared. So Mike had annexed Handsome. Quick work!

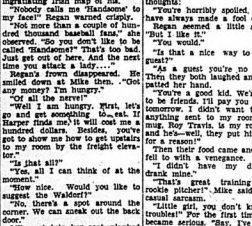
Mike's face was crimson. She read their curious glances. A moment and they were at the service door.

CHAPTER II

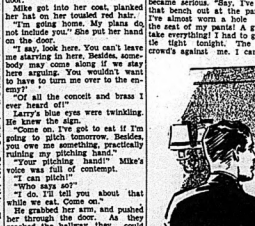
Just how it happened, Mike would never be quite sure, but shortly they were facing each other across a small table in an all-night lunch stand.

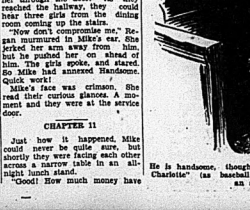
"Good! How much money have

He is handsome, thought Mike when she faced "The Sheik from Charlotte" (as baseball writers dubbed him) across the table of an all-night lunch stand.



The next morning, Mike saw Handsome towering over her.... What time are you through tonight?" he asked before reading the newspapers.





Series Scheduled to Open Under Bleak Skies Today With Yankees as Favorites

Derringer and Ruffing Will Oppose Each Other in Opening Tilt

REDS CONFIDENT

Derringer's Control Possibly the Finest in Baseball is Opinion of Experts

By GAYLE TALBOT
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 4. (AP)—The biggest show baseball has to offer, the World Series, is scheduled to open under bleak skies at Yankee Stadium today, in might prove to be a clinger of a series before New York Yankees and Cincinnati Reds finish with each other.

They go at it at 1:30 EST, weather permitting, before a crowd of probably 55,000 with Paul Derringer pitching for Cincinnati and Red Ruffing whizzing his fast one through for the complacent Yankees.

Few teams in history have held the attentions of their home fans like the Reds do today. That gives Manager Bill McKechnie's boys a little something to fight for, too. They are a "loose," confident crew, full of their proved ability and in no wise awed by the task they face.

The Yankees go into the series a trifle too satisfied with themselves, if anything.

Attitude Almost Careless

Three straight world championships have made their attitude almost careless. Probably they have been soothed, too, by the fact that the bookmakers are offering 2-1 odds against the Reds.

But the Reds are a good ball club with a series of first pitchers in Paul Derringer and Bucky Walters, a nice batting punch and a really exceptional team spirit. They pulled themselves together to fight off the determined pennant bid of St. Louis Cardinals. A club like that would beat even the Yankees in a four-out-of-seven series.

Without much doubt, the Reds are firing their best gun in Derringer today. For one thing, he is the only man in their lineup who ever pitched in a World Series before. As a Big League freshman he pitched for St. Louis Cards against Philadelphia Athletics in the 1931 series. That was the series in which Pepper Martin ran wild.

Derringer is a smarter, better pitcher than he was then, though his control possibly is the finest in baseball. He pitched three innings and the stars of the Yankee team in the last all-star game without allowing one of them a hit.

Ruffing to Start

His mound opposition is formidable. Red Ruffing decided in yesterday's batting practice workout his arm was all right, which means that the Cincinnati batters today will face one of the game's great pitchers, like Derringer. Ruffing is at his best with men on base. They play here today and tomorrow, if necessary.

Bucky Walters, who won 27 games for Cincinnati this year, is slated to face Joe Dimaggio and company tomorrow. His chief rival probably will be Monte Pearson.

Following are the starting lineups, with the record of runs batted in and batting average for the past season:

Cincinnati Folks Think it a Cinch If Team Wins First

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 4 (AP)—Their Reds standing at the fountain of glory in New York, and faithful here feel that if the home team can take the first World Series game from the mighty New York Yankees, you can slice the cake.

That's going pretty strong, but the man who sat in the bleachers all season believes to the bottom of his heart that the Yanks would have a hard time recovering from such a blow.

Another question, hanging on the right answer to the first, is would the Reds keep the jump if they won it?

One thing that has loyal Red fans completely baffled and insulted is the attitude of New York toward the World Series.

He just can't make out a city of 7,000,000 not in a father over something like that kept in his heart for 20 years.

All he knows is that there's a big baseball game and he's irked that somebody isn't taking his Reds part in it very seriously.

For instance, here the city council meeting Monday has been set up an hour so the founding fathers can listen in to the game's broadcast.

Here the newsboys are wearing over their aprons brand new bibs, bright red with "Beat the Yanks, Willie as the Wisp" Hermie Ausdenmoore family of four which drove to the way from Fort Lauderdale, Fla., just on the wild hope that they could pick up some series tickets.

FIRST YEAR GREAT, SECOND YEAR BETTER

There may have been players in the past who enjoyed as much success in their first two full years in the majors as Frank McCormick, first baseman with Cincinnati Reds, it would require considerable scanning of the records to find them. Last year Frank batted an average of .326 to take third place in the National League batting race. He batted in over 100 runs and led the league in hits. This year he has been among the five leading batters all season, is leading the league in hits and has added to that leadership in batting in runs. In addition he hasn't missed an inning of play in the entire season.

Joe Devine, Yankee Scout, Tells Good One on Umpire Reardon

By JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 4 (AP)—Baseball men, after business hours, always sit around unreeling baseball yarns. St. Devine, the Yankee scout who became famous by touting Joe DiMaggio when other major league clubs were passing him up because of a trick knee, is having a fit at the World Series concessionaires telling how Beans Reardon broke in as an umpire.

Bill McKechnie is shying away from the subject like a broker for his friends this series. Says all Reardon did in 1926 he wound up $500 short buying 'em for pals who forgot to shell out. "Being a bird dog for the Yankees sounds like a good job: 'Tim Sullivan at 20 has been giving them up for four years and has been voted a $1,000 cut in four World Series in addition to his salary.

Buck McCormick, one of the best fielding players in the National League, once was fired for dropping a cream and sugar bowl worth $150 on Reardon during a cut glass emporium. . . Joe Louis bought six box seats for the series games here.

Canadiens Ordered To Report Oct. 16

Montreal, Oct. 4 (CP)—President Ernest Savard of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced members of the team have been instructed to report here October 16th for training. Defenseman Cy Wentworth is the only one of last year's Flying Frenchmen signed to a new contract so far.

All the regulars have been instructed to report in addition to a berths with the Habitants.

number of amateurs. Those include Skipper Bean of Listowel, Ont., defenseman who played in England last year; Joe Benoit, former right wing ace of Trail Smoke Eaters; Buddy O'Connor, Gerry Heffernan and Pete Moore of Montreal Royals; Ray Malenfant of Quebec Aces of the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

Allan Shields and Maurice Crognale, former defensemen of Montreal Maroons, also will seek berths.

They're telling a tale about Bill Werber of the Reds, who pushed his way through the mob in the Cincinnati dressing room the day they clinched the pennant and, finding owner Powell Crosley on the back, declaiming: I want to congratulate you Mr. Crosley on having such a good ball club."

GIANTS DRAFT 'DAFFY' DEAN

Only 13 Players Called Up Indicating Dearth of Material

Released to Columbus in the American Association in midseason by St. Louis Cardinals, "Daffy" of the famous Dean and family pitching combination came back last night—this time to the New York Giants.

Only thirteen players were called up in the conscription, indicating a dearth of material in the minors. St. Louis Browns, getting first choice, took Shortstop Alan Strange of Seattle; Pitcher Johnny Niggeling of St. Johnson of Rochester, and Clyde Sinoll of Atlanta.

Pitcher Harry Gumbert of Son Hogsett of Minneapolis, and Pitcher John Sain of Kansas City, Boston Bees named Pitcher Nick Strincevich of Newark, and Washington took Pitcher Al Gehrman of Birmingham.

Pittsburgh got Dick Lanahan, Chattanooga pitcher; Detroit, Pitcher Tom Bain of Sacramento; Pitcher Chicago White Sox, Catcher Tom Turner of Houston; the Cubs, Pitcher Jim Bivin of Los Angeles, and Reds Infielder Russ Bevel of New Orleans.

ROCHESTER WINGS LOSE TO COLONELS

Louisville Needs Only One Game to Capture Little World Series

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 4 (AP)—Louisville Colonels of the American Association came here today hopeful of winning the Junior World Series baseball championship.

The have only to win tonight's game from Rochester Red Wings of the International League to capture the title.

The Colonels snared the fifth game of the series last night in Louisville, 5-3, to go one up on the Red Wings and end their two-game winning streak.

Big Bill Beckmann hurled the Colonels to victory in the final series contest at Louisville's Parkway field, frequently was in hot water. Rochester was unable to score until two were in the final inning.

RACING GOES ON

Liverpool, England—(CP)— The racing world—behind the scenes—will carry on during the war. Many of the stars depleted of trainers by conscription, but horses will be kept for possible racing next year.

EXPERTS FAVOR MUSTANGS TO WIN COLLEGE TITLE

Coach Storen Has One of the Best Teams in the Past Ten Years

KROL ACE RECRUIT

Western Strong in Every Department With Wally Hilton Best Plunger

By JACK PETHICK
Canadian Press Correspondent

London, Ont., Oct. 4—(CP)— A team coach Bill Storen thinks is of championship calibre will start the football season strongly favored to bring University of Western Ontario the first Intercollegiate Union Championship in a decade.

The Mustangs have been made favorites despite some costly graduation losses whereby Interlocutor Wilson Willis, all-eastern centre, and swift Jimmy Farmer, the plunging halfback, left the 1938 backfield. The calibre of the club's reputation is what makes these losses easier.

The backfield, on which observers call the team to win, is loaded with all kinds of power—running, passing, punting and plunging. It will be protected by a steady if not formidable line. Most of the men in the hands of a field general as capable as Alf Hurley bodes ill for Toronto, Queen's and Western.

Krol is Ace Recruit

The ace recruit is Joe Krol, the Windsor boy brought up from Windsor Intermediate ranks by brilliant season on the backfield. Krol can kick, run and pass and should be a worthy mate for Jack Farmer. There are no weak spots among the backfield reserves with star hoofers as Jack Kennedy and Lyn Thompson and Wally Hilton, a plunger. Ken Preston, Paul and Joe King, another Intermediate flash and Milton Hall are others in the plunger.

Wally Hurley can plunge with the strongest of them and is one of the best quarterbacks in Western Ontario football history. This star-studded backfield there are reserves like Jimmy Farmer, fleeting Hoakl from Hamilton Tigers of the Interprovincial Union, and Don McGill from the Intermediates.

Besides Farmer and Willis, whose loss leaves a wide gap in the line secondary, the Mustangs lost Cam Ingram, Bill McKellar and Ken Ross, no lack of reserves from which to replace these men and the backfield will be one of the first-flight stars before the season is over in Keith Quilliam, Jack Thompson, Jimmy Fisher and Morley Thomas. They all are capable replacements.

Experience on Line

Western will have experienced men for most of the line positions with Gordon Taylor to replace Willis at snap. Vic Obeck, who held the secondary together as well as anybody, will be played under senior fire and proved capable. Bill Mitchell, Bill Gilbert and Bert Harris, late of Toronto Balmy Beach, and Jack McLachlin .

Bill Storen, a coach of the calibre of the tackling division, headed by Jack Thompson, star of the 1938 team, Claude Moore and Fort Kent. The reserve backfield others, is Bill Wood, only Chinese player in senior football. Thomas, George Oliphant and Fisher probably will divide the middle-wing duties.

If this club doesn't click for the College Championship Storen and his student assistant coaches will be terrific shock. They figure it's the best Western club in 10 years.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

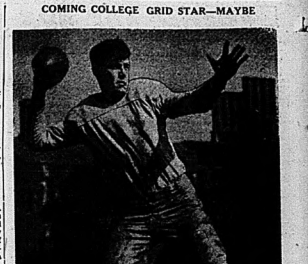
New York, Oct. 4—(AP)—Looks as though the weather may be the only more to say about this World's Series starting today than baseball fandom has been saying all this....among those who didn't get a ticket. Ford Frick, baseball Publicity Director, has been receiving a flood of letters from fans who want to know why they can't get a ticket.

We pick the Yanks in six, but they're no cinch if Red Ruffing isn't himself today.

All the New York critics agree Freddy Apostoli has slipped a long way.....and Apostoli, a few nights said: "can't that Garcia hit?" .....has been out of the lineup a couple of weeks. Don Budge will sing along the same....among them, the Yanks have bought $12,000 worth of series pasteboards looking for a big turnout....and listening to at those congratulations over his new Red Sox contract.

Eddie Mead, manager of Henry Armstrong, has shook his figure in a marital main event.....Madison Square Garden announces the number six fight of the season, set off Nov. 30.....this will be Al Singer's return to action after an official World's Series chore.

Oh! Oh Lou McKenna, reformed Bill Paul sports writer, is Seattle's all manager of the Oil Kings.....last year, his club won the pennant and set a new attendance record; Lou was awarded a plaque for the outstanding minor league figure.....this year, the Saints didn't do so hot, neither artistically nor financially.....just the same Lou's pals are going to give him another plaque—for showing them he can take it.



One of the most promising players to come up to intercollegiate grid ranks in some time—and one attended with more than the usual amount of advance publicity—is Jack Plaxton. ABOVE, who will take part in his first game for the University of Toronto when the schedule gets under way on Oct. 7. Plaxton established a reputation as a forward passer in Toronto high school ranks, and kept up the good work with Varsity Juniors. So good is he made the seniors look bad more than once in practice. This year he'll be flinging them against McGill, Queen's and Western.

When the schedule-makers of the Bay of Quinte Senior Interscholastic six-man rugby football group got their 1938 schedule for the Bay of Quinte C.O.S.S.A. group apparently they forgot that Oct. 9th had been announced as Thanksgiving Day in Canada and would be a public holiday. After the schedule had been announced however, both Frank Cunningham (O.S.S.) and Pete Beach (Albert College) discovered the unanimity of their football squads would be away for home this week-end and that practices for all concerned, including Varsity Intercollegiate tilts, would be impossible. To facilitate matters for all concerned, Athol Grierson and Bulldog Cox both appeared in Belleville beneath the mask and were telephoned enquiries. The premiers held that the "Red Mask" is a former world lightheader, but judging from last week's performance he will have to be good to beat Maich, who covered himself with ring glory and cleaned up the mat by defeating a full hour to a draw with the heavy Buffy Egge. Better, no doubt the fans are interested in, according to sheet gossip, is the future grudge fight between Tiger Daniels and Young Griffon.

Paul Dean, one-half of the famous pair of baseball C. O. S. S. A. Interscholastic rugby for the past couple of years, however, Schricker is making hay under this week's sunshine. He has "Yank" and Bill McMullen, Jacquharson and Ross Clare in the backfield. Ronnie Warren at quarter, Bill Pigden and a fearless lad by the name of Watson at the outside positions, but the strength of his line has yet to be found. While Ben Chapman have satisfied themselves with Canadianists in recent practice scrimmages, their hated rivals in the group, Albert College, has the best line it has shown in many practice games with Reigelpolis College, Kingston, these two squads meet in a five game series.

On the other hand, Coach Pete Beach seems quite satisfied with the showing of his 1939 Albert College squad. Beach has Latimer, Woolley, Lougheed and Moulden who is a real comer, among championships in the backfield with Jack Rudy of London, as centre, and fullback. Along the line of scrimmage the Alberts boast of several veterans of senior interscholastic football campaigns, with Gene Cunningham, Reginald and Lorne Brown of Port Erie adding strength to the line. Coach Beach will have a powerful squad on his roster, one Barrie Brawley, while Hank Hawkins from the Prince Rupert, B.C., besides a pair of lads from Northern Ontario are in the Albert College squad quite a cosmopolitan aggregation with a real spirit with which the Collegians will meet the strengthened Alberts this season and hope to see the best senior Interscholastic season of many years.

Speaking of football in the U.S.A., a well dressed football player costs his school $56.50. That's what it costs to fit a college gridder player. The shoes are $12; head gears and shoulder pads $9.50 each; pants, $8.50; hip pads, $7; jersey, $5; thigh pads, $3.50; socks, $1.50; undershirts, 50 cents, and supporters, 50 cents.

Whenever a person appears in public wearing a smile, he has a natural tendency is to unmask the party attempting to hide his identity and countenance. When the Red Masked Wrestler, Joe Maich, former Canadian wrestling amateur champ, at the Hume Arena Friday night, we again we expect to find the general feeling of the fans very much adverse to the "hooded one" and hoping for a Maich victory in every bout. Not that the fans—namely a chance to see what is behind the mask. It is generally speaking all masked wrestlers to enjoy appearing in public in the part and have been hard nuts to crack and only one was defeated in a local ring, he being a man named Marvin from Virginia. Al Grisewich and Bulldog Cox both appeared in Belleville beneath the mask and were telephoned enquiries. The premiers held that the "Red Mask" is a former world lightheader, but judging from last week's performance he will have to be good to beat Maich, who covered himself with ring glory and cleaned up the mat by defeating a full hour to a draw with the heavy Buffy Egge. Better, no doubt the fans are interested in, according to sheet gossip, is the future grudge fight between Tiger Daniels and Young Griffon.

While Ben Chapman have satisfied themselves with Canadianists in recent practice scrimmages, their hated rivals in the group, Albert College, has the best line it has shown in many practice games with Reigelpolis College, Kingston. These two squads meet in a five game series.

Although sentiment seems to favour the Cincinnati Reds, the betting odds favour the Yankees in the world series, that opens today, Strangely enough, however, the veteran Connie Mack, who is considered American League supporter, scoops a little skeptical about the series this year. Mack says this year's team has not been a great ball team at all times. "The Red Sox proved that by sweeping one series," pointed out Mack, "but I wouldn't bet on the front page of today's issue.

SPORT SPICE—No doubt Joe McCarthy would feel much better if he had Lou Gehrig in today's line-ups batting about .300 or in the clean-up position.....It will mark the first world's series since 1933 in which the Yankees have participated without the services of the Iron Horse, of Gehrig.....Secretary Bill Hewitt, of the Ontario Hockey Association, announced today that O. H. A. certificates in all series will be available on Friday of this week.....Jimmy Ketcheson "Orfung" are packing more weight along the line this season than in 1938, we hear.....well, they'll need it against that Montreal squad.

Picton—"B" Company of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, stationed in Picton since August, will be the first unit of the regiment for billetion training over an indefinite period of time.

The remaining companies of the unit will arrive within the next two weeks after complete accommodation for the entire unit has been established.

Complete transformation of the Armouries in Picton is proceeding at a rapid pace, while work on the Canadian Canners Ltd., factory at the rear of the Armoury is undergoing a general rehabilitation, and is being made ready for the housing of troops and equipment.

The battalion will train in Picton as a unit for some time, according to Captain Arthur Norman Rogers, adjutant of the regiment.

"This will in all likelihood, be followed by brigade training as part of a division, and then as a corps," he added.

Signing for service in Canada upon primary enlistment, the members of the unit greeted with cheers on Saturday last, the announcement that attestation would be taken for overseas service.

Request of the Department of National Defence, that the Town Council place the upper part of the Picton market building, now used as a roller rink, at the disposal of the regiment for recreational purposes, was granted.

Last Sunday the regiment paraded to the Roman Catholic St. Magdalene for service and on the following Sunday they will attend divine service at the United Church. In the evening the ladies of the church have invited the troops to attend a social evening.

Referring to a recent announcement that the First Canadian Division would be equipped with the new army "ski-suit" uniform, Lieut-Col. Sherman Young stated yesterday that it will be at least three weeks before the equipment will be issued to the troops.

Beaver Used In Stocking Trout Waters

Fredericton, Oct. 4—(CP)—Reports from Maine quote authorities to the effect that beaver are instrumental in stocking trout streams of the state, but in New Brunswick they paddle-tailed animals are being used in the work of re-stocking trout streams.

Arguments attributed to Maine officials are that water is backed up into ponds in stagnant and kills trout, and that beaver dams prevent trout from running upstream.

This is denied by Col. H. H. Ritchie, New Brunswick's chief game warden. The water in beaver ponds is not sufficiently stagnant to hurt trout because there is always a certain amount of seepage through the dams, he says, adding that trout running upstream have little difficulty in jumping the low-lying dams.

The dams act as reservoirs, collecting water and maintaining a more constant flow in streams, said Col. Ritchie. Without the dams small trout would be trapped in shallow pools during the dry season and become an easy prey for their enemies.

No destruction of beaver had been received by his department from fishermen, said the game warden. On the contrary, the New Brunswick Fish and Game Protective Association was giving effective co-operation to the province's program of re-stocking streams with beaver.

"On the Two Brooks Deadwater Stream above Plaster Rock, Donald Fraser maintains under federal permit beaver ponds which have been established on deadwaters of the Tobique River," he said. In recent years the Dominion department has obtained trout from these ponds all its trout eggs for breeding work in New Brunswick. "That shows no harm is done by the beaver," commented Col. Ritchie.

The game division of the department of lands and mines has been distributing beaver throughout the province for the last four or five years, moving stock from places where they were becoming too numerous and doing damage to fields and woodlots, to points where they had lived for half a century or more.

Already this year eight beaver have been released in Westmorland County streams. Previously they were distributed in St. John, Albert, York, Carleton and Gloucester counties to assist in re-stocking trout streams.

Fish Increase

Beaver re-establish in a branch of Jardine brook near St. Quentin in Restigouche forest fire of 1922 had built several dams. "Where a few years ago trout were unknown, farmers are getting trout weighing from a half to one pound, due entirely to the Beaver's efforts," stated the chief game warden.

"Beaver are the main conservationists in nature's scheme of things," said Col. Ritchie. "From the Atlantic to the Pacific, if we go back through the history of the country, we will find that all our best lands finally attribute the work of the beaver. The beaver is the keystone in the framework of the structure of all our natural resources of forest, game, fish and fur. Most of the power centers and storage reservoirs on our smaller streams and brooks are the result of old beaver dams.

"The forester and the lumberman should realize the advantage of such water storage in preventing forest fires, and in holding moisture as a deterrent of outbreaks of forest fires.

"There we have beaver ponds we have natural breeding places for trout, retreats in summer and cover in which they may get rid of fins and kinks, feeding places for mink, otter, muskrat and other fur bearing animals and havens of refuge for all kinds of waterfowl."

WESTERN'S DANCES NOT SO EXPENSIVE

London, Ont., Oct. 4 (CP) — University of Western Ontario dances will be less expensive and devoid of much "trimming" this year, through plans announced yesterday by the undergraduate governing body, the Students' Administrative Assembly.

Taking up a suggestion by Dr. W. Sherwood Fox, university president, that the students decide what social functions be curtailed in view of the war, the assembly decided to give the impact "wasted" funds for the Arts' Ball and the rugby dance, the season's biggest formals.

In prairie fields, outstanding orchestras have been "imported" from the United States and Toronto.

Milford Man Injured When Sack of Grain Topples Off Platform

Picton, Ont. (Special)—Attempting to save himself by clutching at a bag of grain when he fell from a freight platform of the village mill to the ground ten feet below, Harold Cooper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Cooper of Milford, sustained severe back injuries when the heavy sack fell on him as he lay on the ground.

Slipping from the edge of the platform, Cooper grabbed at the grain, causing it to topple on top of him. He was taken to Prince Edward County Hospital where his injuries are as yet undetermined. His condition, however, was today regarded as satisfactory.

Registration at B. C. I. Vocational School is Highly Satisfactory

"Highly satisfactory," was the opinion given by Principal P. C. MacLaurin, of the Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School today, in commenting on the registration for the term in instruction in machine-shop work; electric arc welding, woodworking and motor mechanics, that took place at the institution last night.

Upwards of one hundred and fifty men, the majority of mature age, exclusive of waiting lists registered for instruction last night, Principal MacLaurin stated.

Classes in two phases of machine shop work and electric welding were filled, and a considerable waiting list was compiled. While registration for the motor mechanics and woodworking was good, there were noted, he added.

Extension of the classes to accommodate the overflow of registrants will be brought up at the next meeting of the Board of Education, when it is hoped a satisfactory decision regarding this important factor of the work, will be handed down, the principal said.

Haunted House

By HAROLD O'BRIEN

Marian parked her car at the edge of the road, pushed her way through the hedge, and walked slowly up and across the sloping lawn and garden to the house. The lawn was not just a stretch of grass. Along the road there were shrubs and trees, making a little narrow woodland, which seemed to be planted with the wild growth that belonged there. Away at the left a noisy, shallow little brook, bedded on flat brown stones, was shaded by more trees and shrubs. And on the small rise behind and even the house pine and cedar trees grouped informally together into a little evergreen grove.

The house, a white clapboard colonial house, remodeled just enough to get modern comfort without taking away from its classic lines—stood surrounded by a level lawn, shaded by several overhanging elms.

She made her way around to the back of the house, and there, outside the kitchen door, she saw a pink gingham dress rocking and shelling peas.

"I was wondering about the house—" said Marian.

"The house is fit" exclaimed the woman. "And, what, please, was you wondering?"

"Oh—it's so lovely. I'd love to live here."

The woman stiffened. "Tis not for sale," she said.

But Marian's soft brown eyes smiled into the woman's keen blue ones—"I'm going to live here."

"What's that you say?" a middle-aged man, evidently the woman's husband, stepped briskly across the lawn behind the house, his arms filled with sweet potatoes and beets, cabbage and red raspberries from the vegetable and fruit gardens. "Who's going to live here?"

"I said I was," said Marian. "I'd advise against it." It was the woman's voice now. "Tell her why, Mike. Tell her about the haunts."

The man and woman exchanged sharp glances. "Of course, I wouldn't want to be frightening the young lady," he said, "but 'tis true. The place is haunted."

"Oh!" Marian's exclamation was half amused, half interested. "How?"

"'Tis this way. We're the caretakers, Mike and me," said the woman. She looked now and then to the man, who nodded, as if in approval of the way she told her story. "And Mike runs the garden for the other house, too, which is down the road a bit. Do you know Mr. Gracey, who lives in the other house—Mr. Gracey, Senior, that is, Mr. George Gracey?"

"No—not yet." Marian smiled as she answered.

"Well, he lives in the other house. And along the time of the war his oldest son, George Junior, was engaged. To a lovely young lady it was, too. So his father bought this house for them to live in. And then George Junior went to the war and was killed. And within a month the young lady he was engaged to was dead, too. It was a spell cast on them by the house.

Half an hour after Mike and Maggie saw Marian disappear down the road in her car, they joyfully welcomed a young man who came tramping over the fields and through the vegetable gardens to the back of the house.

"Well, if it isn't Mr. Johnny," exclaimed Maggie. "Hey, Mike!" She hailed her husband coming in a rocking chair with his pipe under one of the big elms. "Here's Mr. Johnny. Wake up, and let us tell him about his haunted house."

"Sure, Mr. Johnny," said Mike, after greetings were over. "It's good to see you home—through college and all, aren't you? Well, this afternoon, we saved the house for you, at least, along—pretty much enough, too—who evidently wanted to buy the place. Said she was mind she was going to live here. So we saved it for you. Didn't we Maggie?"

"Sure we did. We told her it was haunted. Made a big story of it—told her of poor Mr. George's death. And she went away scared enough. I'll warn a'ready your father would sell if he got a good offer and not wait to give it to you for a wedding present, as he promised."

Maggie and Mike beamed at Johnny. And Johnny who, though they hadn't noticed it, had looked more or less solemn, beamed at them.

"You're a couple of old rascals," he said pleasantly. Mike and Maggie had been servants in his family as long as he could remember. "But let me tell you what you did. That young lady was the girl I'm going to marry. I stopped in and her on my way home. And this morning she motored over to see this house—I'd told her about Dad's promise. She doesn't live very far from here, and just now she telephoned me she couldn't marry me, after all. She was afraid she would bring me bad luck, she said."

"Oh, Mr. Johnny, I'm that sorry!" Tears were near the surface of Maggie's eyes and even Mike looked sheepish.

"Only one way, you can prove it," said Johnny. "You be as nice to my wife as you've always been to me. And lay the ghosts, will you?"

V. O. N. CAMPAIGN DATES ARE: OCTOBER 2nd. to 7th.

Every City, Town Knows This Class Who Can Map War Campaign

Street Corners, Clubs, Private Homes Know 'Armchair' Leaders

SOLEMN DECISIONS

There is at least one type of individual that has existed in our midst for years whose peculiar traits have been brought to the surface by the recently declared European conflict.

You will find him everywhere. On street corners, in clubs, in the coziness of private homes, in offices, workshops and factories.

Meet the "armchair generals."

In nearly every office and shop you will find the "general staff". One glance at the morning's war communiques and the "generals" go into a huddle, map out their plan of campaign, which generally disagree with that of the high military authorities involved, and quietly but firmly pick out what they may consider the flaws of whatever has taken place to the way of publishing.

We have had these "generals" in our midst for some time, in sinks when hockey games are being played, in rigadin seats at any boxing or wrestling match, but never in such numbers as has appeared since the commencement of hostilities.

The innocuous newspaperman who quietly embellishes the bulletin boards of The Ontario Intelligencer conscientiously copying the condensed account of overseas news, has been the victim of the military strategy of a number of "generals". Not so much a victim perhaps, but endeared or less forced listener to the many weird arguments that emanate from the lips of these sons of Mars that recently records the news.

Wherever the "generals" discover that a particular piece of news meets with their approval, there is a group of "I told you so's" in the air.

But even events sometimes have a habit of falling flat on the "generals". Take the Bremnth. The swiftness of the destruction of the vessel, the arrival of conflicting reports as to the exact whereabouts of the $22,- 000,000 Nazi luxury liner had the "generals" in a foggy mental state. There are a few who stoutly maintained that Britain was the victor while others patiently outlined the course the Bremen took when she succeeded to the Italian or Russian or whatever port was favored at that particular time.

On land, however, the generals are at their best. They may know no more of the topography of the Saar Valley or the district between Lorraine and Metz than they do about the Gran Chaco but they can quickly map out a battle or campaign.

Nor do they stop at that. They can analyze to the finest detail the good or bad politik of the Nazi strategy define the best methods for the seas of the submarine menace; effectively bomb the Siegfried Line in a minimum of loss to the allies and terrific destruction to the enemy; and distribute the pamphlets in such a manner that the German people do not have to wait for the press corridor to read them.

All of which is harmless and as natural as arising in the morning. It is just that human urge to 'skite', as our American cousins call it, namely to stand behind card-players and offer unsolicited advice; to sit in the back-seat and handle the wheel of the car by verbal control; to scream instructions at a hockey fighter or yell weird advice to the speeding hockey or lacrosse players.

And it is as old as time. The first man climbing cocoanuts when David walked out to combat with Goliath while the rival hosts stood and watched. And like the killjoys of modern times, they yelled the wrong instructions, never dreaming that David would loose a small stone to swiftly end the brief combat. Goliath, alas, it is said, had never entered their head.

However, it is one of the inevitable accomplishments of the war. And war being a hostist between powerful forces, we must expect plenty of kibitzing in the time to come.

Patrol Skirmishes

Along a curving front of more than 40 miles, the French Army was fighting strict skirmishes in efforts to surround these cities, it was reported. Previously, the French were reported to hold 150 square miles of German territory after retaining 66 villages.

The French constantly were trying to break the Victorian Order's defences aimed at capture of the six cities, while their planes photographed effects of artillery fire on Siegfried Line fortifications.

In the morning's War Ministry communique said the night was quiet "save for artillery duels from both sides in the region south of Zweibrucken."

Reports published in Paris said German motorized divisions had been gathered at special interior points such as Munich, Nuremberg and Hanover. It was said these units could move swiftly over superhighways for the west whenever Adolf Hitler gave the word to end the diplomatic interlude in the war.

War Cabinet Meets

The French Cabinet gathered this morning to hear Premier Daladier and his Ministers would consider further action against French Communist-Nazi party and party organs already have been dissolved.

Fifty-three of the 70 Communist Members of the Chamber of Deputies sent a letter to Eduard Herriot, Chamber President, backing the German-Russian overture and declaring Russia justified in suggesting that Parliament be called to the public platform to discuss the peace question.

The Communist Deputies have formed a new Chamber group which they call the French Peace Unity and Workers' Group. It was under this title that the 43 sent the letter to Herriot.

Socialist Leader Leon Blum called the letter "scandalous."

ALLIES

The press centred its attention on yesterday's debate in the House of Commons and generally commended the speech of Premier Neville Chamberlain that Britain would judge any German peace proposal in the light of Adolf Hitler's past promises which, Mr. Chamberlain said had proven "worthless".

The Times declared that any peace terms offered by Hitler must conform to these conditions to be acceptable to the British Empire allies:

Must Repair Damage

"They must not require us to condone the act of brigandage committed at the expense of Poland; on the contrary, they must repair the damage already done. And they must give not only to us, but to all foreign, adequate assurance that the peace concluded will be durable and will not be disturbed by the continual threat of Nazi aggression."

The Times declared the first object of examining any peace proposals must be to discover whether they offer the irreducible minimum, namely, the restitution of the independence of Poland and security for the future peace of Europe."

For an indication of Germany's policy in the immediate future, Britain awaited Hitler's speech before the Reichstag.

(A Berlin dispatch said quarters close to the German Foreign Office expect Hitler to speak Friday or Saturday.)

Preparations Made

As for Britain's war preparations:

1. Munitions plants were reported going into production of shells at a rate at times three times the peak period of the last war.

2. Sir Reginald Dorman Smith, Minister of Agriculture, appealed anew to the nation to "dig for victory" to produce adequate food supplies. He called for 500,000 additional land workers under the slogan, "Dig for Victory."

3. The Government authorized allens to join the British armed forces. In the last war, special royal permission was required in the case of each non-British national who enlisted.

New Foreign Legion

The Government's "early advantage" might be taken of the new ruling to enlist certain Polish soldiers, refugees in Rumania, but there is no present intention to form a foreign legion in the nature of a foreign legion."

It was estimated there are approximately 2,000 Czechs in Britain whose ranks as volunteers in the air force and army have trebled since the ban was lifted.

Reprisals Ended

The Admiralty added a large number of trawlers to the auxiliary naval service and announced private yachts to augment craft engaged in hunting German submarines.

A Turkish military mission began conversations today with British Government representatives.

Foreign Secretary Halifax said the talks dealt with "military and other questions of common interest." General Kiazim Orbay heard the Turkish delegation.

"Mutual assistance pledges" in case of an act of aggression which led to a war in the Mediterranean area" were exchanged between Turkey and Britain May 12 and Turkey and Britain on June 23, pending conclusion of "definite agreement."

Sharply Divided

Parliamentarians today expressed sharply divided opinions on David Lloyd George's speech in the House of Commons yesterday in which he suggested a "secret session" to consider Britain's war aims and a "very careful" consideration of any "specific, detailed and broad" offers of peace terms, including those of Russia or Italy.

Mr. Lloyd George declared it would be a "first class mistake" to enter any peace conference without first asking the United States, Russia and Italy to participate.

Conservatives in the "secret session" was approved by some members of the House but others bitterly attacked such a move as likely to give the impression abroad of a lack of unity at home. Conservatism opposed Lloyd George's suggestion.

No Sign of Weakening.

The Daily Telegraph (Conservative) declared:

"The prime minister is to be applauded for his decision to reply to Mr. Lloyd George shown no sign of weakening in the determination to go firmly defined in his opening speech."

But the people of these islands alone will find deep satisfaction in the declaration which the prime minister made in Commons yesterday in refusing another week's progress of Britain's war aims. Behind that satisfaction will be fully shared by Dominion and U.S. public opinion who, though neutral in status, cannot be neutral in sympathy because they realize that the cause for which we have taken up arms is indistinguishably that of peace — peace, their own peace, freedom and security as the stake in the issue of this conflict.

All of which is harmless and as natural as arising in the morning. It is just that human urge to 'skite', as our American cousins call it, namely to stand behind card-players and offer unsolicited advice; to sit in the back-seat and handle the wheel of the car by verbal control; to scream instructions at a hockey fighter or yell weird advice to the speeding hockey or lacrosse players.

MISSING AIRMEN

Two Search Parties

Two search parties, each composed of two Indians, had started trekking through the bush country immediately after the plane was found. One party started from Grand Lac Maigrie, the other from the plane and both combed the district until they met.

Troop said it probably will take a week to get the bodies out of the mountainous country. They will be brought to Seven Island, Father Molsie, by plane and from there will be moved to Quebec by steamship and rail.

He had not been advised whether the men left any messages but when the plane was found last there was found a note in the cabin which said Frechette, the pilot, and Gaynor, a radio operator, had remained beside their machine for a month and had decided finally to make an attempt to reach civilization, 90 miles away.

Emergency Food Hidden

The plane carried emergency food rations but the men ate six or seven weeks and their supplies probably were low when they set out for civilization.

Gaynor was a native of Ottawa.

He was 18 years of age and obtained his radio operating license at the age of 14 when he was the youngest licensed amateur operator in Canada. Frechette was 23 and an experience aleman.

Discovery of the bodies spurred Canadian Pacific Air Lines pilots and planes, one of which disappeared in the same area where Frechette and Gaynor were lost. A Canadian Air Force plane has been assisting since September 15 when it flight from Megantic, Que., to a Montreal airport.

Pilot Joseph Frecteau and two passengers have been lost more than a month on a flight from Molsie to Lake Melville, near Labrador.

Unfavorable weather conditions have hindered the search, the R.C.A.F. machine. The plane carried Flight Sergeant F. E. Green and leading aircraftman D. A. Rennie of Ottawa.

VISIT TO BERLIN

May Go To Warsaw.

Hitler's personal statement to the Reichstag will not come before Friday, it was said, and may be Saturday. It was reported in quarters close to Hitler is preparing to go tomorrow to Warsaw. Officials ended yesterday to direct questions as to his plans, but preparations pointed to the Warsaw journey.

After the Reichstag speech, authoritative sources said, Hitler will await the reaction in other lands and then confer with the commanders-in-chief in Russia and re-examine the situation with Italy.

Some sources said a visit to Berlin by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff of Russia today was possible.

Negotiations with Russia to increase the flow of vital supplies to Germany in the most certainly would be speeded up, it was said.

An exchange visit of Russia's part in her relations with Germany and Italy was considered likely and the ports from Calo that Norwegian shipping brokers had been asked by Berlin to charter neutral vessels and ships to carry wood to Great Britain and France.

Other Shipping Quested.

Other reports from Stockholm said Swedish and Finnish shipping firms also had been queried along a similar line.

(Germany, which has declared wood and wood pulp to be contraband, has seized many wood cargoes while en route from Scandinavian countries to Britain and France.)

No official comment on Mr. Chamberlain's address yesterday was forthcoming, but in Fascist and Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and a staff of experts were understood to have worked late into the night discussing its implications.

Berlin newspapers carried only brief excerpts from Mr. Chamberlain's address, and no comment.

The semi-official commentary Diarst Aus Deutschland declared it clear that German Ambassadors would attack every armed merchantman.

"The German navy not only will be entitled but will be obliged to break the resistance or sunk ships with all possible means," it said.

Ships Escorted In.

A communique issued this morning by the high command, said 72 additional vessels had been searched for contraband by German naval forces since Sept. 30. Some of these, it was said, had been escorted into German harbors.

The communique also reported that German troops, "mopping up" in Poland, had engaged in fighting with "shattered portions" of the Polish army "between the present demarcation line and the newly-fixed German-Russian boundary limiting spheres of influence."

The Polish army was described as "calm" except for "minor" artillery activity by the enemy.

Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, commenting upon a broadcast Monday night by the Archbishop of York, who said "We can make no truce with Hitler or his colleagues because Hitler's government is utterly untrustworthy," said:

Example of Arrogance Claim.

"The statements of the Hitler regime preached by Winston Churchill and his associates is a classical example of British arrogance which constitutes the only hindrance toward European peace."

Nazi flags were flown from buildings throughout Germany in celebration of the fall of Warsaw at the completion of the invasion of Poland. Hitler ordered the flags flown until 1 p.m. to hail the victory.

There were reports Hitler would go to Warsaw to review Nazi troops marching into the city, but there were discounted in official quarters

'SPIRITUAL WAR' SAYS MATTHEWS

Lieut.-Governor Says British, French Represent Forces of God Against Anti-God

Hamilton, Oct. 4—(CP)—The battle of Great Britain and France in defence of vanquished Poland is "a spiritual war, a conflict between the forces of God and anti-God," Hon. Albert Matthews, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, declared today when opening the exhibition of the Hamilton Council of Social Agencies and the Hamilton Community Fund.

"The brave men who go from our midst to meet the foe and those whom they leave behind are deserving not earnest efforts," he said, counselling public-spirited citizens in charge of social work to carry on the "splendid traditions" of service established here.

"Our hearts and minds," said Mr. Matthews, "are weighed down by thoughts of the mighty conflict which we are entering upon and should recognize the fact that at its roots this is a spiritual war, a conflict between the forces of God and anti-God, between light and night, between the champions of love and oppression of humanity."

3 IMPLICATED

Detroit, Oct. 4 (CP)—Detroit police arrested Robert Spry, 21, of Detroit today on a charge of robbing the Merlin, Ont., branch of the Bank of Montreal of $1,700 on September 26. Police said Spry gave them a statement implicating three others in the robbery.

CONNALLY URGES EMBARGO REPEAL

Senator Predicts Germany Would Sink U.S. Ships Unless Embargo Repealed

Washington, Oct. 4 (CP)—Senator Tom Connally predicted in the senate today that Germany would begin sinking United States merchant vessels unless congress repealed at the present arms embargo and restricted American shipping.

The Texas senator, foreign affairs chairman in both the Spanish-American and first Great War, began the second day of the debate over revision of neutrality laws which prevent shipping of American arms to belligerent nations.

Stating that the government on this issue although he has opposed it on various domestic questions, Connally pointed out that the law specifically prohibits American vessels left United States merchantmen free to carry other goods to belligerents.

Would Save Ships

The senator said the "cash and carry" bill would make it "wholly impossible" for the German submarine warfare. Under it, he said, no vessel or cargo would be sunk, he continued, because it provides that at the outset of war no belligerent nations must be transported in ships of other nations and that the purchasers must take title to the shipments before they leave American shores.

Touching on the contention of repeal opponents that the lifting of the embargo would benefit Great Britain and France, Connally said their sea power would prevent Germany from buying in United States. Connally said that the United States was not undertaking to increase advantages which Germany enjoyed by reason of her location. "We have not," he added, "to deny or to curtail natural advantages which British and France might enjoy.

"How can Germany complain that we will send arms to warring nations when she is buying from neutral nations?" he asked.

Opposes Borah's Stand

Connally emphasized as no basis for the argument of Senator William E. Borah of Idaho, and other republican opponents of the arms embargo would lead to involvement in the war. He reiterated that when the United States was "dragged into the last conflict" it was "not because of arms, but by the sale of general cargo" which American citizens carried.

Parker, moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, today addressed Presbyterian ministers and urged the people of Canada a letter commending the federal government's proclamation of Sunday, October 8 as a day of prayer for the nation.

The moderator declared that all the "confusion" and many perhaps who would not attend the thanksgiving will applaud gratefully the action of the government of Canada in appointing a Day of Prayer."

Agitation Heard for Insurance of Enlisted Municipalities

Toronto, Oct. (CP)—Mayor Ralph Day said today that responsibility for permission to municipalities to insure all enlisting citizens for $1,000 rests with the Ontario municipal board. He said he hoped the Board would issue some regulations before the end of the week in view of the fact that such insurance was provided in the first Great War and that there is no legislation for its re-introduction.

To date in the city insured each Toronto man who enlisted, for about $3,000,000, the cost running to more than $1,000.

37-Pound Muskie Caught in Muscote Bay by Jas. Large

Jimmy Large, Bleecker Avenue, mail-carrier, caught his first muskellinge in a new way last night, and when he hauled it in he discovered he had also caught tipped the scales at a few ounces over thirty-seven pounds.

Jimmy decided to do a spot of trolling in the waters of Muscote Bay in the early hours of the evening, and lack of a fishing line presented difficulty to attach a spinner to the family clothesline. He tossed it overboard, and within half the space of a few minutes when he felt a tug, and warned him that war was declared.

He battled the big fish for upwards of twenty minutes, and finally hauling the thirty-seven pounder ashore, took it home, fed a few well-directed blows at the head with a heavy hammer. Rendered hors-de-combat, the muskie gave up the struggle and was carried into the kitchen.

Eye-witnesses to the "weighing-in" declared the fish weighed slightly over 37 pounds. It is now on display in the windows of Green's Meat Market, Front St.

Decision by Lloyd George

Lloyd George had decided on the formation of the imperial war cabinet after his accession to the premiership in 1917, he said (all) matters "of first-rate importance" would be considered. "Nothing affecting the foundations of the peace of the war, or negotiations for peace will be included," he added in reply.

In 1918 the second session was held at Downing Street, beginning June 21, at which the Dominions were defined by Sir Robert Borden on June 21 as those which he said: "We meet on terms of perfect equality. It I might describe it I might put it in this way—that agreements represented by ministers responsible to their own governments the conclusions of the cabinet to be carried out by the parliaments of the Empire.

British Autonomy

"Each Dominion claims its perfect autonomy and, I venture to express the hope, is to be the judge of where will be found it in the germ of a constitutional development which will form the basis of imperial unity in years to come."

Sir Robert Borden, who represented Australia at the 1918 sessions, defined the policy of holding pre-cabinet meetings to "formulate into "a commonwealth of nations which made to a still more glorious destiny."

At the 1917 meetings Hon. Robert Rogers, then Hon. Sir Joseph Chamberlain of the Canadian Cabinet, represented Canada, Sir Robert and Sir George Perley.

Imperial Appeal

In 1918 Sir Robert returned to London with Hon. Arthur Meighen, Hon. N. W. Rowell and Hon. T. C. Calder.

In his memoirs, published last year, Sir Robert wrote that when Lloyd George called the war cabinet he "virtually made an appeal or challenge of Sir Wilfrid Laurier that he should not hold out aid, call us to your council."

In Canada little was heard during 1917 and 1918 of the Imperial War Cabinet. British writers termed it "a revolutionary and unprecedented change. Secrecy in its proceedings led to confusion in the Canadian mind between the cabinet and the Imperial War Conference, a body to which the Dominions were represented and which considered general affairs of the empire.

PAPERS COMMENT ON WARNING BY LLOYD GEORGE

Standard Believes Any Offer from Hitler Means Mockery of Peace

NO DRAWING BACK

London, Oct. 4 (CP) — Evening newspaper editorials today sharply reflected the pinched attitude of the nation following last night's spellbinding argument in the Commons between Prime Minister Chamberlain and the majority of the House on the one hand and David Lloyd George on the other.

The Evening Standard (Independent) says the people will never be able to associate the name of Lloyd George with "the cool calculating yet feel equally that any offer which comes from Hitler can only make a mockery of peace.

Two Views.

Mr. Lloyd George urged that any peace proposals be hastily rejected, particularly if it meant the backing of Russia or Italy. The prime minister declared that every consideration would be given any reasonable proposals, but did not reasonable proposals, but did not "no mere assurances from the present German government would be accepted by us."

The Standard points out that factors like the incorporation of huge alien populations and the yield of influence to Russia and Italy would bring the Reich to it knees without a blow from the Allies, though the military and strategic grounds it is possible, are the strongest argument in favor of peace at the present hour.

Says Peace Would Be Surrender.

The Standard rejects the "British acceptance of peace with the Nazi yoke still planted on Poland and Hitler still supreme in his Reich would be construed by the world as a British surrender.

"Every small power would fear us. Every Nazi agent would be an exorbitant demands of Nazidom. One by one the friends of Britain, trusting her word, would be lopped off from our alliance.

"There will be no drawing back. All our honour, all our resources are committed. Peace which might make some choice peace mean only we will gain victory sooner. But it is to that victory that all of us are pledged."

Infantile Paralysis Acquired Thru Eyes?

Washington, Oct. 4. —(AP)— Infantile paralysis may be acquired through the eyes.

Two scientists of Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore, reported today in the monthly bulletin of the National of the American Association for the Advancement of Science, that they had been able to infect monkeys with the virus which causes poliomyelitis by dropping it in the eyes.

The usual mode of infection has been proved to be through the mucous membranes of the nose. Thence it spreads along the nerves of the spinal cord and brain, Dr. Howard Howe and Dr. David Bodian said.

The monkey experiments showed, however, that it is possible for the virus to be picked up from the eye and find its way into the nose through a tiny canal.

Says Great Increase In Wheat Price Not to Be Expected

Winnipeg, Oct. 4 (CP)—A satisfactory contribution from the 250,000 Canadians of Western Canada's war effort must be on a basis of a fair profit, exorbitant prices, Hon. J. G. Taggart, Saskatchewan provincial treasurer, maintained last night in addressing the Young Men's Section, Winnipeg Canadian Club.

Temporarily, Western Canada would plan for any drastic change in the agricultural set-up, based on probable demand and supply, he said, but was for expecting a great increase in the price of wheat, he said.

Agricultural production in Western Canada would be useful to efficiency, had greatly increased since 1914 and there was no indication there would be any immediate demand for wheat. Armament manufacture, however, would soon absorb a great deal of the materials used for farming, and the armies would take many farmers off the land. With production curtailed, Taggart said, the consumer would increase as the war stretched on.

Mr. Taggart considered any expansion of agricultural production inadvisable.

POPE IS WORKING ON ENCYCLICAL

His Holiness Will Condemn German - Soviet Invasion of Poland

Vatican City, Oct. 4 (CP-Havas)—Informed Vatican quarters said last night that the Pope is working in secret on his first encyclical to be published since the beginning of ecclesiastical circles believe will condemn the German-Soviet invasion of Poland and Finland.

The Pontiff is putting the finishing touches to the document during the summer residence at Castel Gandolfo, these sources said. Since encyclicals are usually written in the secrecy that not even the Pope's closest aides know the specific contents until shortly before publication, the authoritative sources said of its attitude on the Polish question was available.

Vatican conviction was strong that, at the very least, the Pope will condemn the war and its ravages, appeal to the universal brotherhood of man, and invoke peace for all peoples.

He is expected also to proclaim God's call to peace in this hour, less it is based on the idea of Divine justice.

Surgical Treatment For High Blood Pressure Gives Relief

Kansas City, Oct. 4 (AP) — Visiting part of a rib may relieve relief from high blood pressure.

Dr. Max Peet of Michigan University and Dr. Arthur Steinberg of Weet Medical Clinic he has found the best treatment is removal of part of the 11th. rib and cutting the nerves connecting with blood vessels that lead to the kidneys.

He said the operation is not a "cure-all" but that 50 patients out of 194 patients so treated in six months had definite, sometimes complete or almost complete relief from high blood pressure. Of the 50 patients and 46 per cent. had shown definite improvement.

The operation is not dangerous, he reported.

Under normal pressure, Dr. Peet explained, generally is caused by a faulty chemical circulation of blood in the kidneys.

"The blood supply to the kidneys is regulated by nerves and by the blood vessels which lead to them. Certain nerves cause a rise in the stimulation of the nerves to those blood vessels. Cutting or removing part of a small part of the 11th. rib makes it possible to cut through the nerves connected with the blood vessels that lead to the kidneys."

"Each Dawn I Die"

"Miracles For Sale"

The outstanding triumph of screen history, James Cagney and George Raft, are teamed in "Each Dawn I Die," a film which has been acclaimed as realistically with life in the prison which it depicts, now at the Belle Theatre.

This is a frank, grim, brutal and tremendously exciting story in which these two premier bad men of the screen portray their best parts, and if they were tough before, they are super-tough in this one. Each in his own way outdoes everything in the line of vicious characterization that he has done before.

At the outset of the film, the audience knows that the end means are poles apart. Cagney being mercilessly beaten by a sadistic prison newspaper reporter with not the slightest trace of viciousness in his make-up, while Raft is the arch-hard and callous criminal that he appears to be in every end.

Their paths cross when the young reporter gets a story of the manslaughter charge and sent to the state penitentiary for a long term. Raft, who is the "big shot" in the underworld, has finally been caught and is up there for life as a lifer. Rebellious from the outset because of the false charge, Cagney finds it a difficult prisoner for the authorities to handle.

Then Raft becomes friends when he saves the latter from an attempt on his life made by an enemy in the prison. Raft eventually pays for this act with his own life when he lays down his life as the result of his efforts—which were successful—to get Cagney released from prison. Cagney's innocence of the charge which had sent him there. The scene is a vast prison riot.

Supporting the two stars is a cast which includes Emma Dunn, Maynard Jan Bryan, George Bancroft, Maxwell Hayes, Stanley Ridges, Alan Baxter, Victor Jory, Edward Pawley and others.

"Miracles for Sale."

Magic will be given a new impetus throughout the world with the release of "Miracles For Sale" now running at the Belle Theatre in the midst of a group of professional magicians, all conversant with Various tricks and illusions in magic shows as well as experimenting with the central plot. The film is announced as the companion feature to "Each Dawn I Die" starring James Cagney and George Raft, familiar to most magicians. Robert Young and Florence Rice are the magical leads of the heroine. Frank Craven, Henry Hull, Lee Bonnell, Donald Clark, Astrid Allwyn, Walter Kingsford, Hobart Cavanaugh, Cliff Edwards and William Demarest are among the supporting cast. Browning, long associated with magic, and director of "Dracula" and the late Lon Chaney, directed "Miracles," a new mystery hit.

German Sub Lands 28 Survivors on Irish Coast, Departs

U-Boat Acts Too Quickly for Guards of Neutral Eire to Attempt Interment of the Craft

DARING MANOEUVRE

Survivors Landed Were from the Greek Ship Diamantis Torpedoed Off Land's End on Tuesday

London, Oct. 5 (CP)—The Press Association said today that a German submarine which landed 28 men from the torpedoed Greek steamship Diamantis on the Irish Coast acted too quickly for guards of neutral Eire to attempt internment of the U-boat.

The ship's crew was set ashore last night near Dingle, County Kerry, some 15 miles from the spot where Sir Roger Casement, Irish nationalist, was landed by a German submarine in an anti-British plot during the war.

First reports from Dublin said the submarine surrendered to authorities with persons ashore while the Diamantis' survivors were ferried to land in a collapsible boat. The Diamantis, 4,990 tons, was sunk off Land's End Tuesday.

Reports from Dublin said the U-boat came up to a pier in broad daylight at Dingle and landed the seamen nonchalantly as if the commander was on a ferry arriving from a nearby point with passengers.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Falling leaves! The leaves of some trees, such as the evergreens, of all kinds and of a few at a time throughout the year, falls preserving the evergreen appearance. Some trees in warm countries keep their leaves for a year or more; others lose their leaves in the dry season, in the North Temperate Zone some of the leaves turn yellow and die in August, not due to the weather but because they have fulfilled their function; Cold, dry weather in the fall causes the high coloring of leaves because then the green coloring matter can not be produced fast enough and the yellow and red pigments already in the leaves show up.

A. G. Davie Dies Suddenly At Desk in Newspaper Office

Veteran Journalist Was in Frail Health for Several Months but Insisted on Doing Daily Work as Advertising Manager and 'Sidelights' Editor of The Ontario Intelligencer—Widely Known in Newspaper Circles

Andrew Grey Davie, grand gentleman of the fourth estate, is dead. The dean of the staff of The Ontario Intelligencer with whom he worked as manager of advertising and columnist answered the last call shortly before eleven o'clock today.

And true to the time-honored traditions of the calling, "Andy" as he was familiarly known to his office associates, fraternities, the trade and a host of friends scattered over the far-flung section of the United States and Canada, died at his desk.

A true newspaperman, since his early teens, he was the epitome of all the traits that make good newspapermen. He knew, like the fine craftsman he was, that his "column must go to press". His spirit long kept to the clink of the press and the workaday life of the daily newspaper office never gave up.

Long and Useful Career

He wrote the final "thirty" to a long and useful career in the fascinating profession he loved.

And with his passing the "Lamplighter" has written his final column. No more will those grave and gay comments, cleverly disguising the everyday happenings of his community, his country and the world at large flow from his versatile pen, comments that marked him as one of the outstanding columnists in Ontario. The short hours true to the traditions of the fourth estate, refused to bow to the inevitable call of the physical, and day after day urged the pungent pen to answer the call of duty.

Learned Business In Youth

His newspaper life started with experience. He learned the newspaper business while a youth in his native town, followed with interest and ability to absorb the minutest details of every part of his beloved vocation. He did not follow the rut of individual study. He learned under the master-craftsmen of his day how to set type. His fertile mind yearned for the knowledge and detail of every branch of newspaper publication. This he attained through a stern application and diligent study of all the intricate parts that make the newspaper whole. And thus it was that he travelled through the United States and Canada, working on staffs of various newspapers, attaining that wide experience

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The comparative lull still prevailing on the Western front gives the military authorities of the warring nations opportunity to strengthen their own positions and analyze the war in the air. Poland with a view to profiting by the first large-scale application of the theory of lightning war with mechanized forces.

As information is assembled in Paris and London on the conquest of Poland, the Russian intervention in that country assumes increasing importance. The Russians, according to good authorities, marched into Poland just as Polish forces were beginning to fall back on fixed stand, and when German mechanized units were showing the effects of long marches under the trying conditions of warfare.

German trucks and tanks were breaking down in increasing numbers, and the farther they advanced from their original bases, the more they suffered from a growing shortage of fuel and repairs.

The Poles, it also appears were wholly unprepared for the kind of invasion they had to meet. Their equipment was out of date. They relied too much on infantry and cavalry.

Had Russia not struck at the critical moment, the Poles, by entrenching themselves before the German onslaught, would have recovered its momentum, might have established a new line, and employed defensive tactics more appropriate to German methods.

At the moment there is no immediate likelihood of fighting in the German-Polish style developing on the Western Front because of the strong fortifications there. Preparations must be made for it, because it is certain to develop if either the Maginot or Siegfried line is broken or if the Nazis attempt a push through neutral territory.

GERMANY SEEN RAPIDLY CARRIED INTO ISOLATION

British Circles Express View on Basis of Rome and Moscow Reports

'QUIET MEDITERRANEAN'

Baltic Situation Seen as Possible Future Theatre of War

By PIERRE MAILLAUD
(Havas Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 5 (CP)—(Havas)—The wheels of European diplomacy rapidly are carrying Germany into isolation, despite her apparent close relations with Italy and Russia, usually well-informed British circles claimed today on the basis of official pronouncements from Rome and reliable reports from Moscow.

Italy's denial, through the Stefani News Agency, that she intended to enter the war on Germany's side at present, was taken. Together with recent Pravda expressions of opinion in Moscow that the Mediterannean will continue to be neutral, even if Hitler's "Berlin-Rome offensive" fails.

Concern Over Baltic Situation

On the other hand, the Baltic situation, cloaked in diplomatic reticence, is growing with increasing alarm. Developments, it was pointed out, point to the Baltic rather than the Mediterranean as a future theatre of war.

The Anglo-Franco-Turkish Mutual Assistance Pact, reported initialled at Ankara last week, as well on its way toward final signature, British sources said. In addition, there was confidence that any eventual Russo-Turkish accord would be limited to the Black Sea and would in no way conflict with Ankara's commitments to Britain and France. Finally, reports indicated that Russia would give Germany only economic help.

Guardian Claims War Cabinet Weak on the Economic Side

Lone Critical Voice Against Action of U. K.'s Gov't. In Inform Dominions

London, Oct. 5—(CP—Cable)—The Manchester Guardian, influential Liberal organ, today became critical voice today against the British Government's intervention to Dominion cabinet ministers to visit London to consult regarding war. They have gone home to report to their own administrations.

The Guardian, complained the present war cabinet "lacks economic side and added:

"This evidently is not the full peace imperial war conference of 1917 but a briefer and less formal one. The British Government is divided itself into two parts—the conference proper and the imperial war cabinet, in which overseas representatives and the British war council—charged with direction and conduct of the war and imperial policy."

It was pointed out that in 1917 India was also invited and that the colonial Secretary represented the colonies.

DANES REFUSE SHIPS TO CARRY RUSSIAN TIMBER

Norway Ready to Offer Ships for Transportation of Lumber to France and Britain

REACTION OF GERMANY

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 5 (AP)—Danish ship-owners burned a cold shoulder today to Soviet Russia's inquiry as to whether they would charter ships to transport timber from the White Sea to British and France.

Norway has replied the Soviet can have as many ships as she wants, while Swedish and Finnish owners showed interest in the proposition, but reserved a final decision.

Russia's gesture aroused speculation as to her position inasmuch as Germany has notified neutral countries she considers woodpulp as contraband. Five Swedish ships, two of them loaded with woodpulp, were seized by the Germans yesterday.

The newspaper Berlingske Tidende considered Soviet Russia's shipping matters, quoted Danish ship-owners as saying they "didn't believe they were interested". The newspaper said shippers were unwilling to take risks and added: "there is no reason to think there is any secret understanding between Russia and Germany to spare ships carrying Russian goods."

Danish Russians are trading on a "cash and carry" basis and receiving the same prices as they did before the war, the newspaper said.

Danes expressed the belief that Norway and Sweden attached too much importance to Russia's in-

G. WALDRON, K.C., NOTED LAWYER, TORONTO, DIES

Solicitor of U.F.O. and Credited With Election of E. C. Drury Gov't.

A GREAT TRAVELLER

Toronto, Oct. 5.—(CP)—Political and farm leaders will pay tribute to Gordon Waldron, K.C., "the stepfather of the United Farmers of Ontario," at his funeral here tomorrow.

The death of Mr. Waldron yesterday recalled to followers of public affairs the career of the lawyer whose name was linked closely to the movement that led to election in 1919 of Premier E. C. Drury's U. F. O. government. His age was 75.

Born on Penetanguishene and raised in Huron County, Mr. Waldron rose to prominence as a deliberate lawyer. His public utterances brought him quickly to attention as a student of economy in government. He became solicitor to the U.F.O. and to its outgrowth co-operative, the United Farmers' Co-operative Company.

It was E. C. Drury, premier from 1919 to 1922, who called Mr. Waldron "my friend" regularly, while Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, who led the Conservatives to election in the bitter campaign of 1923, referred to the lawyer as political father of the Drury administration.

4,300-TON SUB CAPTURES VESSEL

Paris, Oct. 5.—(AP)—The world's largest submarine, the 4,300-ton Surcouf, was reliably reported today to have been the French vessel which captured a German merchant ship 1,100 miles out in the Atlantic.

Although the high command communique announcing the capture yesterday did not name the vessel, it was disclosed by informed French circles as a "submarine Corsair" which the French have built in the last few years as an experiment.

Likened to "fighting ships", authoritative naval analysts indicated that this description could fit only the 4,300-ton submarine which has a cruising radius of 12,000 miles, has reached speeds of 19 knots, and carries her own seaplane. In tests, she has dived in two minutes. Her surface displacement is 2,880 tons, submerged 4,300.)

MUSKIE TANGLED IN LINE WHEN LANDED

All the big fish do not get away, even when the fisherman is not equipped to handle the unexpected catch. Zack Simkie of Alderville, while casting for bass in Keene Bay in Peterborough district, hooked a large muskie. Knowing he had no chance of landing the fish on his light bamboo pole, Zack threw the pole into the bay.

Pole and line and weeds all assisted in so tangling up the fish that Zack was able to get near enough to get in some heavy work with a club. The muskie tipped the scales at thirty pounds.

A heavy mantle of fog hung over Belleville and district this morning slowing early morning traffic to a cautious crawl. The more sections of the city vision was limited to the blurred outlines of buildings but a few yards distant, while on highways through the section cars and trucks crowded at a snail's pace.

CZECHS READILY AGREE TO REGISTER

With the exception of natives of Czecho-Slovakia, registrations of enemy aliens have not been as rapid as anticipated, Royal Canadian Mounted Police officials revealed through the Belleville detachment today. "There have only been about 200 enemy aliens register since notice was given that all such persons must register under the Registration of Aliens Act. Of course this number does not include natives of Czecho-Slovakia, all of whom have come forward and registered as requested," stated R.C.M.P. officials today. The reason for the prompt registration of the Czechs was because their native country is now under Nazi regime and protectorate. Natives of Germany and other countries must register with their nearest Royal Canadian Mounted Police detachment before the end of this month. If any alien do not voluntarily register other methods of registration may have to be employed, it was further suggested.

Returning from Madoc Pair, the official's party was surprised when a brown rabbit suddenly leaped from the roadside directly in front of the car. Even then it was travelling at an estimated speed of thirty miles per hour.

The annual meeting of the Benevolent Society of St. Michael's Church took place at the home of the President, Mrs. F. S. Anderson, John Street, on Monday afternoon. Reports of the year were presented and the election of officers took place.

In her report to the Society Mrs. Anderson spoke of the extensive work carried on during the past year. Among the projects was the furnishing of milk to underprivileged children at the Academy and to private homes, as well as assisting the needy in countless ways. Mrs. Anderson expressed appreciation to Monsignor Nicholson and to officers and members of the Society for their co-operation and support.

Mrs. Anderson paid tribute to the work of the late treasurer, Mrs. Mary Daly. "The only regretful note I have to make", she said, "is the loss to our society by the death of our treasurer, Mrs. Daly, who for so many years rendered most faithful, intelligent and co-operative service to the work".

Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick, secretary, read the detailed account of the Society's activities during the past year. The financial statement showed a favourable balance.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

Honorary President—Mrs. L. P. Hughes.

1st Vice President — Mrs. Joseph Polly.

2nd Vice President—Mrs. J. Fitzgerald.

Treasurer—Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick.

Conveners— Foster Ward — Miss Mary Quinn; Samson Ward — Mrs. J. Lafferty, Mrs. A. B. Collins; Hospital Ward—Mrs. P. J. Lee, Mrs. J. Legault, Mrs. Leo Callaghan; Baldwin Ward — Miss McMahon, Mrs. L. O'Hara; Murray Ward—Miss Margaret Hayes, Mrs. W. B. Davidson, Mrs. M. J. O'Callaghan; Auditors—Mrs. P. J. Lee, Miss Helena Lynch.

At the conclusion of business, Monsignor Nicholson, spoke in high terms of the splendid work of the Society which carried out the charitable work founded by Christ Himself. Monsignor referred to the fine record of the president, who has completed twelve years in office and presented her with a gift. Mrs. Anderson made a gracious reply and the meeting was concluded with a social hour.

Precise Frontier Of Conquered Poland Fixed by Pact

Moscow, Oct. 5 (AP)—Soviet Russia and Germany have signed an additional protocol to their friendship and border treaty, fixing a precise frontier between them in conquered and partitioned Poland.

The protocol was signed yesterday for Russia by Premier Vyacheslaff Molotoff and for Germany by her ambassador to Moscow, Count Friedrich von der Schulenburg.

(The boundary had been set previously in the treaty signed Sept. 28 at Moscow, but was identified only by a map attached to the pact. Therefore, most of it along the Bug and San rivers, divides Poland into two nearly equal parts.)

There was no new announcement of the demarcation line between the two zones.

Trade Mission Expected.

It was disclosed that a German trade delegation would arrive here next Sunday for negotiations growing from the German-Russian trade and credit pact signed last Aug. 20.

On the Baltic diplomatic front, events continued in rapid-fire order. Foreign Minister Johannes Urbsys of Lithuania, who came here for conferences on Tuesday, returned yesterday to Kaunas for instructions, was reported en route back to Moscow.

Negotiations with Lithuania and Latvia, represented here by Foreign Minister William Munters, were started after conclusion of mutual assistance and trade agreements between the Soviet Union and Estonia in which Russia gained extensive concessions.

TRIO ROB BANK UNDER THREAT

Youth Threatens to Hurl Bomb With 'Nitroglycerine, Secures $1,195

Picher, Okla., Oct. 5 —(AP)— Three desperadoes, one of Oklahoma's bank banditry days with a sensational threat to blow up a Picher bank with nitroglycerine after kidnapping a salesman and holding him captive more than 40 hours.

The $1,195 holdup of the First State Bank here and another at Wubbers Falls were the first in 19 months in Oklahoma—and the scene of almost daily raids by such date-devils as Pretty Boy Floyd.

The nitroglycerine bandits started their raids Monday night with the kidnaping of Raymond Quirk, 45-year-old Tulsa salesman, at Vinita. Tuesday they robbed a Miami filling station for "cigarette money."

Yesterday they sent their leader, a blond youth, to rob the Picher Bank while the blond guard outside and a third held Quirk hostage 17 miles away.

The blond youth flourished a bottle of colorless liquid before Cashier Sandifer, bank employee, Constable Clarence McLanahan, and Dr. Paul Walker and fired three customers and demanded $5,000 from Sandifer. Shrewer "or I'll blow this place sky-high."

Shrewer shoved out a stack of bills, totalling $4,000 in currency into a wastebasket.

Quirk said on his release he had been kidnapped for his car.

POLICE COURT

Three Bancroft men, who were arrested by Provincial Police at their home last Saturday on charges of assaulting and resisting a police officer in the pursuit of his duties, appeared before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., in County Police Court, Belleville, and all were further remanded for one week.

The men's names as arraigned were Elmer Woodcock, charged with assaulting Constable Ernest Stanley Palmateer, Luke Woodcock charged with resisting and wilfully obstructing the officer, and Samuel Woodcock who was also charged with resisting and obstructing.

The Woodcocks are alleged to have assaulted Constable Palmateer and he was about to search their premises. Elmer Woodcock appeared in court today displaying a slightly discolored optic, obtained in the affray. Luke Woodcock, Crown Attorney K.C. asked for the week's enlargement to obtain the services of Counsel. Robert McCulloch, barrister appearing for the accused men.

A long list of traffic cases was disposed of, the charges being submitted by Motor-cycle Patrolmen Sam Irvine and Harry Caldwell. In each instance the charges were accompanied by the fines forth-coming were paid previous to the court and the accused persons were not present.

ESCAPED PRISONER 'GLAD TO BE BACK'

Had Lighted Fire Which Got Out of Control and Attracted Attention of Guards

Sudbury, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP)— John R. Foster, who escaped from Burwash Industrial Farm, kindled a fire to ward off the mosquitoes in the forests and set off a series of events that led to his return to jail.

The fire got out of control last night and started a bush blaze in the heavily wooded area around Millard Lake, six miles west of Burwash. The glow of the flames in the night sky attracted two guards to the spot and resulted in Foster's recapture.

Foster then turned to and helped the guards fight the fire under control.

The guards and their prisoner arrived back at the Jail Farm today after a six-mile tramp through the bush. Foster, official said, told Foster "Seemed mighty glad to be back."

Dense Fog Spoils Well-Laid Plans Of Duck Hunters

A story closely resembling the fishing tales which feature the whopper that got away was paralleled by a party of duck hunters who returned to the city this morning minus the ducks.

According to the story told by the hunters, full preparation had been made yesterday for a pleasant shoot in one of the marshes of the Bay of Quinte early this morning. Weather prophecies were consulted; everything seemed propitious. The day dawned clearly in the evening and by dusk were well concealed in the protecting reeds. In fact so well concealed that as the first gray shafts of daylight lighted the eastern sky the ducks arrived in dozens and scores, quacking and squawking with heavy beating of wings, gliding in almost at arm's length.

There were plenty of ducks, the leading member of the party related, but the main difficulty was in seeing the birds which flew but a few feet away through the early morning fog, for so thick and heavy that it appeared like dense smoke hovering over the marsh.

"That was what we sat out in the boat in the marsh all night for," stated one of the party.

HARRY M. SAYLOR

An invalid for the past six years as the result of an accident, Harry McKenzie Saylor, of 14 Elmer St., died in the Belleville General Hospital last Wednesday night.

Harry Saylor, who was well-known in Belleville and the surrounding district as an automobile mechanic for many years, was born in Stirling 54 years ago, being the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Austin Saylor.

After receiving an early education in Belleville and then learning the auto mechanic work, the late Harry Saylor came to Belleville some 25 years ago, where he became associated with the original McLaughlin-Buick garage in the city. He was employed in this capacity for over 14 years. Six years ago, however, while employed on a civic project on Jewish Island, the late Mr. Saylor sustained two fractured legs when while working in an excavation a large portion of earth fell upon him inflicting serious injuries from which he is invalid ever since.

Besides his two daughters, Mrs. Mrs. Ben Pratt, Toronto, and Miss Marguerite Saylor, at home, survive as the two sons, Norman and Ronald, at home and one sister, Mrs. Ella Boyes, Hamilton, and one brother, William Saylor, of New Jersey. The late Harry Saylor was a member of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The funeral announcement is made elsewhere in this newspaper.

"SAFETY BELT" MAY BE FORMED

Britain, However, Unwilling to Abandon Her Belligerent Rights

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 5 (CP Cable)— Great Britain is ready to co-operate with the United States and other American States in establishing a naval "safety belt" but will not agree to limit or abandon her belligerent rights of access to the West Indies or other colonies.

This declaration of policy in advance of details of the Panama conference, due to establish the zone, but Britain is willing to help the American nations protect their neutrality.

Must Patrol Effectively

It was pointed out here the safety belt comprises hundreds of thousands of square miles at sea and that it would only work if patrols were effective. Otherwise German submarines and raiders could duck in and out.

One thing Britain is certain to demand will be that no plan would limit her belligerent rights, which under international law extended to coastal waters.

Meanwhile naval circles denied German reports that British merchantships or Q-boats had attacked submarines. The navy, it was stated, had no Q-boats operating. The only guns put on merchantships were defensive weapons.

IMPORTANT

TO THE

Ladies of Belleville and Vicinity

DURING THE PAST FEW WEEKS the buyer of The J. A. McNabb Company has visited the Ladies Wear markets of Montreal and Toronto several times and found a definite tendency toward higher prices all along the line.

THE REASON for this is that the Manufacturer finds a serious lack of raw materials, while shipments of British Woollens and Yarns are almost impossible to get.

SPECTACULAR increase in the price of Furs is one of the outstanding features noted in the Ladies Ready-To-Wear market. The reason given for this is the fact that Canadian Furs are being rapidly absorbed by the New York market where the Canadian seller profits by the currency exchange influenced by the war, and increased wholesale prices in an active market.

THE big Canadian consumers are flooding the Manufacturers with orders which makes delivery hard to get and causes a shortage of materials. Labor costs have already risen and demands are being made for increased wages on all manufacturers—all of which naturally means increased prices of merchandise.

WITH this information available to the McNabb buyer and in anticipation of present conditions the firm bought early and in large quantities. This was made possible, by the co-operation of the best makers in the country adding us to maintain prices at lowest possible levels—(with the exception of Branded Lines where the prices are set by the Manufacturers and are the same all over Canada.)

IN VIEW of the above information The J. A. McNabb Co. suggests that the Ladies of Belleville and vicinity buy their Fall requirements as early as possible from the large assortment of Dresses, Coats, Ensembles, Dinner and Evening Wear, Hosiery and Lingerie as there is no doubt the increased cost of labor and materials will increase prices still further.

QUALITY and SERVICE have long been outstanding features of The J. A. McNabb Co. business and we will endeavor to maintain these principles during the difficult days to come.

Number One Rhythm Song

As the most surprised man of the week, we give you Professor Hughes Mearns, chairman of the Department of Creative Education at New York University, who created the meaningless little quatrain which now forms the major part of the lyric of "The Little Man who Wasn't There". The Robbins Music Company currently regards this piece, which is climbing fast on the popularity lists, as its No. 1 rhythm song. Professor Mearns conceived the words in 1915, eight years after his graduation from Harvard, and never dreamed they might someday make the radio program called the Hit Parade. The lines have undergone a few minor changes since he first—most recently at the hands of Harold Adamson, who, with Bernard Hanighen, brought the little Man into musical prominence—but in the thousands of times they have been repeated in the last 20 years they have never strayed far from Mearns' original:

As I was walking up the stair
I met a man who wasn't there.
He wasn't there again today.
I wish, I wish he'd stay away.

The quatrain, which has achieved a kind of folklore status, was first sung publicly in "The Pyrce-Ott", a play Dr. Mearns had written for a group of theatrical amateurs. In the drama, a psychology student addresses the ditty to a ponderous professor, who proceeds to analyze it at great length. After a couple of conferences with the music company recently, it was decided to give him credit on the newly published music and to split royalties on it three ways—a penny a copy for him, for Adamson, and for Hanighen. He will similarly divide receipts from phonograph records. Mr. Mearns doesn't anticipate getting rich from the song—he will continue his professorial career. He'd been at N. Y. U. for 14 years. He's a garrulous and reasonable little man of 64, who doesn't believe in the scholarly formality adopted by many of his colleagues. "Imagine calling another man 'Professor' with nobody else around!

THE REFUGEES

Perhaps it has never fallen to your lot to stand by the side of a road and watch war refugees go by. If you have not had that experience count yourself fortunate and pray that you will never have to gaze on such a pitiable calamity.

It is sad to watch old men, weeping women and frightened children wend their way into the unknown, driven from their homes by the terror of war, they have packed what little belongings they could snatch up. Sometimes they have loaded them into one of the farm carts and the entire family sits forlornly on the wagon, while the faithful old horse plods along. As you watch, you almost believe that the horse knows he may be slaughtered for food, if the family is driven to that length by hunger. Or, some families have only a handcart. They trudge wearily and hopelessly along the highway, wondering how far they can go and what will be their fate when they can go no farther.

Even more sad is it to be in a ruined town, when refugees start scrambling back to their old homes. What tears and what disappointments there are when they return to find their homes have been battered to bits by shells or razed by aerial bombs. The tears and the hopelessness know no bounds.

Refugees! They are sad derelicts of war.—Windsor Star.

A DISAGREEMENT

"A squadron of British capital ships together with an aircraft carrier, cruisers and destroyers was attacked by about 20 German planes, but no British ship was hit and no British casualties were incurred, while one German flying boat was shot down and another reported badly damaged," says Sir Charles Forbes, commander-in-chief of the Home Fleet. "The Nazi air force successfully attacked several British ships and besides one aircraft carrier which had been destroyed, several severe hits were scored on one battleship, while our planes sustained no losses," says the German Foreign Office. Well haven't they agreed to disagree?—Windsor Star.

G. WALDRON, K.C., LL.D.

On Feb. 16, 1922, Mr. Waldron opposed the principle of proportional representation in an address to the Century Club of Toronto, declaring such an electoral system would lead to a division on factional lines rather than on principles. A measure providing for proportional representation, backed by farmer and labor members, met defeat in the legislature three weeks later.

Defeated by One Vote

On several occasions he sought election to the legislature or parliament. The closest he ever came was by one vote, being defeated in the provincial field by Hartley Dewart, leader of the Ontario Liberal forces.

His work was Mr. Waldron's recreation and his only outside interest seemed to be in travel. Temperate in his habits, he at one time was regarded as an anti-prohibitionist but fought the introduction of "liquor control" by the Ferguson government.

The U.P.O. decided in 1920, after a hectic session, to discontinue his services and he went into virtual retirement then.

Represented Government

Mr. Waldron represented the Drury government in a royal commission investigation into the administration of Crown lands under the former Hearst Conservative government. The denial of government charges by Mr. Ferguson, who had been Lands and Forests Minister in the Hearst government, played a large part in bringing Mr. Ferguson more fully into the public eye before he was named leader of the Conservative party.

Mr. Waldron's brother, Byron, and a sister, Eliza, survive. Burial will take place in Park Lawn Cemetery here.

FRENCH TROOPS

Strengthens Line

On the German front, reports indicated, French military leaders were strengthening their line in the Saar and Palatinate sectors to meet the threat of a possible German assault.

The steady "nibbling" by French patrols also was reported to have resulted in gains in the Moselle River section.

Semi-official military information said the French now were in full possession of the Bois de Grosch pocket between the Moselle and Saar Rivers near the German-Luxemburg frontier.

While a general staff communique this morning reported only "intermittent artillery actions at different points on the front", dispatches from Luxembourg said capture of the Bois de Grosch had been marked by close-range combat between French and German tanks.

These new gains, it was said, placed the French in better position to attack the Nazi defenses in front of the Maginot defences by advancing through Luxembourg, a possibility that French military men apparently were not ready to dismiss lightly.

Using Time As Ally.

There was no evidence of any immediate spectacular military activity as the general staff appeared bent on keeping casualties to a minimum and using time as an ally to bring Germany down.

French sources, commenting on a communique last night announcing capture of a German merchant ship by a French submarine, said the prize was seized more than 1,100 miles at sea. The submarine was one of the largest in the French navy, it was said.

The ship acclaimed the speech delivered yesterday before the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Deputies by Premier Daladier, who asserted that France would fight until victorious in the war "that has been forced upon us".

The premier disclosed he had signed an agreement with Stefan Osusky, still recognized as Czech minister, for reconstitution of the Czech army in France, bringing new manpower to the allied cause.

GERMAN SUB

Information from a reliable source in Moscow said the Soviet Premier and Foreign Commissar, Vyacheslav Molotoff, in his current talks with the Turkish Foreign Minister, Sukru Saracoglu, had exercised no pressure for denunciation of Turkish commitments to the democracies.

As for Italy, there is now no doubt here among qualified observers that the Reich gave certain "peace proposals" to Foreign Minister Caleazzo Ciano without any hope the latter's government would be willing to communicate them to the Allies.

Another reason for confidence in a quiet Mediterranean is the attitude of Spain, which one spokesman described here as "120 per cent" neutral.

Paradoxically, however, tension is moving from the Mediterranean, once expected to be a battle zone, to the Baltic and the Scandinavian Peninsula, crowded with small and traditionally neutral countries.

Germany has been exerting pressure on the Oslo powers to offset the effects of the allied blockade, a pressure accompanied by thinly-veiled threats. Russia, it is pointed out, seems to be getting ready to make demands on Finland and possibly Sweden. Several Scandinavian ships have been torpedoed and others captured by the Germans.

BRIGADIER FOSTER

Brigadier Foster has been in Ottawa for several weeks but visited Montreal yesterday. It is expected he will immediately tender his resignation or ask leave of absence from the Vancouver Police Force.

Officers' Service of Legion

The new director recently headed a deputation to the Defence Minister and offered the services of the Canadian Legion and other veterans' organizations in the formation of such services as were provided by various agencies in the first Great War.

The authorization for the new directorate orders it to make adequate provision for all the auxiliary service "essential to the welfare of the troops, either in Canada or overseas, such services to include recreational huts and facilities of an educational and religious nature, as well as sports, canteens and entertainments of various kinds."

Arrangements are to be made with various national and local organizations which have offered or may offer their assistance, ordination and supervision.

Also the Defence Department has received formal offers of such services from the National Council of the Young Men's Christian Association, from the Salvation Army and from other organizations.

Brigadier Foster has been in the public eye recently both through his Presidency of the Legion and because of attacks made on his administration of police affairs in Vancouver by Mayor Lyle Telford.

A commission declared the charges unfounded. He went overseas in 1915 as a captain and assumed command of the 9th Canadian Infantry Brigade in 1919 with the rank of Brigadier.

Mentioned In Dispatches

Often mentioned in dispatches for conspicuous gallantry, he was British, French and Belgian military decorations.

The Defence Department gives the following account of his war record:

"Brigadier Foster's war record was marked by brilliant service. He was awarded the D.S.O. for conspicuous gallantry in action. He detailed two patrols, and himself led a third under heavy fire, and obtained most valuable information. Later, he carried out a successful attack and captured 'Hill 60' alive. He displayed the greatest courage and fine leadership throughout.

"Later he was awarded a bar to his D.S.O., for conspicuous gallantry and devotion to duty. When in command of a force supporting a battalion he personally led two companies of his unit in a flanking attack on some concrete strong points, and several machine gun emplacements. Owing to his personal example of gallantry, his tactical skill and powers of leadership, the whose objective was gained with but small loss, and a critical situation was retrieved.

Wins Second Bar

"Still later he won a second bar to his D.S.O. for conspicuous gallantry and splendid leadership. After two unsuccessful attacks on a village he made a daring reconnaissance to locate enemy machine guns; and then having organized two raiding parties he led one of them personally, while the other made a feint attack on a flank. With his own party he accounted for several machine guns, and the eventual result of his third attack was the capture of the village, the defeat of an enemy counter attack, and the capture of 250 prisoners by his battalion. In the evening he handed over the advanced line to a retrieving battalion. He rendered most valuable services.

"In addition Brigadier Foster was four times mentioned in despatches and was also awarded the Belgian Croix de Guerre and the French Croix de Guerre."

RIGHT TO SECURITY

Canada as one of the free Dominions within the British Empire can understand what Premier Daladier meant in his address yesterday.

"France does not want to live longer in the state of insecurity of these last years. "She refuses to bow to violence and accomplished facts. She wishes not a truce between two aggressions but durable peace guaranteeing absolutely her national integrity within a system of security for all nations."

These words of the Premier of France who said France will carry on "the war imposed on us" define the spirit of the Allied nations and democracies the world over. These words are the Marseillaise of the French people as they march to the front to guard their country from the German aggressor who has trodden on Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland without the slightest remorse.

French people do not want territory but they have the right to the security of their race and the right to demand that the world in which they live have that security. Recurrences of such events of the past few years with crises regularly and cynically timed by the German Chancellor and his group, the Nazis, have become unbearable.

Britain has the same aim. It is this situation which drew from Mr. Chamberlain the remark after the fact that the pledges of the Nazis are worthless when it suits them. Such a condition does not make for security with threats thrown in the way of the world every six months.

Canada is one of the free lands of this earth, a British Dominion, knows what liberty and security are, and appreciates the desires of all the democratic peoples for that peaceful development which the French desire in a peaceful world. Canadians love that freedom so well that they feel that the safety of the world is attacked by the actions of Germany and Herr Hitler.

In the world at large, the vast majority of people stand with Britain and France and mourn with Poland. Hitler has no friends among the nations for practically the whole world wants peace and guarantees of security. They look upon Hitler's policy as a foul disease which has come upon the world of nations and which must be eradicated by the knife of war, since it has refused to be cured by reason.

So France will fight until those guarantees are made and become a reality. That means Hitlerism must go, that Hitler must pass out of the sphere of government because of his crime against peace, liberty and justice.

Hitler knows full well that today in the constitution of society and nations, there is no peace while such principles as his have any force to uphold them. It is this condition he uses to grab power and territory. On the other hand the Allies also know this and are taking such measures as to assure the end of such a condition.

THE SOIL AND MOISTURE

Farmers on whom falls no small share of spring's ploughing and seeding keep a nation and an empire fed in times of war, are busy these days. With the autumn rains which have been a blessing their work has been made more easy than if the season had been dry and there had been a scarcity of moisture. In the late summer there was something in the nature of a dry spell but the month of September made up for all this.

Ploughing is one of the essential activities at this season of the year and nature has provided the moisture which will make possible good crops. With a large acreage under cultivation, the farmers will provide the real sinews of war.

In another way the rains have assisted the farmer. There has been an abundance of fine pasturage of late. The reservoirs of water in ponds, creeks and streams are greater than expected.

In Canada the rainfall has been a blessing. It has opened up the vista of fine crops for next year.

Today's column of "Sidelights" as written by The Lamplighter is the last to appear by the author, Andrew G. Davie, who died at his desk this morning.

THE STORY THAT WILL NEVER DIE, apparently, is "The Mutiny on the Bounty," that epic of the days of wooden bottoms, masts and sails when British seamen took a lot of ill treatment. "The Mutiny on the Bounty" has long been the toast of the fo'castle, the epic dream of many an author. In recent years the tragic story of what happened on His Majesty's Ship of War, The Bounty, and after, has been made very real by the story written by Nordhoff and Hall, those two writing men who camped down in the South Seas so long and lived on Tahiti and Pitcairn Island so long that they absorbed all the local atmosphere possible; later transferred to the moving picture screen with Charles Laughton, eminent British actor, as Captain Bligh, who caused all the trouble, and Clark Gable, "King of the Seas" by the same authors, followed by "Pitcairn Island." A great granddaughter of one of the Bounty mutineers, Mrs. Mary Ann Quintal, has just died in Sydney, New South Wales, at the age of 75. She was born at Norfolk Island a few years after descendants of the mutineers were removed to that island from Pitcairn Island. Thirty years ago Mrs. Quintal came to Sydney as the granddaughter of that old mutineer, Matthew Quintal, and her husband was a grandson of Matthew. She is survived by one daughter. Pitcairn Island has not lost its Mutiny on the Bounty atmosphere as the present inhabitants still claim relationship to the now famous mutineers. In fact the islanders have a radio station and contact is occasionally made with the North American networks so that this far away isle of the sea where the mutineers retired from the world, as the most inaccessible place in the world and least likely ever to be discovered by the outside world, you might wish to hang them, is no longer hidden. Now the question by who happens to linger outside a radio shop may hear some of the descendants of the mutineers speaking from that same island where the Bounty ended. The Mutiny on the Bounty took place more than one hundred years ago but the characters that took part in it are as vivid in the mind's eye of millions today as they were in the eyes of their few comrades of the period.

RUSSIAN RED SOLDIERS ARE SHATTERING PRECEDENT in the present "neutral" invasion of Poland. At other times they do not salute their officers unless they please to. Russian Red privates can sit down and eat with the Russian Red officers in the same restaurant and at the same tables. What a shock to the goose-stepping professional soldiers from over the Rhine. Russian Red officers can not make important decisions without consent of the intimate shadows, Red Political Commissars. A Canadian newspaper man with the Russian Red army reported that he drank vodka for breakfast, tea for lunch and dinner and munched hardtack. He reports that the Russian army is mostly on foot and horseback, being but lightly mechanized, and consequently moves slowly. The correspondent also noted much abandoned military machinery along the line of march and much squealing for grease from the tanks and other road equipment. (See "Kapot" by Carveth Wells). A great number of Polish prisoners were taken by the Red army, but quickly released, officers being obliged to sign an undertaking not to take up arms against Russia in the future.

NOT ALL BEER AND SKITTLES IS THE WAR CORRESPONDENT'S JOB but there is a thrill and fascination about getting real human interest Richard Harding Davis stories close to the Front Line. Richard Mowrer, aged 27, correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, was expelled from Italy last Spring because Mussolini did not like his news dispatches. He turned up recently beyond the Polish border in Soviet territory. He was captured by the Red army and held pending the arrival of a commisar from Moscow. After two days of waiting for the commisar, Mowrer escaped after nightfall, swam a river and made Rumania where he sent in his story.

The First Train Ride

Most of us can recall our first ride on a train and the thrill of being, for the first time, behind one of those grand and important old locomotives. For this reason an article by Ann Rutherford in the Stratford Beacon-Herald is of particular interest.

Familiarity never breeds contempt for the train. From the horrified rushes—and hurried flights—of the monstrous monster—and to—ward the horizon—to the strained quests, bearing precious freight. In between journeys, the tracks are silent ribbons between which grass ventures.

To the eyes of a child the train is a dragon straight out of the fairy tales. The great front end is lifted proudly. It breathes out smoke in the daytime and glows with fire at night. The single eye is ferocious. Its raucous voice rises to sweep traffic from crossings before it, for nothing may stand in its way. It is power, the power of a stunning body gleaming with bright, square scales or creaking with dull, practical slaves.

The first ride on this all-conquering thing is never to be forgotten. It is an experience beyond words. We of the older generation made our first journeys early in life, as toddled up and down the aisles to the delight of kindly conductors long before we were quite steady on our feet. Some of us rolled on the plush seats and the queer shades at the windows. And though dates are blank, by later years all dates are blank, the grandeur of that first ride is enshrined as unforgettable.

The generation is growing up now which misses all that. Often the first train ride comes in the late teens, and is merely a part of some rigid control. Sooner or later, the train will be bought, but that is only a mechanical task, not an adventure. It becomes only a vehicle to get from one place to another. Far removed from the common place.

Perhaps we who recall something of the thrill of our first train ride may be pardoned for thinking the younger generation is missing a great experience, through putting it off too long.

GRANDPA'S GAGS

The 12 best surefire laugh gags of the ages 40 years ago have been discovered by Groucho Marx. Groucho found them while researching through his library of comedy gags books to compare them with the 1939 brand of humor in the Marx Brothers' picture, "At the Circus." Here are the gags that reaped the loudest laughs:

1—Drummer in the orchestra rips a piece of cloth as the comedian turns over, explaining that he thinks he has torn his pants.

2—Scottish comedy, singing an Irish song.

3—Comedian prepares to jump, but walks slowly off, instead.

4—Comedian starts a song and trombone player sounds a note, causing comedian to look at him fiercely.

WAR PATRIOTS

Soon again, some innocent and patriotic citizens with German or foreign names will become the target of idle tongues. In most cases, they have to grin and bear it. A few of ours recalls an incident in the last Great War when a gang of young hoodlums raided a Toronto butcher shop where the proprietor had a German name. The young fellows made a wreck of the premises. In the casualty list in the newspapers the next day appeared the name of the son of that butcher killed in action with a Canadian battalion.—St. Mary's Journal-Argus.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Study Can Help the School Health Expert

In most cities and towns the school children undergo a physical examination at the beginning of the term. The examination and report of the child's condition as found by the physician, dentist, and nurse, gives a pretty good idea of 90 per cent of the "defects" have to do with defective teeth, decay, irregularity, parents may not consider this a serious matter, yet the child's health and future appearance as to face and body may be seriously affected by neglect of dental health. Only by keeping the teeth of the child in a healthy and comfortable condition can proper growth and development be provided for, and the assurance given that the child of today will be a vigorous adult tomorrow". The first or baby teeth should be carefully looked after because they have to come out anyway to make room for the permanent set.

Should the school health report state that there is any defect of sight or hearing, the family physician should be consulted. Many children who cannot see the blackboard clearly or who does not hear the teacher distinctly may be considered slow or stupid and an interiority complex may be developed. Sometimes tonsils and adenoids, by infection or obstruction, are interfered with the child's breathing.

Another defect is "underweight", "overweight or may not be serious depending upon whether the underweight is family characteristic, the child being really strong and wiry, or due to the fact that he does not get enough rest, hurries his eating, or eats the wrong kinds of food.

There is, occasionally, a youngster who is greatly overweight, especially those child—whose overweight is due to gland disturbance. Such children should always have special attention especially as they approach puberty (12' to 16 years of age).

Any curvature of the spine reported by the school nurse or physician should be corrected at once as correction may be difficult or regarded impossible later.

The removal of infected tonsils should prevent rheumatism and possible heart disease, removed or prevention of teeth decay, defects of vision, poor appearance, a straightened spine prevent ill health and embarrassment.

HI-HO-HI-HO

Fifteen-year-old Dick Emerson, who lives in Plymouth, England, had a terrifying experience when his pet rabbit, named Peterpan, of which he was a bugler, was torn from its cage by a prowling cat. Following the two explosions he rushed to the right door and fired and every bearable ounce of his self!" leaped into the sea.

Before the boy had time to reload a cat and climbed aboard with about fifteen inches of water paddled away," he says, "we began bailing 'Hi-Ho' and managed to get it which is more than I can say for the Courageous went down. This is the second time I've been dwarfs in Walt Disney's film story of Snow White and the Seven "Hi-Ho" is off to work we go." "It's off to war we go," it has become the British soldiers.

It is strange to think that a simple tune written for children and used in a film of pure fantasy should become a soldiers' song. Yet "Tipperary," a music hall ballad originally whistled, a thought of the coming conflict, became a favorite marching song in 1914. Appropriateness seems to have nothing to do with the selection of a song. It is any of our radio broadcasting stations to play Chopin's funeral march, they will announced the news from Poland? Chopin would turn in his grave, earth of the same nation which has once more been overrun by brutal neighbors.—New York Times.

THE FIRST FROST

Annually, when the reds and yellows begin to appear in the woodlands, we hear people say, "Yes, it's beautiful; but just wait until after the first frost." There is a folk-tale concering the part frost plays in the color changes of the autumn leaves.

Those who have studied these changes tell us that the part the first plays no part in the process. It is a matter of which we are not fully understood. Throughout the spring the leaves are green. This is due to the presence of chlorophyll, a strange plant substance which contains iron. During the fall, as the sap to food for the tree, When the season begins to wane the chlorophyll slowly changes to another form, known as plastids. These plastids are the real source of the autumn colors of them turn bright yellow, others to turn red.

Another color factor lies in the amount of plant sugar trapped in the leaves when the brushes cut off the sap veins in preparation for winter. This plant sugar reacts to chill nights and changes to the brilliant reds and purples.

Thus we get the brilliance of autumn not from the first frost, but from the chemical reactions which leaves themselves.—Samia Oberlander.

Brilliant Weather Attracts Record Crowds to Madoc Fair

Exhibits, Contests, Entertainment Best Seen in Years at This Fair

GOOD HORSE RACING

Madoc, Oct. Oct. 5 (Staff)—Reminiscent of the days when this historic Hastings County village was the battleground for political artillery, seven thousand representatives of the far-flung sections of the district centred by this hub of the northern vacation lands, gathered yesterday to pay personal tribute to what was deemed by Secretary Will J. Hill, officials and directors, the best fair held here since the founding of the Madoc Agricultural Society.

Those grand old pioneers who blazed trails through the wooded fastnesses of the northland and drove their oxen and wagons to inaugurate the fair would have turned green with envy could they have seen the 1939 culmination of the efforts of their descendants.

From Hastings, Peterborough, from Prince Edward and Lennox, from Durham and Northumberland they came. In cars and trucks, in buggies and wagons, by the thousand they trekked along the highways and byways. From Bancroft and Maynooth in the north to Belleville and Trenton in the south they converged on the hub of Hastings in a joy holiday spirit in the definite exhibition provided for them by a group of keenly enthusiastic directors.

In brilliant weather that reminded one more of the balmy days of early June than those of October, they thrilled to the varied entertainment. the outstanding livestock and other exhibits, largest in the history of that were second-to-none to any seen at the county fairs this year, the ever-present midway with its laughing jostling throngs, and to the many attractions that are part and parcel of the county fair.

Crowd Gathers Early.

Long before Starter George O. Tice called his first race for the track and e'er Tommy Mason, irrepressible master of ceremonies had gathered his galaxy of talent to the task in the centre of the grounds, scores of cars had parked through the gates.

By three o'clock, the hill near the secretary's office, overlooking the spacious grounds of Madoc's agricultural amphitheatre that is the fair grounds, was black with a milling, jostling mass of humanity. Down near the sheds that housed that display of pure bred livestock, horse, swine and poultry, that only the breeders of this district can produce was the mecca for livestock-minded crowds. The midway was the parking spot for the youth of the county of Hastings and her sister counties.

Mellow age was enthusiastic, middle-age filled the exhibition buildings where the arts and crafts, ladies' and children's handiwork, the cream of fruit and vegetable crop produce of the county's dairy, home-cooking and other rural and urban exhibits provided a collective thrill.

In the "infield" lovers of draft horses, Percherons, Clydesdales, go through their paces under the critical eye and cynosure of admiring eyes. Gleaming trappings flashed in the warm afternoon sunshine as the proud animals in harness paraded before the admiring gaze of thousands of their confreres.

Solid lines of spectators lined the track fences, patiently acquiescent to the demands of officials to remain off the track while speeding standard-breds flashed by in races which very nearly decided until the last heat was run.

It was a gay crowd that reacted to the brilliant mid-day warmth of the ideal fair weather, and the fine entertainment provided for its approval.

Fine Entertainment.

While, as the directors claim, the basic motive of the fair is for the agricultural betterment, they did not neglect to provide sparkling variable amusements and contests of all kind for the entertainment of their patrons. The maroon-garbed Tweed Citizens Band, augmented as on the outstanding musical organizations of the county, provided pay and popular concert entertainment periods in the program.

Ringed in by a large crowd of enthusiastic spectators, the dais on which the various events were staged provided one of the main attractions of the afternoon.

Here the youngsters of the north vied with their brothers of the south, south of the hill, in log-sawing and buckawing contests. Strong of arm and lithe of body, the youngsters of their admirers sent biting saws through twelve-inch logs of wood in a race against time. The entries of two-man teams vied for honors with Ernest Ray and Ross Emerson, Eldorado stalwarts, nosing out their competitors when they completed the two cuts in the record time of 60 seconds.

Again the youthful muscle strained in competition in the buck-sawing competitions, the entries competed in this "back-breaking struggle" with Geo. Shaw, Tweed, winning in 37 seconds after Harvey Roy tied his first attempt at 39 seconds.

Oldtime fiddles blazed away in old time musical glory in the old-fiddled oldsters and youngsters old fiddlers' contest, the step-dancing contest, with H. Nicholson winning the award after close competition with Mrs. Ivan Hilts Dyer, heard in the "Cowboy Singing" contest, won, in a way into the hearts of the judges, while 95-year-old John Welsh, of Springbrook, demonstrated that he still has full control of his vocal chords when he won the public speaking contest, aged men only.

The north rounded out another victory over the south in the Ladies' Nail-driving contest when Mrs. B. Parks, Bird's Creek, hammered her way to victory over the flying blows of Mrs. B. West, Madoc, and numerous other contestants.

Outstanding Cheese Exhibit

Exemplification of the abilities of Hastings County's cheesemakers to hold their own with the best in the province in the industry in which they have gained justifiable fame, was seen in the cheese exhibit, which in the opinion of the judges, is the best display seen here in years. While the quality of the cheese exhibited was of the same high calibre of former years, the exhibit excelled any previous display in that it was the unanimous verdict of the judges.

Horse Races Excellent

By far the most number of entries seen here in years, seventeen all told, the speedy horses attracted some of the finest trotters and pacers in Eastern Ontario. In the 2.15 Class, "Molly Hal", classy Canadian pacer, led a field of three the wire to annex the race in three straight heats.

In the 2.35 Class, C. Caldwell's "Gentry Gratian," who chased Molly Hal home in the wind in the record-breaking race at Picton last week, was a class pacer that heats to a field of four, leading "Peter J." in all three heats to get first money.

Eight starters faced the wire in the 2.50 Class, with Dr. Bronson's chestnut horse "Richard Hall" from Belleville leading the pack in all three heats to get first place in the money. All races were well contested, and provided plenty of racing thrills for the crowd of enthusiasts that thronged the grand-stand.

Fitting culmination to an outstanding fair program was held at night when amateur plays were given in the Masonic Hall to crowded audiences that filled the hall and set the youthful fair-goers to the wee hours.

THESE STRIVE TO KEEP NATIONS OUT OF CONFLICT

These seven rulers of European nations are today engaged in the arduous task of steering their countries through perilous times. Six of these nations successfully avoided being embroiled in the world war. Finland, at the outbreak of the world war, was a grand duchy of Russia. Following the Russian revolution, it broke away and formed an independent state.

Widely mourned throughout the United States and Canada, the body of George Cardinal Mundelein, Archbishop of Chicago, and one of the most prominent Catholic prelates in America, is shown lying in state at the Holy Name Cathedral, Chicago.

Areas which fall within the range of bombing planes operating out of Europe's warring powers are pictured on this map. Average range of a fully loaded bomber is 500 miles. German planes will most likely taken off from Wilhelmshaven (1) and Sylt (2), while the British home force will operate from Harwich (4).

HON. G. LAYTON

Mr. Layton said that "at this time when the Province, the Dominion and the whole world is badly in need of constructive leadership, Maurice Duplessis, a man whom the people of the Province of Quebec three short years ago raised to the highest position in the province, has in my mind miserably failed his citizens and forfeited their confidence.

"He has taken a stand, which if supported at the polls can only place Quebec in the eyes of the whole world as a disunited, disloyal unit of the British Commonwealth of Nations.

"It is my belief after three years close contact with French-speaking citizens from every part of the province, that this platform will be equally unpopular with them as it is with their English-speaking brothers.

Layton Bitterly Disappointed.

"Every democratic nation now recognizes the present war as one of the forces of might and dictatorships against Christianity.

"I am positive that the prime minister in his heart realizes that this is so and therefore I am bitterly disappointed to feel that a man in whom I have placed so much confidence and have loyally followed and supported since my election in 1936 could place party politics before what I consider is his duty as a Canadian."

The 40-year-old minister first entered politics three years ago when the Union Nationale party came into power. He was a member of Mr. Duplessis' first cabinet and has served without portfolio since, as a representative of the English speaking minority.

Prominent in business circles, Mr. Layton is vice-president of a musical instrument firm here. He has been associated intimately with charitable and athletic ventures and during his college days at McGill University, was noted as a hockey and football star.

HITLER TO SPEAK

Included Colonel-General Walther Von Brauchitsch, Commander-in-Chief of the German Army; Colonel-General Erhard Milch, Inspector General of the Air Force; Colonel General Karl Rudolf Gerd Von Rundstedt, Eastern Commander in Chief, and two men who had leading roles in directing the attack on Warsaw, Colonel-General Walther Von Reichenau and Colonel-General Johannes Blaskowitz.

Hitler promoted Von Reichenau and Blaskowitz to the rank of Colonel General only last Monday.

Tomorrow the Fuehrer is scheduled to speak for 1½ hours. It was stated the rough draft of the speech had been completed but changes were possible up to the last minute.

Even the best-informed Berlin newspapers devoted only one sentence to announcing the Reichstag session although they display-ed the announcement under their headlines.

Nazis are making every effort to place responsibility for the war and its prolongation on Britain.

Claim War is Finished

The Nazis claim that with the fall of Warsaw, the war in the East is finished; that war in the West never really has started.

Although neither France nor the French attitude toward the war was mentioned, newspapers prominently displayed an alleged order of the British Admiralty to British merchant ships to "ram every German submarine."

The papers attributed the order to Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty.

That Germany was not in a hurry to start operations in the West was indicated by an army communique which said that "in the West there is almost complete calm except for minor artillery activity by the enemy."

quiries. Similar requests for ships, they said, are made annually at this season before the White Sea becomes ice blocked.

Russia Fears For Own Ships.

The newspaper Politiken quoted one ship-owner as expressing the belief that Russia was afraid her own ships would be torpedoed.

Danish sources pointed out that timber was an important item in the Russian-German trade agreement in which the Soviet agreed to barter raw materials for the Reich's machinery and finished products.

Stockholm, Oct. 5 (CP-Havas)—Sweden today instituted a naval patrol to protect shipping in her territorial waters against incursions by belligerent raiders.

The new patrol comprised ships of the Swedish west coast fleet, including a cruiser, two destroyers, and smaller boats, and about 100 merchant vessels hastily pressed into service.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. L. B. Blaker wish to announce the engagement of their daughter, Eleanor Blanche, to Flight-Sergeant Douglas Frederick Dunning, R.C.A.F., son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Dunning of Ottawa, the wedding to take place in Christ Church early in November.

Last evening members of Christ Church A.Y.P.A. held their weekly meeting in the Parish Hall. Mr. Willis Jackson, president, opened the meeting with prayer. The guest speaker, Mrs. Stuart Leslie, gave an interesting address on Red Cross work in Canada. The organization, development and activities in peace as well as war times were clearly defined. A satisfactory financial report was read by Miss Gladys Lemmin. A number of new members were installed by the rector, Mr. O. G. Wright. After a pleasant social hour the meeting closed with God Save the King.

Mrs. F. Domenico and Mrs. G. S. Lee spend Wednesday in Toronto.

An interesting picture of Miss L. M. Hunter, bride-elect, daughter of Mr. Arthur W. Hunter, 236 Bleecker Avenue, appears in today's Globe and Mail.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Airey and daughter, Donna, 18 Bridge St., have returned home after a week's holidays in Buffalo and Niagara Falls.

Books Theme of Young Peoples' Meeting

The Quaternion Young People's Society held their weekly meeting in Hollowy Street Union Church with over sixty young people in attendance. Miss Mildred Hunter, the president, presiding. The meeting opened with a hymn and prayer by the Rev. David McClinton.

This being the first regular meeting of the fall term, there was considerable business to be discussed and transacted. New members were introduced and welcomed.

Miss Flossie Terry, Christian Fellowship convener, took charge of the program. Her subject "Books that Transform Devotional Life", opened with a worship service. Those taking part were Misses Terry, Olga Munday, and Mildred Crestrin. She then opened the subject of the evening with the thought of our need of deepening our spiritual lives through the avenue of books. Helen Robinson, Edith Donaldson and Reg. Terry presented the subject matter in the form of characters. Helen Robinson presented the Bible, speaking of its value to mankind throughout the ages. Edith Donaldson represented the poets with their message that deepen our spiritual growth. Each speaker made suggestions of helpful books for deepening our experience of God.

An interesting discussion on books followed.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When You are Choosing Your Wall Colors

I have noticed that the terrific effort that some women make to have a different color for every room defeats the harmony of the whole effect. This is especially true in a small house or apartment.

Instead of making this tremendous effort to have varying colors, it is far wiser to consider using one color for a grouping of rooms, or even one color for all the rooms. If this color is wisely and artistically chosen, you will find that the effect will not be so "chopped up", and, important too, the unity of color will make the space seem much larger.

Let's take, as an example, the grouping of rooms that we often find when we enter a house or apartment. First, there is the entrance hall, said beyond that, or at one side of that, the living-room. On the other side may be the dining-room. Here is a fine chance for unity and harmony of total effect. Instead of choosing one color for the entrance-hall, another for the living-room, and still another for the dining room, see if it wouldn't be more charmingly harmonious to choose one shade for all. Nowadays house spaces and apartment spaces are decreasing so rapidly that we should do everything we can to give them opportunity of appearing larger.

Don't leap at once to the conclusion that, if you do this, you would have to choose a dull neutral shade. Instead you can choose a clear, forth right shade that will immediately reveal a delightful come-hither personality of your house, as your family and your guests enter. Instead of being confused by three shades, their eyes will be charmed and "relaxed" with one harmonious effect.

And consider, too, carrying this harmony even farther, as most decorators do nowadays, by having the woodwork in the rooms painted exactly the same shade as the walls. When you come to analyze it, there usually isn't any reason why the woodwork, "trim", should be painted a different color from the walls.

Before you give your final approval to a paint shade, let it dry out and look at it in morning light, afternoon light, and electric light. As you are looking at the small sample of the shade, remember that it will look three times darker when it is all over the wall.

If you don't watch out, and if you don't give your painter definite instructions, he is apt to shellac your floors in a glistening light shade. The best treatment of wood floors is to have them stained dark brown. There are simple, easy methods and appliance by which you can keep them waxed and polished so that they will have the waxen, soft tone so desirable in the floor-background.

Surprise Party

By fees from patients .
By fees from insurance companies.
By membership fees.
By municipal and township grants.
By additional efforts on the part of the Board responsible for the work.

To carry on the splendid service of the V.O.N. additional sums other than grants and fees are necessary because of the large amount of free work among those less fortunate. Won't you do your share by making a contribution during this week's appeal for funds?

AIKEN'S W.M.S.

The October meeting of Aiken's Woman's Missionary Society was held on Tuesday at the home of Mrs. Selburn Westover.

In the Absence of the President, Mrs. Thos. Irwin, this "Thanksgiving" Service was conducted by Mrs. Leon McMullen, with Mrs. Harley Hubble assisting in the opening devotions.

The thirteen members present answered to the Roll Call with verses of Scripture on "Thanks".

Mrs. Fred Westover expressed appreciation for remembrances received from the Society and members, while a patient in the hospital and during illness.

A card of thanks was read by the Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. Selburn Westover, from Mrs. Gerald Brickman, acknowledging the word of remembrance while in the hospital.

Plans were made for an open meeting of Aiken's W.M.S. when B.A. of Pembroke, will be the guest speaker.

"What is India to Me" a beautiful poem, was read by Mrs. Leon McMullen as the next Study Book "Moving Millions", was introduced by Mrs. McMullen and Mrs. Perry Hamilton.

Mrs. W. Bailey, Mrs. B. Palmer, Mrs. G. Westover, Mrs. H. Hubble, Mrs. P. Moon and Mrs. E. Hubble, assisted in presenting the first chapter.

This chapter told of the visible results of the coming of Christianity to the Indian villages. Cleanliness, sanitation, better homes make for better health; the schools, literacy and good literature create higher standards of living and this in turn, brings deeper changes in mind and heart, more free from fear, by fellowship and contact with the fellowship of the church.

The closing prayer of this chapter "I love to meet the common folk who throng the Indian Road", was given by Mrs. Hamilton.

A solo "Keep on Singing", was rendered by Mrs. Perry Hamilton.

Miss Ruth Stafford gave a full and concise report of the missionary conference held recently in Belleville, which she said, was teeming with information and inspiration and created a feeling of need for deeper consecration. A resume of the address given by Mrs. Hugh Taylor on the Madras Conference, was given by Mrs. E. E. Hubble.

The meeting was closed with prayer by Rev. L. W. Scott, and lunch was served by Mrs. Westover and her assistants.

Weddings

BRANTON—BARRIAGE

On Saturday evening, September 30th, in St. Andrew's Church, Wellington Frances, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Barriage, was united in Holy Matrimony to Edward Branton, youngest son of Mr. Wesley Branton and the late Mrs. Branton, Rev. O. G. Wright officiated.

The bride was charmingly attired in navy blue sheer with navy blue and white accessories. She was attended by Miss Jean Parks also attired in navy blue. Mr. Harold Niles was groomsman.

The gift to the bridesmaid was a lovely gold compact and the groomsman a gold tie set.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home on College St., Mrs. Barriage receiving in black crepe with white accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Branton will reside on Coleman Street.

HOLMES—MELBURN

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Melburn, Shannonville, an interesting wedding took place last evening at six o'clock when their only daughter, Roberta, became the bride of Lieutenant T. Clifford Holmes, son of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Holmes of Stirling. Rev. J. E. Reckel, pastor of Bawdon United Church circuit officiated.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was charming in her gown of white sheer, with bouquet of roses.

Miss Emma Collett was bridesmaid and were prided with and carried roses. Mr. Jack Empson, Kingston, was groomsman.

Following a wedding supper in Belleville, the party returned to the bride's home where a dance had been arranged and the bride and groom were presented with beautiful dinner wagon. The bride had recently been the guest of honor at a cup and saucer shower held by Roslin school section at the home of Mrs. Leonard Ellis.

After a trip to Ottawa, where the groom has been called for his army duties, the young couple will return to Picton where Lieutenant Holmes will join his regiment.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Uncharperone Teens

Parents, and older people generally, have a good deal to say nowadays about the fast that the chaperon, generally speaking, no longer exits. They disapprove of this. They'd like to have the chaperon restored.

Boys and girls in their 'teens hear this talk going on. They don't say much—but they wonder what their parents mean. Do the parents not trust these youngsters? Do they believe that their sons and daughters, unchaperoned, conduct themselves in ways they would be ashamed to acknowledge? Do they harbor secret suspicions about these children whom they love and who loves them?

I'm suggesting, you see, that the boys and girls have a point of view of their own. Which turns out to be precisely the case. And it's a point of view that's worth listening to. More than that, it makes you feel warm and affectionate and generally enthusiastic about American youth.

A monthly magazine which is interested in family life recently invited a great many high school students to express themselves on the chaperon question, and it has published the results.

Naturally, the boys and girls are unanimous in their vote of the old-fashioned chaperon. Do they want to be forever spied on, like criminals, their every movement watched by some middle-aged spinster who secretly hopes to catch them in a furtive kiss? No, they say. If this is what chaperonage means, then down with the chaperon!

But these youngsters are not mere rebels against a doubtless outworn convention. They have their own ideas about how youthful society should be conducted, and they are willing, even eager, to talk about it. They feel they have been maligned and they have at present, perhaps a slightly chip-on-the-shoulder attitude. But they'll get over that.

The really touching thing about these confessions is the desire and obsecents, to be decent and regular and straight. They are perfectly self-respecting and they see no reason why their elders shouldn't respect them likewise. It is true that you may often find them flighty or silly or extravagant in talk. But fundamentally, these boys and girls are good.

"French don't understand", they say, "how innocent our amusements are. We need no watchdog. And if it's our elders they're concerned with, why didn't they think about these things a little earlier? High school age, according to these wise infants, is too late to start worrying about children's morals.

"And it would be healthier, we think, if parents weren't so silent about sex questions. We'd be willing enough to talk over our problems with them, if they were franker with their mothers and fathers in- formed.

In spite of the fact that [illegible] Also, parents should have an opyoungsters don't believe in official portunity to pass on their children's watchdogs, they have their own no- escorts. A group of family, two couples is a better arrangement. Do these sound like the ideas of they say—though this is, of course, a wild and reckless generation. Far a modified chaperonage.

They believe parents should al- to know their children a little bet- ways know where their sons and er, in order to agree that the oldchildren's responsibility to keep necessary.

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recommended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

GUARDIAN

The Yorkshire Post (Conservative) suggested the present set-up would serve the same purpose as the old conference, "without in the least infringing on the executive responsibility of the Dominions."

No Date Set

The paper added that the "fruits of these discussions should thus ripen promptly throughout the Empire to strengthen still further that intimate collaboration between Britain and the Empire which is so vital if the British peoples everywhere are to throw their full energy into the cause which they have unitedly at heart."

No definite date for the gathering of Dominion Ministers has been set. Hon. T. A. Crerar, Minister of Mines and Resources, will represent Canada.

It was announced today at the New Zealand High Commissioner's office that the Wellington Government will be represented by Peter Fraser, who has been acting Prime Minister during the illness of Prime Minister Michael Savage.

Colonel Deneys Reitz, Minister of Native Affairs, will represent South Africa. The Australian delegate has yet to be announced.

GERMANY SEEN

These reports said the U-boat crew waved a greeting to persons on shore who waved in reply.

"Civic guards patrolling the coast saw the submarine on the surface and rushed to the spot," said the Press Association's account, "but they were too late to detain the German U-boat. While they were still some distance away the submarine moved away from the coast and started to submerge.

Only Frothy Sea

"When the guards actually reached the scene of the landing the only evidence of the daring manoeuvre of the German U-boat commander was a stretch of frothy sea where the submarine had disappeared and a group of bewildered seamen were on the shore."

Six of the survivors were taken to Dingle Hospital for treatment of injuries received in the fore peddoing. The others said they had been aboard the U-boat for 36 hours and were treated very kindly while it cruised off the Irish coast seeking a spot to land them ashore.

Informed sources pointed out that the obligation of a neutral state to intern a submarine in such a case existed only if sufficient force to carry out the interment were available—such as a warship.

Desolate Landing Place

The region selected for the landing was described by the British as "desolate" and although it is patrolled night and day only one Customs officer happened to be in the immediate neighborhood.

Sir Roger Casement and two companions were landed similarly on the night of April 20, 1916. Their arrival was alleged to have been part of a plan for the Easter week Irish uprising. Sir Roger was executed in London.

President Eamon de Valera told the Irish Senate last night that the country would strengthen her neutrality by making nightly blackouts compulsory to prevent any belligerent planes from using Ireland's lights as guideposts. At present-only Ireland's street lights are shaded.

TRICOLOR SQUAD NO DOORMAT FOR REST OF FIELD

Frank Tyndall New Coach at Queens Not Dismayed With Outlook

GOOD BACKFIELD

Line Fair With Plenty of Strength in Tackling Brigade

By —RED BEAUBRY
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Kingston, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—One of the boys from Syracuse will be trying to make good at Queen's this year and on the record he can't help but succeed. In making his coaching debut with the Tricolor, Frank Tyndall is taking over a team that failed to win once in the Intercollegiate rugby football union last season.

Like Warren Stevens of Toronto Varsity and Lou Hayman of Toronto Argonauts, Tyndall starred in his football at Syracuse University, later taking a freshener in the Canadian game with Argonauts. And the big lineman doesn't doubt but that he can match the coaching feats of his college chums.

There are no outstanding stars on the 1939 Tricolor lineup but that doesn't worry Tyndall. He has all but four of last year's personnel to work with, and the team has no doormat for other college clubs, judging from its first test—a fine exhibition victory over Guelph's tough Intermediate Aggies.

No Green Hands

A year ago the Tricolor lost 12 players and 10 more, now with Montreal Royals, had to depend largely on rookies from the previous season and newcomers. The green hands will be few and hardly noticeable on the 1939 lineup.

Jack Brown, regular kicking halfback, appears to hold his own with other intercollegiate kickers. Brown spent the summer under Pep Leadley's tutorship and to date looks 100 per cent improved. Leadley, famed quarterback of other years, is a member of a three-man staff behind the Tricolor ball. His ex-running mate, Dr. Harry (Red) Smith and Joe Breen are the other members.

Annan to do Plunging

To spell off Brown, Tyndall has Art Walker, Toronto Oakwood collegiate lad, and Bob Davis, out of the game last year through illness. Both are promising.

Capt. Doug Annan likely will do the bulk of the plunging from the backfield. The grandlad, a junior standout two years ago, Bud Johnston and Joe Hoba, round out the back division. If Ford (Mike) Lemke's injured knee mends, the Peterborough boy will add strength to the club. With a good knee, he is a brilliant, hard-hitting runner.

Capt. Doug Annan likely will do the bulk of the plunging from the backfield. The grandlad, a junior standout two years ago, Bud Johnston and Joe Hoba, round out the back division. If Ford (Mike) Lemke's injured knee mends, the Peterborough boy will add strength to the club. With a good knee, he is a brilliant, hard-hitting runner.

Array of Veterans

On the line Coach Tyndall has an array of veterans and rookies whose worth will be determined by actual performances. Jack Chepesiuk, Howie Barends, Irvin Bean, Al Clarke and Pinell Carriere are on the veteran list as yet. Bill Brass, Harry Hoose, Jack Paddon and Connell are rookies standing.

George Carson, a veteran of three years' intercollegiate competition, is a sure bet for one of the end positions. Ken Edwards is favored as his running mate. Ken Caskill of the Richmond club of 1938 squad have to contend with Bruce Hall, Ken Buchanan, Jack Jos Gordon and Norm Eastaugh for the relief work.

It took only one short season for the Tricolor to topple from the heights and spend dreary months of any reason why it should take any longer to get back up there.

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, Oct. 5 (AP)—One thing is certain about the 1939 baseball series won't produce a better pitched game than Derringer and Ruffing turned in yesterday.... Lou Gehrig, who'll be honorably released by the Yankees after the series, has definitely made up his mind to do some radio.....

Three clubs will try to get Morris Arnovich from the Phils this winter. Down in Florida they're still raving about the 60 minutes of brilliant football Clemson's Banks McFadden played against the Greenies last week.

Al Weill has added Arturo Godoy, Chilean welterweight champion, who licked Galento twice, to his brood and will go after that January shot with Joe Louis.... Newark and Jersey City drew 68,000 fans in the International League playoffs, which is all right.

Ever since Pitt University's team flew to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, the big airlines have been approached by numerous other colleges for charter rates on flights to games.... Bert Bell says Davey O'Brien will clean up around $40,000 this year in salary, testimonials, endorsements, etc., etc.

Bip Valenti will follow Ned Irish's lead and put college basketball in the Boston Garden this fall.... Joe Louis, ardent Tiger fan, is betting on the Reds.

As it was, Derringer went into the ninth inning looking fairly secure. His sweeping curves appeared to have the champions baffled, just as Ruffing's terrific fast ball and change of pace had throughout the game.

Red Rolfe, first Yank up in the ninth, banged one over the head of McCormick fumbled but came up with in time to win a close decision. Keller, the rookie from Newark who batted .470 in one that went toward the 407-foot sign in righ centre.

Goodman went after it from right, just reached it. At arm's length he got a ball first glove and bounced off, and Keller easily reached third, it was scored as a triple.

Derringer then purposely passed DiMaggio to set up a possible double play. Why he didn't also pass Dickey while he was about it thus setting up a force play at home has not yet been explained. Dickey pumped a clean single into centre that Harry Craft fumbled and didn't even bother to recover, because Keller long since was across the plate and the crowd was leaving.

Berger's Wrong Throw in Fifth Spelled Defeat for Cincinnati In First Game of the Series

Gordon Scores Tieing Run in Frame When He Simply Coasted from First

EXCELLENT HURLING

Both Ruffing and Derringer Showed Real Class on the Hilltop

By GAYLE TALBOT
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 5 (AP)—Those New York Yankees, possibly the greatest set of opportunists baseball has yet seen, are off and running again.

Yesterday over the scrapping Cincinnati Reds 2-1 in yesterday's tense opening battle of the World Series, they go into the second contest at Yankee Stadium today almost prohibitive favorites to wrap up their fourth straight world championship.

That was the game the Reds needed. Paul Derringer nearly pitched his stout heart out, and the National League teammates fought to the last gasp before a friendly crowd of more than 58,000. But in the end the great pitching of Red Ruffing and that speedy starting of the Yanks proved a little too much.

Even if Bucky Walters, their second fine pitcher, scores for the Reds today over the Yankees' Monte Pearson and squares the series, the Yankees still will have a big psychological edge as they go to Cincinnati to continue the clawing Saturday.

Wrong Throw Made

Probing into the opening thriller, though it was won by Bill Dickey's line single to centre with Charley Keller on third base in the ninth, it was lost in the fifth when Harry Berger made the wrong throw-in from left field in the Cubs' team, enabling Joe Gordon to score all the way from first on Babe Dahlgren's zipper down the line.

That one uncertain throw undid the splendid six-hit, seven-strikeout hurling of Derringer and put the big right-hander in a spot where, when the Yankees finally struck again in the ninth, he was trying to fight off the winning run instead of the tying one. His control's do it, and suffered his first loss in 11 starts.

Berger's arm is acknowledged to be the weakest link on the whole Cincinnati chain, but it is not certain he was responsible to the weird play that enabled the Yanks to tie the score. That can be only did as he was signalled. But here's what happened:

How It Happened

The Reds were leading 1-0 the result of a walk to Ival Goodman, his steal of second and Frank McCormick's hit through the box. Ruffing, Derringer in four innings had given up the Bombers only hits and had whiffed four.

So, with one out in the fifth, Gordon lined a single to left. The next batter, Dahlgren, cracked one over third that Bill Werber just failed to spear. It went on to the stands and Berger fielded it gamely as Gordon tore between second and third. Then Berger lazily winged the ball toward second, apparently hoping to nab Dahlgren there.

Art Fletcher, coaching for the Yanks at third, saw the throw was hadn't arranged for a "cut-in" play, as he said later, and he waved the fleet Gordon on home. Linus Frey took Berger's heave, and, apparently flustered at Gordon's daring, made a high peg to Ernie Lombardi at the plate as the Yankee raced home.

The Reds, in the dressing room later, admitted individually they felt that was the lapse that cost them the struggle.

Belleville Collegiate Returns To Interscholastic Football With 8-5 Win Over Albert

OVER 600 PRESENT

Each Team Score Touchdown in First Quarter, Clare's Placement Gives Victory to B.C.I.

After an absence of three years from the senior interscholastic football canopied the Belleville Collegiate gridders returned to the O.S.S.S.A. with an 8 to 5 victory over their ancient Albert College rivals on the latter's new campus gridiron yesterday. A crowd of some 600 students and alumni welcomed the squads as they ushered in the senior interscholastic rugby football season, while the Belleville Collegiate band added still more color to the picturesque scene with their attendance and musical airs to inspire the "collegians".

Both teams scored touchdowns in the initial quarter, the Belleville Collegiate going over for a major score on the third play of the game following a rugged Albert offensive that was recovered by Warren with Farquharson crashing for the try. Moments later Woolley took a 35 yard forward pass from Moulden and galloped 40 additional yards for a touchdown. From that point the two teams battled evenly until Clare booted a placement for the "collegians" from 30 yards out for the winning three points.

Both squads were guilty of continued fumbling on the offensive, while numerous penalties also militated the game from the spectators' viewpoint. Albert made early game advances by tearing through the Collegiate line and completing extended end runs with some success, but fumbles proved costly when in scoring position. Farquharson and Moulden intercepted opposition forward passes in a second quarter while Watson broke through to break up an Albert kicking formation.

In the fourth quarter "Yank" McBride ran back an Albert punt for the 35-yard line and Clare booted a placement. Latimer and Coughlan made substantial gains for Albert at this point, but the "collegians" held firmly deep in their own territory. Watson and Warren of the B.C.I. were injured during the game and forced to retire, Bill Pigden taking over the quarterback duties on the retirement of the former. Late in the third period a B.C.I. forward clicked perfectly for the subsequent "fine flicker" play was officials for no gain. The "collegians" endeavored to finish somewhat the stronger, from an uncertain start when their line failed to hold in the final stages.

Clare Outkicks Woolley.

Ross Clare outkicked Woolley of Albert on each exchange of punts. The Albert quarterback, Bruce "Yank" carried a large burden of the Collegiate's attack while Farquharson stood strong on the defensive duty defence. The Collegians' line failed to impress with its strength, Watson carrying the bulk of the scoreward attack in addition to handling deadly at times. Lefty Loughead was the spear-head of the Albert attack with his passing, but the line broken field running in his speed. Alf Moulden performed the brunt of Albert's secondary defensive efforts, however, and Albert's line held much better than the line.

Each team attempted eight forward passes throughout the struggle and each completed but one. Albert loaned two complete passes in desperation in the last few minutes but without avail.

The line-ups:

Belleville Collegiate Institute — Flying wing, Latimer; halves, Clare, Watson, Farquharson; quarter, Warren; snap, Zufelt; flankmen, Coughlan, Sharpe; middle, Cavanaugh, Mulholland; outsides, Wilson, Pigden; subs, Thorne, Sward, Bunnlee, Hunter, Tripp, Crenk, Hart, O'Connor, Goodwin, Gardiner, Farquharson, Cearly.

Albert College—Flying wing, Latimer; fullback, Ruddy; halves, Loughead, Moulden; quarter, Woolley; snap, Partridge; inside, Browning, Hogyard; middles, Burrows, Chamberlain; outsides, Brown and Crouch; subs, Instant, Bailey, Dahlin, Brawley, Manning, Orr, Hawkinson, Shields and Hughes.

Referee—Homer (Red) Townsend, Belleville.

Umpire—H. McDonald, Albert College.

ADAMS PICKS THE BRUINS

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 5—(CP)—Manager Jack Adams of the Detroit Red Wings thinks anyone who predicts the season's winner before the season starts "is a sucker"... but predicts the Boston Bruins will win the National Hockey League Championship again this season.

Adams told a service club here last night the New York Rangers should be close behind. He said the Wings should have a good season.

YOUNGSTERS TO DECIDE SERIES

Rochester and Louisville Tied at Three Games Each for Little World Title

Rochester, N. Y., Oct. 5—(AP)—A pair of rookies held today the answer to the Little World Series clash between Rochester of the International League and Louisville of the American Association.

With the teams tied at three games apiece in the annual minor league post-season classic, rival managers, their veteran pitchers used up, called upon their youngsters to win the deciding game.

The Wings squared the 21st annual junior classic last night with a 9-5 victory.

Hirsal Lyons gave 11 hits but he confined the Colonel scoring to one in the seventh, Fred Singlton's double and Paul Campbell's 375-foot home-run the second of the series here—when he connected with Dietrich's six-hit spurt during that frame.

Harry Davis with three hits, two of them in the second, and Dixie Cooke with a pair led Rochester's assault.

MAICH TO MEET MASKED MAN IN LOCAL RING

Fans Hope to See Behooded Grappler Unmasked in Belleville

THREE BOUTS

There is always an air of mystery surrounding a masked person appearing in the ring, no matter what the circumstances. The general public is always eager to secure a glance at the countenance behind the mask and on Friday night at the Hume Arena Belleville Red Maich meets Joe Maich of Brantford, former amateur star district and doubtless be seeking a victory for Maich in hopes of securing a look at the face behind the mask.

Just who the "hooded gent" is will be a mystery even to Referee Daniels of Regina and Young Griffins of Niagara Falls, will all be at the Hume Arena on Friday night in the main event bout which no doubt will be termed as a grudge fight. Daniels won last week, but Young Griffins used questionable tactics. Griffins still contends his shoulders at no time were pinned for the necessary two seconds and demanded a return match.

The other match on the card introduces a new face in that of Chief Big Bear, a full blooded North American Indian, who hails from Alert Bays, British Columbia. "red-skin" is making his initial tour of Canada and comes to the Hume Arena highly recommended from along the Pacific Coast.

HERBIE WESTMAN TO DO KICKING FOR WESTMOUNTS

Gordie Noseworthy, Plunger and Kicker Out of Action Saturday

WESTERN HARD HIT

Both Outsides Injured in Workout and Will be Absent from Game

(By The Canadian Press)

Coach Ted Reeve of Montreal's Big Four Royals can be thankful his team is well supplied with kickers.

The Royals' mentor learned from club trainers last night that Gordie Noseworthy, counted on to do a good part of the hooting for his team this season, probably will miss the Big Four opener this Saturday against the Canadian champion Toronto Argonauts.

However, Reeve still has Herbie Westman, booting ace of last year's great McGill redmen, to bank on against the scullers. Westman and Noseworthy are about equal as kicking aces, the latter is also a terrific plunger. Then should Reeve need to give Westman a rest, he can always throw Walter Morley out of last year's Montreal Cubs into the battle.

Noseworthy, brought by a charley horse, and Slug Segatore, a hefty lineman, watched the Royals from the sidelines last night. Segatore is unlikely to see action against the Scullers because of two sprained ankles.

Not Likely To Be Used.

Along the college front, Western Mustangs received a setback in their prepping for an opener against Queen's University Saturday when their two regular outside wings Claude Moore and Roy Kent, failed to appear in a workout yesterday. The two players are unlikely to be used against the Presbyterians.

McGill Redmen divided into two squads, calling one "University of Toronto," and they went through a brisk session in preparation for the invasion Saturday of the Toronto collegians. Bob Keefer and Russ Merrifield, a backfield combination, showed up well.

Coach Warren Stevens was forced to divide his time between Lou Somers, at quarterback in yesterday's University scrub drill victory, and because of injury to his two regular quarterbacks. Somers said Somers would guide the team against McGill.

A Tough Session.

Sarnia Imperials, perennial champions of Intermediate ranks but not considered of title calibre this season, provided a tough workout session by Coach Art Massucco. Defeated twice in exhibition games with Hamilton Tigers, the Imps are training hard for their opening championship game against Toronto Balmy Beach.

The Tigers, readying for a game against Ottawa Rough Riders at Ottawa Saturday, suffered a serious setback last night when the retirement was announced of George Ward and Bill Mackey. Ward was counted on to fill the snapback position while Murmyjuk appeared likely to fill the guard position in the backfield. They said business reasons forced their retirement.

ATHLETICS HEAD FOR THE COAST

St. Catharines Defeat Medicine Hat 32-8 in Semi-Final Contest

Medicine Hat, Alta., Oct. 5 (CP)—St. Catharines Athletics, Eastern Canada intermediate champions and conquerors of Manitoba and Alberta challengers, headed today for the Pacific Coast and defence of the Canadian title and the Mann Cup they won last year.

Athletics outclassed the Medicine Hat squad so much that no competition this season and was scheduled to end their championship because it was the only operating club in the west.

When the first white settlers on this continent felt the urge to give thanks that their crops were safely in, Father took his blunderbuss and shot a wild turkey while Mother ventured into the marsh for cranberries. Turkey and cranberry sauce did not come out of the storehouse—so they became symbols for extra thanksgiving.

NEW TECHNIQUES USED BY NAVIES

'Heater' Torpedoes and Depth Charges Greatly Developed Since End of Great War

By JOHN CULMER
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 5 (AP)—The British and German navies are locked in a battle of techniques.

Tied up with it is the British hope of early defeat of the German submarine campaign against allied merchant shipping.

Students of wartime technique give an idea of the nature of the problem and the measures the Royal Navy is taking to meet it.

Torpedoes have been improved since the last war, but so have depth charges—main offensive weapon against submarines.

The modern "heater" torpedo, driven by superheated steam, and equally exploited by Great Britain and Germany, does not leave the telltale bubble track that was a fault of the compressed-air type. By watching the bubbles, clever helmsmen were able to dodge after the old-style torpedoes were fired.

Depth bombs, shaped somewhat like steel oil drums, are either dropped from slides at the stern of an attacking destroyer or lobbed out about 40 yards from the side of the ship by throwers.

May Spring Hull

Exploding underwater, a nearby depth charge may crush or spring the hull plates of a submarine by a sudden increase in the water pressure.

"The actual distance at which a depth charge must explode from a submarine to crush its hull is a secret," says Lieutenant Commander Kenneth Edwards, a British naval authority. In a standard work, "But even if it does not crush it completely, it is liable to do extensive damage."

Britain has virtually abandoned the anti-torpedo nets slung on booms from the sides of ships during the last war. The nets seldom proved strong enough to stop a torpedo, and their weight reduced speed and hampered manoeuvres.

Bigger and stronger nets, designed to stop and entangle an attacking submarine itself, now are strung across the entrances to every British port.

Apparatus Improved

Britain has improved submarine detection apparatus, details of which have been carefully hidden. Successive admiralty officials have dropped hints in Parliament, however, of a virtually infallible "machine."

Lord Stanhope, then First Lord of the Admiralty, told the House of Lords last August that Britain had such an apparatus and that other countries were aware of its value, adding: "I do not think they have got this apparatus or anything like it."

He pointed out that the threat of its use was sufficient to stop mysterious submarine attacks on Mediterranean shipping some time previously.

The hydrophone, a highly sensitive electrical "ear" fitted to the hull of every warship, has been greatly improved by every world naval power since 1918.

Comb Systematically

The great sensitivity and accuracy of this device enables a submarine-hunting ship to comb underseas sections systematically, whereas the type used in the last war "listened" indiscriminately. From the mass of undersea sounds it then was difficult or impossible to distinguish the presence or location of a submarine.

The admiralty plans by the end of this month to have in service a submarine-hunting force three times as great as that at the start of the war.

In addition, dockyards throughout Britain are busy placing defensive armaments on hundreds of merchant vessels, harried by undersea boats since the very day Britain declared war.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

Ken J. Colling

Eddie Schrieder's Belleville Collegiate gridders made their return to the COBSA. senior Inter-scholastic football wars in a most auspicious manner yesterday by grinning 8-5 over their ancient Albert College rivals. A poor snap by Partridge of Albert gave the "Collegians" their first touchdown, but those are the breaks that go with the game. There were no sensational plays, with the possible exception of Woolley's 40-yard run, after accepting Moulden's forward and the McBride brothers' "flea-flicker", that was called back as the result of an offside pass, following the completion of a conventional forward. Actually there was too much fumbling to produce good football, but no doubt this can be attributed to the fact, that both squads were slightly nervous, it being the opening game of the season. As these two squads meet five times this season, we expect to see some spirited football before the Bay of Quinte senior Inter-scholastic football championship squad is declared.

Along the line of scrimmage Pete Roach's Alberts looked much stronger than the Collegiate line. Early in the game the Alberts were literally tearing the local squad's line to ribbons and only the work of Stewart, Watson, "Yank" McBride and Fitzpharson saved the day. Looking over the "Collegiate" it would appear as though Coach Eddie Schrieder has a line problem on his hands. The boys from the local seat of knowledge possess plenty of courage, but do not put it into practice along the line of scrimmage. Incidentally in their attacking plays through the opponents' line some of the ball carriers had better soon learn to keep their heads above water, or there'll be more unnecessary injuries sustained. This lad Bill McBride looks as though he has great possibilities as a broken field runner, while brother "Yank" plunges strongly, as does Farquharson. Ross Clare punt-distanced Tom Wolfley with his punts, but both teams were woefully weak on tossing forward passes. Of course when the Collegiate line failed to hold it was tough to get the passes away. "Lefty" Lougheed was always a threat and a hard man to stop.

The Belleville Collegiate school band added color to the rugby inaugural with their tuneful music. Incidentally the Collegiate supporters have a new school football song, with the words to the tune of "The Beer-barrel Polka."

Jack Watson, a first-year kid at end for the B. C. I. seems to have plenty of promise as a deadly tackler, as was seen by the way he broke up so many of Albert's extended runs attempted around his end. Stewart in inside also carried a good share of the defensive work, but otherwise the Collegiate line must learn to block, hold the line and protect their offensive plays.

Incidentally Albert was defloralated at the start as their privateer, Lefty Lougheed, was no where to be found on the premises. He arrived late, but the homesters had fumbled and the Collegians had scored five points. The game was no pink tea party as we saw several fists employed as the boys put their everything into the game.

Joe Maich, who meets the Red Mask at the Hume Arena Friday night, soundly trounced one "Crusher" Kline of Detroit, in Peterboro' on Monday night. Judging from accounts emanating from the Liftlock City there was action aplenty in the bout, however. It seems Kline proved a sore loser and gave vent to his feelings by attacking the referee. This act was appreciated by the victorious Maich, who nimbly stepped in and took over the ring's official duties. Reports go on to say that Kline took two beatings, one at the hands of Maich and a second when the referee hung one on his chin for the count. That's the beauty of these wrestling bouts—one never knows what to expect from these grunt and groan screwballs. However, Maich has much tougher opposition in the "Red Mask" here Friday night, as we understand the beheaded rent is a former world champion grappler of prominence. This bout will be supplemented by two others, one that brings Tiger Daniels and Young Griffins together in a return grudge scrap.

That much-talked of "Yankee power", showed itself dominate again yesterday when the New York Americans won 2-1 over the courageous Cincinnati Reds in the first game of the world series. The game developed into eight innings of sterling defensive ball with Paul Derringer and Red Ruffing (who apparently wasn't suffering too much from a sore arm), both hurling exceptionally fine ball. For eight innings the game was marked with sensational fielding and no doubt the three double killings completed by the Yankees saved their day, but the entire play-off came when the "power act" was put on in the ninth. The "Monday morning quarterbacks" are telling the world what should have been done after Keller hit his triple in the ninth. Actually Bill McKechnie couldn't gamble too much on DiMaggio and elected to try for the possible double play on Dickey. It didn't materialize, Dickey promptly drove out a hard slinging single and as he said after the game—"I would rather have had that single than two or three useless doubles." On the surface the 1939 world series looks as though it may develop, as those Redlegs just won't lie down after being deluged a body punch.

SPORT SPICE—Today's world series pitchers will be Monte Pearson of the Yanks and Bucky Walters for the Reds, which should result in another splendidly pitched ball game. . . . Yesterday the Yanks gave the Reds a lesson at their own National League game — defensive ball. . . . Walt Gerow, Jr., was instructed to report to the Detroit Red Wings training camp next week. . . . Gerow, who is 21, played in the Ticket Belt League last year. He weighs 190 pounds now and is a right winger. . . . If Gerow accepts the call it will prove a serious blow to the chances of the Belleville Reds men who are planning to use Gerow to bolster their front line this winter. . . . This will mark Lou Cerig's last world series. Lou plans entering the radio field next season. He has a world series life-time batting average of .361, which ain't so dusty in any series.

Skunk's Aim Better Than Inspector's

The duties of a Humane Society Inspector are many and varied, at least that's the opinion of Thos. Thorne, who holds that position in Belleville. Thorne, rather regretful incident yesterday when he was called upon to dispose of a skunk, and white striped kitty," that later turned out to be a skunk. Called to the home of Carl Read, 158 Dufferin Ave., Mr. Thorne was shown a garbage pail in which a skunk had taken refuge, while the householders had firmly affixed the lid of the pail.

With drawn revolver Mr. Thorne approached the pail, lifted one corner and fired point blank at Mr. Skunk making a bull's eye the first shot. However, the force of the explosion of the revolver blew off the lid of the pail and at the same time apparently Mr. Skunk layed down a barrage of not-so-sweet smelling odors, which temporarily blinded the Inspector and sent him seeking the solace of his home, where he had to discard his entire raiment.

The Inspector of the Humane Society faithfully discharged his duties and his gun, but unfortunately so did the skunk, much to the Inspector's discomfort.

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By VERA BROWN

As bellhop winked at Mike after nodding at the two drinks: "The big shot thinks he's going to pitch a double-header. One for each game."

CHAPTER V

Wish Malone then explained the situation.

"Now what I came to tell you was this. We're going to start Handsome one of these days. Just to see if he's learned anything. I want you out there, I'll see Downey about it. If Handsome wants you there in the grandstand, I'm going to see you're there. I want the kid to get straightened out before we go on the road again."

The words impressed Mike. Next week Handsome would be gone. Which, on the advantage, kept on:

"Of course I don't want Handsome to know I was here. He'd break my neck. And don't think he can't fight."

"I won't argue that point!" the girl answered, thinking again of their clash in the cloak room.

"Just keep up the good work. If we succeed, you ought to cut in on the Series money!"

"I'll do what I can. But you over-estimate."

"We'll see," said Wish as he walked away. He stepped out into the street, whistling under his breath.....If he could marry Larry off to this girl, his troubles would be over!

She had courage to fight the guy! And Wish was sure now that she loved him.

Mike did not see Larry that night as she had planned. The doctor called her from the hospital. Jimmie was to be sent home. She was leaving shortly with her father. She went to Downey immediately and asked to get off early. P'fore she rushed out of the place, she left a note for Larry, explaining things. Then she started for home.

That first night Jimmie came home was something Mike was to remember all her life. To see him lie there, so white and still, almost broke her heart. But it was she who sat up with him because he could not sleep. She told him all about Handsome and the ball players.

"Tell me some more about Mr. Malone," Jimmie would beg and then she'd be off again. About Wish and Ace Barnes, and Westlake, and how Wish had discovered Handsome in Charlotte playing for his high school team.

"When I get well, I'm going to work hard and grow up to be a ball player."

"Yes, dear." Mike fought to keep her voice level.

"I want to be a pitcher like Handsome."

"Yes."

"Will you bring him to see me?"

"He's already promised to come and he's going to bring you a ball signed by Ace Barnes."

It was midnight before Mike got to bed. They quieted, and he fell asleep. Then she crept into her room and threw herself on her bed. Mary, awakening, tried to comfort her.

"It's going to be all right, Mike. Don't cry. That the doctor says he's going to get well."

Mike was forced to work at ten the next morning, she found a note from Handsome he'd left the night before:

"What do you mean running out on me? Wait for me tomorrow."

It made her happy, but she knew there would not be more climbing down town with Handsome. That was over, now that Jimmie was home. He'd need her.

Mike kept an eager watch for a sight of Handsome that morning. She saw Ray Travis. He came over to get a paper, and some other men. She talked a few moments but he did not mention Handsome and neither did Mike, although it took all her self-control to keep quiet.

Travis hadn't been gone more than ten minutes when one of the ball boys passed the end of the magazine counter coming from the bar. He was balancing two whisky sours on a tray and he winked at Mike as he passed.

The big guy thinks he's going to pitch a double-header today, Mike thought grimly" he still was nodding toward the two drinks.

Mike watched the bell hop disappear through the service door. Her heart sank. So! He was drinking again! Her girl looked wistfully about the lobby. If she could find Mr. Downey! She talked to Hollis Kent, chief of the switchboard, and learned Downey was out.

Mike knew she had to act quickly. She must get somebody to take the counter for a few moments. She called the bell captain:

"Will you take the stand for a few minutes, Ralph? I'll be right back."

Without further ado Mike headed for the back elevator. She rang the bell. Two seconds years coming! The operator's inquisitive eyes bored into her.

"Hurry," she begged. At the tenth floor, Mike got out and ran down the corridor. At Larry's door she did not knock, but turned the handle slowly. Through the crack she could see Handsome, sitting up in bed, drinking the first whiskey sour. Like a cyclone Mike barged in.

"Put that down!" she snapped.

In his surprise, Handsome set the glass down obediently and blinked at her. Mike came over to the bedside, grabbed up both drinks, went into the bathroom and threw them down the drain.

When she came back she had a wet towel in her hand and she slapped Handsome's dazed face with it briskly. Then she threw him his bathrobe.

"Get into that. Now get out of bed and into your clothes. Take them into the bathroom. It's a most 11 o'clock."

Meekly, Handsome obeyed. He was a little unsteady on his feet and fumbled about for his clothes.

Militant, the redhead stood there glaring up at the six-footer.

O. K., Skipper," Handsome managed the words as he stumbled into the bathroom. Mike picked up the telephone and ordered a double tomato juice.

"And hurry it, Pierre. This is Miss Shannon."

For by this time Mike was quite reckless. She stood there tapping her foot impatiently. She could hear the shower running. When the tomato juice came, Handsome was still struggling in the bathroom. But shortly he put his head out and asked:

"Am I sharp?"

"Get out here and get this into you." He came out, took the tomato juice.

"Drink it!" He made a terrible face.

"I say, drink it!"

Handsome tried, managed to accomplish the feat.

"Now get your hat. Of course, Handsome could not find it.

"Never mind it then. Go without one."

"I look terrible," he said peering at himself in the glass, running his hand over his rough chin.

"Of course, you do."

"Don't be cross with me, Mike," he begged. He looked so crestfallen and humble she as a kid who'd been caught stealing jam. that Mike was sorry for an instant. But she steeled herself.

"I'm not cross with you. You know Ray's just dying to get to the ball grounds to tell everybody you're here drunk!"

"Oh, my head!" Handsome fell to gingerly.

"Oh Mike. I'm sorry. I didn't mean to. Why did you have to run out on me?"

Black remorse swept over Handsome and he came over to her and took her hand.

"Will you let me kiss you just once? Then I'll go."

"On the cheek," she said severely, lifting her face.

"Good morning," he said briskly. "I'm sorry to break in on such a pretty picture, but there's a baseball game today, and we'd love to see Mr. Regan at the park."

Handsome stood there rigid. Mike was furious. There was nothing they could say.

CHAPTER VI

"Get out to the park!" Harper barked after a moment's awful silence.

"I was just leaving," Handsome said grimly.

"So I see," Harper's voice was biting. "And as for you, young woman, let me tell you that makes trouble for us coaches. You can go!"

"Mr. Harper," Handsome began.

Larry started for Harper, his fists so tight he could feel his nails.

"Don't hit him, Larry!" Mike cried, stepping between them.

Harper stared at Mike a moment.

"Don't hit him, I tell you." She caught Larry's arm. The two men stood glaring at each other for a moment. Then Harper turned on his heel, went out and slammed the door behind him. Handsome stood there, wiping his forehead.

"Mike, you have broken every bone in his body."

"And been suspended!"

"I believe you're right!" Handsome suddenly swept Mike into his arms. He kissed her on the top of her shining hair, gave her a little shake. "You're a peach."

"You're a sweet thing, Mike. I'll be good."

Mike could not look at him. She was afraid he would see her eyes. He held her close for a long back elevator down. And get some coffee on your way out." Then she fled.

She was back at the magazine counter when Handsome passed through the lobby. He signalled to her with a wave of his hand, whistling sons on a tray and he winked at Mike as he passed.

The big guy thinks he's going to pitch a double-header today, Mike thought grimly" he still was nodding toward the two drinks.

Mike watched the bell hop disappear through the service door. Her heart sank. So! He was drinking again! Her girl looked wistfully about the lobby. If she could find Mr. Downey! She talked to Hollis Kent, chief of the switchboard, and learned Downey was out.

"Put that down!" she snapped.

In his surprise, Handsome set the glass down obediently and blinked at her . dike came over to the bedside, grabbed up both drinks, went into the bathroom and threw them down the drain.

When she came back she had a wet towel in heg hand and she slapped Handsome's dazed face with it briskly. Then she threw him his bathrobe.

"Get into that. Now get out of bed and into your clothes. Take them into the bathroom. It's a most 11 o'clock."

Meekly, Handsome obeyed. He

"What do you think I mean? You're due for a swell dressing down when Ace hears about this."

Handsome kept on lacing his shoes and he retorted "I suppose that Tattling Tony Harper's been down here shooting off his mouth."

As Handsome spoke there was a sudden silence in the locker room so that his voice boomed out with startling loudness. Others could feel the tension. Handsome raised his head. Harper was standing in the door. He must have heard. Before Harper could speak Handsome repeated:

"I said that Tattling Tony Harper!"

Harper advanced on him. Handsome jumped up, leaped over the coach. If it had been anybody else but Handsome the boys would have interfered, stopped what followed.

Handsome came over and smacked Harper sharply, first on one side of his face, then on the other.

"You're not worth beating up, you little shrimp!"

Everybody in the room stood as though hypnotized. They couldn't believe what they were seeing. Ace Barnes appeared suddenly out of his dressing room.

"He hit me!" Harper yelled.

Ace, looking at the big pitcher, did not raise his voice.

"Get dressed and report to the front office, Regan." Then he went back into his room again.

Nobody said a word. Harper disappeared after Barnes. Handsome hurried into his clothing and started to get out of that hostile atmosphere. Dusty Lee began to sing.

But Handsome did not even turn his head. He walked out of the locker room, through the tunnel and dugout into the bright spring sunshine. It was a gorgeous day. Handsome felt his eyes suddenly sting. The diamond was so green and bright before him, with the grand stands in deep shadow. He loved it so. And he was going to lose it.

He stumbled up the clubhouse steps rubbing his eyes. So this was the end. He waited numb outside the Old Man's office. He could hear Mr. Crisp talking on the telephone to somebody. After a long time Crisp's secretary came out:

"Mr. Crisp will see you now," said Miss Worden. And Handsome was facing the club's owner.

The Old Man, his back to the windows, sat at a big mahogany desk. Handsome could see for a moment and Crisp, eyeing him, thought how impossible it was that any young man should look as handsome as Larry Regan did in a 24-hour-old beard.

"Sit down, Regan."

Handsome sat gingerly, on the edge of a chair.

"Well, you better begin, Regan." Handsome swallowed: "I smacked Harper."

"He's been spying on me."

"That's strange." The Old Man's voice was harsh. "Why should he spy on you?"

Handsome did not answer.

"Look here, Regan. I'm this straight. You represent a lot of my money and I don't like what you're going to be a valuable property. Frivolous, I don't mind. I've put a lot of dough in you in the last three years. I'm not going to lose it without a fight."

There was a dead silence. Handsome's head throbbed for words. Then he began his story. The Old Man was easy to talk to, but he knew all the angles.

"All right, Regan. I understand. But what's about Miss Shannon? And the redhead?"

"She isn't just a redhead, Mr. Crisp. She's my girl. She was just in my room to see why I hadn't started for the park. I'm going to marry her, She's swell." Handsome's mother-pride was touching.

"She's brought me good luck. I know it's been a hell of a season, Mr. Crisp did his amusement. "But what about Wish Malone and the redhead?"

"She isn't just a redhead, Mr. Crisp. She's my girl. She was just in my room to see why I hadn't started for the park. I'm going to marry her, She's swell." Handsome's mother-pride was touching.

"She's brought me good luck. I know it's been a hell of a season, Mr. Crisp did his amusement. "But what about Wish Malone and the redhead?"

"Wish is slippin'. If he 'brings any more like Handsome up here I'll wreck the team."

Of course, the newspaper men found out about Regan's row with Harper. Too many people heard and saw it. And too many people blew the story. Marvin had been charged with the error for Handsome's bungling. "You have to be a good reader to play with that guy!"

"He's just too good looking, that's what is the matter with him. He's afraid he'll get his uniform dirty!" Dusty's voice was bitter. Handsome had had early season publicity which had hailed him as Dusty's successor. "I've seen dirty left-handers in my day, but he's tops!" Lee added. "And is he lucky! Anybody else would have been fired!"

Later during the fifth inning when the gang was up to crack Dusty, who wasn't pit-hiing that day, went over to talk to Handsome.

"You must have a rabbit's foot in your pocket today, Larry." None of the boys dared call Larry "Handsome" to his face. It haven't in my pocket. But I've got luck," he replied.

Handsome smiled a completely self-satisfied smile.

"I bet you watch, Dusty. I'm going places. I feel it in my bones."

"Maybe you'll land back in the bushes!" Dusty quipped and the boys who were listening guffawed. Handsome turned to Tom. "Tom," "And right in the middle of it, he asked me to autograph a baseball for him. I should have crowned him! That kid's got more crust than any freshman pitcher I've seen."

"What do you expect?" Tom was still angry. The front office pandemonium him. What's I'm ever done to deserve it? If he ever pitched two innings without sinking us, it would be different."

"It's Wish!"

"Never, never again will I ever speak to anybody in this hotel outside business hours!"

Handsome smacked "Tattling Tony" Harper, assistant coach, for telling the players about the bawling the flaming Mike.....

I'd see that cocky rookie come to time like that."

He last fired. Per which I'm sorry," remarked Tom Marvin. He'd never forgive Handsome for blowing that game with Detroit. Besides, you might hurt your pitching hand!"

Crisp nodded emphatically. "That's all!"

Handsome stared at Crisp. "You're not going to 'can' me?"

"No. I'm going to get to work."

Handsome fled, stis heart sang As he rushed through the outer office, he threw a kiss at the delighted Miss Worden.

As the pitcher made good his boast at Detroit, Wish Malone and his head in Crisp's office: "Well?" he asked anxiously.

"Come in, you old fox. It worked like a charm," Crisp was beaming. "Regan's a big boy. He'll be all right. But im't all this hard on the girl?"

"Of course not. She's in love with him, though she doesn't know it herself yet."

"Good! Bestrice Fairfax, you win!"

CHAPTER VII

Handsome swept into batting practice as though nothing had happened. Nobody mentioned it. He wasn't until they went back to the showers before the game that Handsome came over to Harper. The room quieted down instantly. Everybody waited to hear.

"I want to apologize, Harper, for my impudence."

Handsome held out his hand. It was a complete apology and he seemed sincere about it.

Harper, a little non-plussed at the size of the audience, mumbled something. Then he managed: "I don't get it in for you, big pal, looks. I've just got my orders." They shook hands.

Handsome had done his duty and he went back to his locker and whistled softly.

"Well, well, well!" Dusty Lee shook his head. "I never thought

But Mike knew she'd give anything in the world if Handsome would walk in through the revolving doors with his wide, carefree smile and wave at her as he always did. But he did not come. Finally in despair she wrote him a little note, a note anybody could read:

"I'm so sorry about everything, Larry." Then she left.

That night Mike suffered tortures as she talked with Jimmie. The doctor now allowed him to listen to the ball games each afternoon. That helped the day to pass for him. But the nights were pretty bad.

Mike told him all the little details of the day's doings—everything except what was uppermost in her mind. She got him to sleep about 11, but she did not have the courage then to go out and telephone Handsome. Ray would be there, and she couldn't bear having him know she'd called. Besides, Handsome was probably out.

She sat at the window of her room for a long time. Then Mary came in and she had to go to bed, pretend to sleep.

Next morning Mike got up early because she could not sleep and sat with Jimmie as usual, while her mother did the house work.

All the way over from Brooklyn on the subway Mike considered hunting for another job. But she was afraid. Mr. Downey had been kind to her while Jimmie was in the hospital, but she wouldn't be interested in her difficulties. After all, the team would be back shortly. By the time Handsome got back into town, things might be different.

She knew there would be no note from Handsome waiting for her this morning. It was an off day for the team. Handsome and Larry until noon, if then.

The first thing Mike caught sight of as she stepped behind the counter was a note. It stood up behind the tobacco shelf where her mail always was placed. Its envelope was almost all of her self-composure:

"You've got to marry me." That was all.

Mike put the note in her purse. Then she went back to it again to be sure she'd read right. The boy had proposed. He must have been—No, the writing was firm, done with a flourish.

Mike began to laugh. What in the world did he mean?

But the hysterical desire to laugh. Nobody but Handsome could have the thought of such a thing. Drunk or sober!

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 5' (CP)—In anticipation of what is expected to be a greatly improved earnings' report of Maple Leaf Milling Company, traders on Toronto exchange today showed preference for common and preferred issues of that company, pushing both up fractions in comparatively heavy trading. Annual statement of the company is expected next week.

Action chiefly was centred in the industrial list which gave a firm tone to the market as a whole. Ahead fractions with Maple Leaf were Canadian Pacific and both steamship issues, while National Steel Car was strong and active at 46½, up 3/4.

Noon indices were ahead for industrials, base metals and western oils, golds showing a small recession. Golds were neglected, Preston and East Malartic attracting most attention. Dome and Hirshman were the only issues to show declines.

Volume at noon was 81,000 shares, same as yesterday's turnover at the same hour. An additional 16,000 shares were traded in next hour.

Sherritt Gordon and Pend Oreilla were active base metals, both hovering around yesterday's closing levels.

WALL ST.

A. G. DAVIE

Of Scottish Race

Born in Kingston, Ontario, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Archibald Davie, "Andy" was a sturdy scion of good Scottish stock. He received his education in the town of Brockville where his family moved shortly after the death of his father, while "Andy" was still a small boy.

Learned Typesetting.

It was there that the attraction of printer's ink first fascinated him through his seventy years of life drew him to the craft. As a tender age of seventeen he left his home and entered the printing offices of a prominent Brockville, Ont., newspaper, where he learned the art of typesetting. After several years spent in this office, the call of New York lured him to the metropolis. Here he entered the editorial offices of the New York Herald Tribune where, for the first time, the touch of his native Canada sent him back to Brockville and home.

Here he entered the printing offices of the then Brockville Times remaining there for a period of seven years. The urge for more experience in his chosen field called and "Andy" went to Sturgeon Falls where he became associated with the "Advertiser" of that town. Following five years of intensive study of newspaper conditions in Ontario's Near North, he started the "Cobalt Nugget", a weekly publication that flourished for seven years.

Returns to Brockville.

Attending a convention in Toronto a chance meeting with a former Brockville resident brought the invitation to return to the Eastern Ontario town. He accepted and shortly afterwards joined the staff of the Brockville Times as its editor. For three years he sat in the editorial seat, then accepted an offer to re-associate himself with the Toronto Telegram. He worked with that publication until 1917 when he left for Belleville where he became editor of the Belleville Intelligencer under the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell.

In 1922 he joined the staff of the Belleville Daily Ontario as advertising manager, a position he has filled ably and efficiently until the time of his demise.

He married the former Miss Annie Dickerson, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Dickerson of Brockville, in 1900. One daughter, Phyllis, member of her late father's staff is the only child.

The late "Andy" Davie was a member of various fraternal socities. He joined Salem Lodge, No. 268, Brockville, A.F. and A.M., early in life, and since the inception of Rotary in this city was an active devoted member of that service organization. Brock Lodge of the Independent Order of Oddfellows, Brockville, numbered him as one of their most loyal members as did the Rob Roy Camp of the Sons of Scotland, Belleville. He was a member of St. Thomas' Anglican Church.

The funeral will take place from the Belleville Burial Funeral Home on Saturday at 1:30 in the afternoon. The body will be taken to Brockville where interment will be made.

SOVIET DEMANDS CONSULTATION

Asks Turkish Alliances be Effective Only After Consulting Moscow

By PIERRE MAILLAUD
Havas News Agency Staff Writer
London, Oct. 5.—(CP)—Soviet Russia is demanding of Turkey that the clauses of the proposed Anglo-French-Turkish mutual assistance pacts which provide for joint aid to Greece and Rumania in the event of attack on those countries should become operative only after the Ankara Government has consulted Moscow and, presumably, received Soviet consent, it was reported in diplomatic circles here today.

The necessity for, consulting on this point with London and Paris in part explains the unexpected prolongation of Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu's stay in Moscow, it was said. Active exchanges are in progress among London, Paris and Ankara, it was understood, in connection with the Moscow talks. An effort is being made to decide whether a new Ankara-Moscow understanding is worth this concession.

Many advantages for the Allies are seen in a new Turkish-Russian agreement and these have to be weighed against the disadvantages involved in the insertion of a consultative clause respecting Russia in the Anglo-Franco-Turkish pact.

FRENCH 'EXPLORE' U. S. MARKET

No Orders Given by War Supplies Commission Now Visiting in United States

New York, Oct. 5—(AP)— A spokesman for the Commercial Counsellor of the French Embassy said today that members of a French War Supplies Commission had arrived in the United States but were merely "exploring the possibilities of the American market" and had not been as yet given orders to make any purchases. He declined to give further details concerning the Commission.

At the British Consulate General here it was said that no members or employees of a British Purchasing Commission are in New York.

Offices of a British War Supplies Commission have been opened in Ottawa, Financial sources here said that they-heard unconfirmed rumors that Advance agents of a British Commission were in New York last week making preliminary arrangements .

SENATOR OVERTON FOR THE EMBARGO

Unwilling to Take Step That May Lead U.S. Into the War

Washington, Oct. 5.—(AP)—Senator Overton (Democrat-Louisiana) today resented the charge that foreign opposition to the embargo repeal bill is not a step toward war. For my part I am unwilling to take a step that may, and probably will, lead us into a foreign war," he declared in a statement that "neutrality and national defence are the twin bases of peace for America."

"I fear no successful invasion of the United States by any foreign nation or combination of nations," he added.

"I do not apprehend that we shall be subjected to foreign domination. But I might be guilty of apprehension that in the event of our becoming engaged in another war we shall be saddled with a home-made dictatorship."

THREE ARE HELD IN POLICE RAID

Held Under Section 39 of Defence of Canada Regulations

Toronto, Oct. 5.—(CP)— Three men were held without bail today under section 39 of the Defence of Canada regulations, which makes it an offence "to possess printed matter unlawful to be periodical to the state."

The third man, whose name was not made known by police, is being held on a charge of violating immigration regulations. Police said he entered Canada illegally.

The three, charged under section 39, are Ruggiero Benvenuti, Arthur Bartoletti and Ernest Gava. Bartoletti faces an additional charge of being in possession of an offensive weapon.

The arrests were made yesterday in a raid on a west end residence by city and Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Police are guarding details of the case, but it is understood that in addition to the revolvers certain documents and papers were seized.

MISSING

The manager of a cinema at York, Mervyn Moorse, said a noncommissioned officer belonging to the same regiment as Thompson and Murray thought he recognized them on the screen. With Murray's wife and Thompson's fiancee he visited the cinema twice again. The three then said they were certain about the identity of their men.

Moorse cut the picture from the newsreel and forwarded an enlargement to the squadron. Later the wing commander of the squadron wrote the manager: "This has settled the matter beyond all dispute. Your action in supplying fortunate evidence is much appreciated by myself and officers of the squadron."

The letter said Thompson's fiance and Murray's wife were "overjoyed" to see the officers alive.

The newsreel (Paramount) shows the airmen looking fairly cheerful in the company of Nazi air force officers. The curly-haired Thompson at the microphone describes how well they were being treated. The picture is said to have been taken at an internment camp near Hamburg.

Thompson joined the Royal Air Force privately, paying his own fare to England. Murray, born in Singapore, was at one time assistant air attache in the British embassy in China.

Pembroke, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—First communication received in the Dominion from a Canadian prisoner of war in Germany arrived in the mail today for Mrs. Thompson, lawyer, and almost took his breath away.

It was a postcard written in German and bearing the signature of his son, Pilot Officer Alfred Burr Thompson of the Royal Air Force, captured by the Nazis, it is believed, while returning from a raid in Germany.

Mr. Thompson, father of the imprisoned pilot, said he had learned in a cable from the British Air Ministry that his son was a prisoner. He also had seen a photograph taken in Germany of the man prison camp in which he was able to recognize his son between two Nazi officers. He had not, until today, heard of the newsreel shown in London in which his son appeared and was identified definitely.

"I was surprised," Mr. Thompson said of his reaction on receiving the postcard.

It was a standard card, on which the prisoner drew a line over sentences he did not wish included. Mr. Thompson took the card to a friend of German descent and had it translated. The card said the pilot officer was well and would be writing again soon.

Berlin Claims Bremen's Crew Has Returned to the Reich

Nazi Press Does Not State in What Neutral Port the Liner Lies

CAPTAIN PROMOTED

Berlin, Oct. 5—(AP)—The crew of the luxury liner Bremen was reported today by Nazi press to have returned to the Reich, leaving the $30,000,000 flagship of the German merchant fleet in some undisclosed neutral port.

The newspaper Frankfurter Zeitung claimed the liner's crew—more than 900 men—returned to Bremerhaven last Friday.

The newspaper did not identify the neutral port but said the Bremen's company along with the crew of the steamship Iller reached Bremerhaven on the steamship Sierra Cordoba. The Iller and Sierra Cordoba are both German vessels.

The homecoming seamen were given a cheering reception the paper said, and the Bremen's captain, Adolf Ahrens, was promoted to commodore by order of Adolf Hitler.

(The latest report on the whereabouts of the 51,731-ton Bremen was that carried to Oslo Tuesday by a sailor who said he saw her in Murmansk, Russia. Her sister ship, along with the 22,337-ton New York, three smaller German liners and 15 German freighters.

(The Bremen sailed from New York Aug. 30, four days before Great Britain declared war on Germany. The New York sailed from New York Aug. 28.)

British Empire Will be Smashed If Hitler Wins Says Sen. Beaubien

Toronto, Oct. 5.—(CH)—Senator F. P. Beaubien, Montreal, in an address before the Empire Club of Toronto, warned today that "If Hitler wins, the British Empire will be smashed and its parts outlawed".

Senator Beaubien said Canadians had been thrown into the war against their will, "but it is a free people that we are determined doggedly to climb back from the dark abyss to the shining summit of victory and, beyond, to peace and happiness".

The senator believed that there would be "no death of Canadians of French and British descent who might be drawn to the side of their old mother countries by the thin red line that marks their veins and springs from their hearts".

Should Germany defeat the Allies there is but one nation that can stand up to Hitler dominating Europe, the Senator said.

"That power is the American nation. That day, the United States must fight". That day, the United States may take up the cudgels for Canada as well as for themselves".

Using Bismarck Policy.

The Senator said that a few weeks ago in Paris he had spoken to General Delatte de Tassigny, Chief of Staff of the French Supreme Council of War. "The General had told him "Hitler has made his the old Bismarckian policy of the conquest of Great Britain and the partition of the British Empire".

The Senator said that Hitler "overestimates the power which he controls in Germany" and "vastly underestimates that wielded by his opponents."

Referring to German-Soviet cooperation, he claimed that "a slip in the company of the Russian Bear may seal his (Hitler's) fate."

Hitler has ruined the Reich in building up his war machine, said the Senator, for Germany now "is left without gold and without credit."

Two Score Warnings On Shipping Reach Washington

Washington, Oct. 5 (AP)—Nearly two score warnings to shipping have been received here from European nations in the first month of the war, the State Department disclosed today.

The latest one came early this week from Germany, bidding American ships to avoid "suspicious behaviour" in the Irish and British waters and advising them against accepting convoys, signaging interfering without lights, and refusing to stop if summoned.

France has informed the State Department that its navigational lights are being discontinued. Vessels going to France are required to "check in" at Cape Alprech for instructions.

Great Britain also gave notice to the discontinuance of many navigational lights and placing of mine fields.

REFUGEES SEEK INFORMATION

Bucharest, Oct. 5 (CP)—Havas)—Queries of Polish refugees formed today outside the German and Soviet consulates. The refugees sought information on the conditions under which they will be permitted to return to territory occupied by German and Russian troops.

COUGHLIN NOT SURE WHETHER HE COMES UNDER RADIO BAN

Royal City, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—Father Charles E. Coughlin said today he did not yet know whether he would be barred from the air under the code recently adopted by the National Association of Broadcasters to ban controversial broadcasts. "I am going ahead anyway preparing my (Sunday) address," he said.

Forest Conservation Stressed in Wartime

Montreal, Oct. 5 (CP)—Careful forest conservation during wartime was stressed today by R. A. McInnes, President of the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, in a letter released by the Canadian Forestry Association.

"We are the most important producers of forest products in the world today, with market throughout the entire world," Mr. McInnes said. "It is, therefore, tremendously important that every association connected with forest products, and the various governments and departments of government, keep continuously in mind the importance of forest conservation and, at the same time encourage forest utilization because you cannot separate utilization from conservation."

War conditions, he said, will cause a heavy drain on Canada's forest products of lumber, pulp and paper.

YOUTH, AGED 20, ADMITS CHARGE

Confesses Participation in Robbery of Bank of Montreal at Merlin

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 5 (CP)—Robert Spry, 20, Detroit, arrested in that city yesterday, pleaded guilty to participation in the robbery of the Bank of Montreal at Merlin last Friday, when charged before Magistrate Arnold in police court here today.

The charge read to the youth, brought here last night by Provincial Constable J. B. Sheff, was that "at the Village of Merlin on September 29, he did, while being armed with an offensive weapon, to wit a pistol, unlawfully rob the Bank of Montreal of a sum of $1,700."

Spry elected to take summary trial, and pleaded guilty. He was remanded one week for sentence.

The youth pleaded guilty to a second charge of robbing Bernard W. Hind of his motor car while being armed. He elected summary trial on this count, pleaded guilty and was remanded for one week.

Spry implicated three others in the bank holdup, and they are now being sought in the United States.

'Hollywood Cavalcade' Given its Premiere

Hollywood, Oct 5—(AP)—Several hundred Hollywoodites, who paid $10 a seat for the privilege, saw a movie about themselves which does not poke fun at them. It sets a precedent.

It is said that if for no reasons other than that "Hollywood Cavalcade" was neither critical nor satirical, the admittance fee was not too large. But in addition they saw a sincerely-told story that was entertaining and as historically correct as dramatic license would permit.

It was Hollywood's second $10 premiere. The first was "The King of Kings" which opened the Chinese Theatre in 1927. The entire proceeds of this event, $9,000, were given to the Motion Picture Relief Fund.

This history starts in the early days of one-reelers, innovation and uncertainty, concluding with the dramatic arrival of sound. One of its climaxes is Al Jolson's "Kol Nidre", which he sang in the first talkie, "The Jazz Singer." Darryl Zanuck, who produced this film, worked for the Warners when they staked their all on sound and helped to make the "novelty" starring Jolson.

PACT RATIFIED WITH ESTONIA

Russia Secures Rights to Occupy Islands and Establish Bases

Tallinn, Oct. 5.— (AP)—Formal ratification of a mutual assistance pact between Estonia left Soviet Russia free to day to quarter 25,000 troops at strategic points in Estonian territory.

The agreement permits Russian forces to occupy the North Baltic islands of Dagoe and Oesel and the mainland port of Baltiski and to establish naval and air bases at these points.

These bases will give Russia control of the Gulfs of Finland, Riga and Bothnia.

The pact also increases trade relations between the two countries, granting Russia the right to ship good through Estonia and permitting Estonia to ship across Russia to the Black Sea and Murmansk.

Werber 3b		Crosetti ss
Frey 2b		Rolfe 3b
Goodman rf		Keller rf
McCormick 1b		DiMaggio cf
Lombardi c		Dickey c
Craft lf		Selkirk lf
Berger lf		Gordon 2b
Myers ss		Dahlgren 1b
Pearson p		Pearson p

Umpires: Plate, John Reardon (NL); first base, Bill Stewart (A.L.); second base, Ralph Pinelli (A.L.); third base, Bill McGowan (A.L.)

First Inning

Reds—Werber worked the count to three and two and then sent a high pop out to Gordon on the grass in front of second. Frey lifted a long lazy fly to right center and DiMaggio loped over to catch it. Goodman fouled to Rolfe in front of the third base bench.

0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Yankees—Crosetti let the count reach two and one, then dumped a single in short left center. Crosetti was nearly picked off first by Lombardi's fast throw. Rolfe bounced to Werber who threw to Myers at second, forcing Crosetti. Myers got to first was too late to catch Rolfe and he was safe on the fielder's choice. Rolfe took Lombardi's hot grounder and stepped on second forcing Rolfe. Keller was safe on first as there was no play there. DiMaggio backed Berger almost to the pole in front of the Yankee bullpen in deep left for his long fly.—0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors, one left.

Second Inning

Reds—DiMaggio ran into left centre to take McCormick's fly. Lombardi fouled off five pitches then sent a long fly to Selkirk deep in left centre. The Reds were tied up on the steps of their bullpen intent on the game while the Yankees as usual sat back on the bench and enjoyed the proceedings. Craft waited the count to two and two then fanned swinging at a low breaking curve.—0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Yankees—Dickey received a nice hand as he came to the plate apparently as a reward for his ninth-inning single which won yesterday's game. Dickey was called out on strikes on three pitches as Walters worked the corners beautifully. Selkirk dropped a Texas league single in short centre but was out at second trying to stretch it, Craft to Myers. Craft pulled down Gordon's fly in centre. —0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors, none left.

Third Inning

Reds—Berger shot a long fly to Selkirk in left. Myers was called out on three strikes. Rolfe took Walters' bounder near third and threw him out easily.—0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Yankees—Dahlgren's liner bounced safely in left field and into the left field boxes for a ground rule double. Pearson laid down a nice sacrifice bunt and was safe by inches at first baseman Frey's throw. Dahlgren going to third.

Myers momentarily fumbled Crosetti's grounder recovered in time to throw him out at first, Dahlgren scoring with the first run of the game. Rolfe's fly fell safely in short right centre. Keller's high fly bounced off Berger's glove in the left field corner and fell safely for a two base hit, Rolfe scoring. DiMaggio topped the ball down the third base line and beat it out safely for a hit, Keller going to third. Dickey hit a grounder to Werber who picked the ball up but was unable to make a play at either base. Dickey bounced a single through Keller and sending DiMaggio to third. There was considerable activity in the Reds' bullpen. Frey made a nice play on Selkirk's bounder deep on the infield dirt and threw him out.—3 runs, 5 hits, 0 errors, two left.

Fourth Inning

Reds—After taking two strikes, Werber walked as Pearson lost control on four straight pitches. He was the first of the Reds to reach first base in the game. The Cincinnati cheering section howled lustily as Frey watched three balls go by. Then he fanned, swinging at a fast ball and Werber, attempting to steal on the pitch, was doubled off second, Dickey to Crosetti on a fast peg. Goodman went down swinging at a fast ball outside with a third strike, thereby completing 3 2-3 innings in a row, including the latter half of yesterday's game, in which the Reds had failed to hit safely.—0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Yankees—Werber made a nice play on Gordon's bounder and threw him out on a close decision at first base. Dahlgren up. Dahlgren's first offering sailed over Myers' glove and into the left field boxes for a home run, the first of the series. The ball bounced into the crowd and then back into the playing field as Dahlgren trotted around the bases and the fans roared. Pearson was called on strikes. Crosetti topped the ball about four feet in front of the home plate and Lombardi threw him out at first for a second man.—1 run, 1 hit, 0 errors, none left.

Fifth Inning.

Reds—McCormick fanned, swinging at an inside pitch. He was Pearson's fifth strikeout victim, the third in a row. Lombardi bounced to Pearson and was thrown out by fifteen feet. With the count three and two, Craft went down swinging for the second time in the game. 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, 0 left.

Yankees—Frey picked up Rolfe's roller and threw him out on a fast play. Keller's second straight hit was a line single to left. DiMaggio smashed a bounder to Walters who threw to Myers, forcing Keller, and Myers pegged to McCormick in time to retire DiMaggio for a snappy double play. 0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors, 0 left.

Sixth Inning

Reds—The ball hit Berger's bat as he tried to duck away from a pitch and it bounded to Pearson who threw him out, Crosetti cane up with Myers' fast hopper and tossed him out. Walters received a nice hand as he came to the plate. Walter bounced out, Pearson to Dahlgren.—0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Yankees—Goodman backed up against the low wall in front of the right field stands to haul down Dickey's long fly. Selkirk fouled off four pitches and Lombardi walked half way to the mound to confer with Walters. Selkirk was then called out on strikes as he watched a knee-high inside pitch go by. Gordon hit the plate scraping with Umpire Beans Reardon for a few moments and the fans booed. Gordon fanned, swinging at a nice curve.—0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Seventh Inning.

Reds—DiMaggio raced over to deep right centre and took in Werber's high fly. Dahlgren touched to the infield grass in front of first and took Frey's soaring pop up. DiMaggio raced 50 yard across centre for a fine catch of Goodman's fly and the Reds were still without a hit for the ball game. No pitchers has ever hurled a no-hit game in world series competition. 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, 0 left.

Yankees—Dahlgren went down swinging at a low-breaking curve. He was Walters' third straight strikeout victim. As Pearson came to the fans applauded for a full minute. Keller raced into the outfield grass back of third and took Pearson's pop up. Myers had to race back into short left centre to run down Crosetti's long fly. 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Eighth Inning

Reds—Selkirk ran over to left centre and took McCormick's high fly and the stands roared. Lombardi bounced to Pearson at the pitcher's box and Pearson raced to first ahead of the runner for the only play of the ball game with two straight innings. Frenchy Bordagaray was sent in to run for Lombardi.

In holding the Reds hitless for 7 1-3 innings, Pearson, 6 feet-6 oped, had equalled the World Series record for a no-hit performance set by Herb Pennock of the Yankees against the Pirates in 1927. Craft went down swinging for his third straight strikeout of the game. Berger topped the ball along the first base line and Pearson raced in, took it and threw him out.—0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors, one left.

Yankees—Willard Hershberger, a right hand batter and a former member of the Yankee farm system at Newark in the International League, was sent in to catch for Cincinnati in place of Lombardi. Craft loped in to short centre for Rolfe's high fly. The Craft had walked half way to the mound to confer with Walters. Selkirk was then called out on strikes as he watched a knee-high inside pitch go by. Gordon hit the plate scraping with Umpire Beans Reardon for a few moments and the fans booed. Gordon fanned, swinging at a nice curve.—0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, none left.

Ninth Inning

Reds—Myers bounced to Pearson and was thrown out easily. Lee Gamble, a left hand hitter and reserve outfielder, batted for Walters. Gamble went down swinging at a fast ball to become Pearson's eighth strikeout victim. Werber stabbed first pitch through short and into left field for a single and the Reds' second hit of the game. Frey forced Werber at second, Crosetti to Gordon to end the game —0 runs, 1 hit, 0 errors, 1 left.

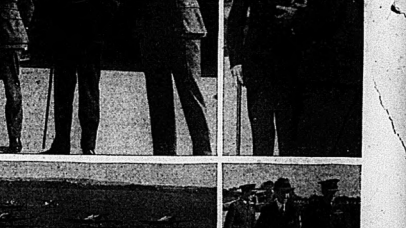
CREATED MAGINOT LINE

A picture made during the world war of Private Andre Maginot who was the creator and designer of the great line of fortifications also known as the Maginot line. To this humble poilu goes the credit for the line which can effectively keep an enemy from France's territory.

MARTIAN NOTE

What the well-dressed woman will wear in zones where there is danger of air raiders sprinkling noxious gases about is demonstrated by this London miss. She is wearing the new lightweight gas-proof suit of rubber cloth. Hood, trousers, jumper and mittens are of oiled silk and can be donned in a few minutes. The whole outfit weighs but four ounces. It can be packed in a small bag for carrying.

The 5,061-ton British freighter Clement, TOP, is squadron, have been ordered to hunt the Admiral Scheer and either sink or capture it. The German pocket battleship Admiral Scheer, BOTTOM, raider armed with 11-inch guns as an armament which is reported to be roaming the southern Atlantic as a raider. The British cruisers Yorkshire, Exeter and Ajax, of the British West Indies fleet mount eight-inch guns.



Butter Shipped Weekly Before War To Goering and Other Nazi Leaders

London, Oct. 5—(CP)—The Ministry of Information said last night that Field Marshal Hermann Goering and other Nazi leaders had large supplies of butter sent to them from England before the war while they were "raking the German people to tighten their belt and put guns before butter."

A Ministry communique, claiming the story had been thoroughly checked, asserted that dozens of parcels "varying in weight from two to four pounds" had been shipped weekly by a Bradford business man via Cologne.

The communique said:

"While Field Marshal Goering was asking the German people to tighten their belts and put guns before butter, he and other Nazi leaders were receiving supplies of butter from England.

"Information which has reached the Government from a private source and which has been confirmed by subsequent investigation has brought the following interesting facts to light.

"At weekly intervals a dozen parcels varying in weight from two to four pounds and about the size of a hat box have been dispatched from Bradford by Arthur Henton, principal of a large woollen firm, the contents described as Danish butter and paid for at a special rate and routed via Cologne.

"In the week before the war broke out no less than nine such parcels were observed, three addressed to General Goering, Dr. Goebbels and Dr. Bergmann, the remainder going to the wives of other prominent members of the Nazi Party."

"Bombs or No Bombs" War is On In Full Blast Says Daily Express

London, Oct. 5—(CP) — The Daily Express (Independent) today told its readers that, despite the absence of air raids and the other horrors usually associated with modern warfare, the war is going full blast, "bombs or no bombs."

"Some folk said the newspaper, "need a bomb to explain to them that this war is being fought. They expected ferocious and continued bombing. Hell let loose from the air. That was their idea of war. Now they are puzzled.

"Don't worry, friends, this war is on all right—more on than it was in '14 on full blast.

"The great wrestling match called the economic war of blockade is being bitterly contested. The Navy has got its stranglehold. Germany is fighting back, trying to bully Europe into a vast boycott of Britain. In the long run the winner of that bout will be the victor in the war.

"Nothing happening on land, though? Nonsense. Five million French mobilized. A great British army in France. And a cheap conquest of German soil, which, by heaven, we mean to sell back dearly to Hitler.

"As for the air, maybe we will reach a stalemate. Maybe neither side will dare risk losing its bomber fleet because of the risk of losing the bombs. But we think more as a threat than as a weapon."

Marriage in Pawn

By E. P. O'BRYAN

When Max finally beat Ronny's time with Jenny, Ronny went around town telling people what he was going to do to Max, only he never did any of the things he said he was going to do. In fact, after a few weeks he got real friendly and wanted to be a good fellow about it all.

It is on a Saturday night when Max gets the red-hot tip on Hoppity-Skip in the fifth race at Jefferson, but on account of just paying for an apartment and a marriage license, he hasn't got enough in his pocket to buy an appetizer for a humming bird.

"How about your overcoat?" I says. "Won't Bugeye Banlon take it as security on a small bet?"

"I pawned that to get the license," Max says. "Anyway, Bugeye has to have cash on the line." Then suddenly an idea popped into his head. "I got it" he says. "I got it! Come on!"

"What good is a marriage license to me?" Bugeye says. "I had two wives already and I wouldn't have another one if she had a million bucks cold cash. Anyway, how could I get my dough back out of a marriage license?"

"But don't you see?" Max says, "I simply gotta have it by two o'clock tomorrow or's Jenny and I can get hitched. If I lose I'll go borrow the dough some place. It's too near race time now and I got a hot tip."

"O.K." Bugeye says finally. "I'll bet her five bucks and you'd better have that dough in here first thing after the race. How do you want to bet it?"

For all I know, Hoppity-Skip, the nag Max bet on, hasn't come in yet.

X X X

It is ten o'clock Sunday morning before we can raise enough dough to redeem the license and pay the minister. But when we get down to Bugeye's place, Bugeye just gives us a funny look. "Why," he says, "you sent for this license and redeemed it. What kind of a fast ones are you trying to pull?"

"I didn't send for no license," Max says. "I just now raised the dough to pay you."

"Didn't you send Ronny Nash down to get it?"

Max turned all white around the gills. "That double-crosin' so and so!" he says. "So that's his little game, is it? And you give it to him!"

"Sure. He hands me the four bucks and says you sent him."

"Come on," Max says, "we gotta find Ronny quick. Why, I'll mess up the street with him—pullin' a trick like that on me."

But we didn't find Ronny, and when we got to Jenny's house it was nearly one-thirty, with the wedding scheduled for two. We met Ronny coming out the door and there was a grin on his face a mile wide.

"So you had to tell her, huh!" Max rages. "You double-crosin' lug!" He lets one go from his heels that sends Ronny rolling down the steps like a hoop. When he reached the bottom he lay quite still, almost too still, in fact.

The door pops open suddenly and out comes Jenny, all excited. "Why Max, what happened? What did you do to him?"

"What'd I do to him? What does it look like? I took a poke at him, of course."

"What did you hit him for?" Jenny demands, stamping her foot. There is fire in her eye.

"He ran off with our marriage license, that's what he done. So I socked him—see? Why, honey, what makes you look at me so funny? What's wrong, sweetheart?"

But Jenny has knelt down beside Ronny and is taking his head in her lap, a lot of shaking her head and crying.

Another man came out on the porch and took the shape of a minister.

Jenny is caressing Ronny's head where it has bumped the steps and sort of moaning to herself.

The preacher came down the steps. "Say I inquire what all the trouble's about?"

"Sure," Max says, "this guy ran off with the marriage license and I socked him. Fine way to doublecross a friend!"

"Ran off with your marriage license?" the preacher says. "I'm afraid I don't quite understand. He came to the parish only an hour ago to get me. Said some friends of his were going to get married and he wanted to do them a special favor by providing the minister. He gave me the license. I have it here. Name of Jenny Miller and Max Horwinsky. Is that you, girl?"

"Sure, that's him," Jenny says, caressing Ronny's head. "I'm not marrying him—not after what he's done to Ronny, who was only trying to be nice. The marriage is off."

So that's how Max swore off betting on horse races. He had to bet that, only of course, after she'd thought it over all night Jenny did change her mind after Max had apologized to Ronny. She's Mrs. Horwinsky now and Max has more than one shirt to bet, which is something he never had before.

Picton

Picton, Oct. 5.—The matters of voting on the observance of daylight saving time in Picton was fully discussed at the meeting of the town council Monday night. Mayor Nesbitt McKibbon thought that it would be advisable to have the vote taken on the day of the municipal elections. Council members agreed. Reeve H. S. Collver stated that it cost $200 to have a special poll on this question. It was finally decided that in case an acclamation is given the council that no vote would be taken on daylight saving time, letting the decision of the electors expressed in the last election stand for another year.

It was decided, however, that the fast hour would be set to concur with the time of observance in Toronto and other cities. This year in Picton, it was observed until the 30th of September whereas in most other centres it came to an end a fortnight previous to that and in some places even earlier. This caused much confusion.

If there is an election for council, the question will be voted on.

There was a lengthy discussion on the matter of granting a permit to James Livingstone for the erection of a service station on the corner of Main and Chapel streets. He now owned by him and he planned to a $5000 building. A delegation consisting of W. S. Sakely, and W. Nettleton appeared on behalf of the United Church, which is situated close to the proposed site of the station. They were against the granting of a permit and stated it would make it hazardous for children going to and from church. In the vote the council was equally divided Mayor McKibbon then was called upon to cast the deciding vote, voting against granting the permit. This is the second time Mr. Livingstone has been prevented from building on his corner lot.

Central Relief was granted $700 for October. The report for September showed 77 on relief and the sum of $486 spent for this purpose.

A meeting will be held in Picton on Saturday evening to organize a local branch of the Canadian Red Cross. The meeting has been called by Judge R. H. McLean at the request of the Canadian Red Cross. Already a number of organizations are engaged in Red Cross work and the local society to be organized will co-ordinate their efforts.

Previous to her marriage on Saturday to George Publow, Mabel Grinder, Reg. N., superintendent of the County Hospital was presented with several lovely gifts by the nurses there.

ON HIM ALONE

Hitler already stands convicted before the bar of history, The war guilt is his, and his alone. Responsibility "for this terrible catastrophe lies" on his shoulders alone, as Mr. Chamberlain not only told the world yesterday, but proved by his White Paper—the record of guilt for as great a crime as has ever been committed against civilization; a crime conceived and executed by one man in the service of "his own senseless ambitions."—Providence Journal.

NO IMMEDIATE OFFICIAL REACTION IN BRITAIN TO PEACE TERMS OFFERED BY DER FUEHRER

Hitler Proposes 'Laying Down of Arms,' Also Conference Designed to Bring About Disarmament and New Treaties

ORATES FOR HOUR AND TWENTY MINUTES

Five "Aims and Tasks" Resulting From the Collapse of Poland Outlined by Hitler, Chief of Which Is "Establishment of a New Order of Ethnographic Conditions", That Is, Resettlement of Nationalities.

By LOUIS LOCHNER
Associated Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 6—(AP)—Adolf Hitler today proposed a peace settlement "on comprehensive basis," but added that if the Allies rejected his outstretched hand" this statement "will have been the last."

"Then we shall fight," he went on, and pictured the new war as one sure to bring unprecedented horror to the world.

"May those peoples and their leaders who are of the same mind (as himself) now make their reply," he said in his hour and 20-minute speech to the Reichstag.

"And let those who consider war to be the only solution repent my outstretched hand."

Take Any Interpretation

He said the allies could "interpret these opinions of mine as cowardice, if they like."

"I need not occupy myself with what they think," he said. "Both these statements simply because it goes without saying that I wish to spare my own people this suffering."

Collaborators said Hitler regarded his proposals as "formal" and that he would now await for Great Britain and France to act on them.

Hitler was lithe and again combative in tone specifically to both Great Britain and France.

The world's history, he said, showed that in war "there have never been two victors, but very often two losers."

Neither Force Nor Time

"Neither force of arms nor lapse of time will conquer Germany," he declared, "it is infantile to hope for the disintegration of our people."

These were among the other most material phases of his speech:

1. A renunciation of further territorial claims, save for his old colonial demands.

2. A declaration that Germany and Soviet Russia together would "relieve one of the acutest danger spots of Europe" by working for a peace zone in Eastern Europe.

3. A specific assurance to the world that he had no designs on Rumania, the Ukraine, the Urals or Denmark and an expression that in Eastern Europe generally, and Scandinavia as well, his interests were wholly economic.

4. A declaration that one of Germany's tasks in dealing with fallen Poland was the establishment of a new order of ethnographic conditions, that is to say resettlement of nationalities"—and a further declaration that it was a problem not restricted "to this particular sphere but a task with far wider implications, for the east and south of Europe it is a large extent filled with splinters of German nationality, whose existence cannot be maintained."

Every Nation Sapped

Saying that if the present war was allowed to go on the "vigor of every nation will be sapped on the battlefield," Hitler added it would be "a crime against the blood that longer any islands"—an apparent reference to Britain's vulnerability to air attack.

Such a war carried to the end, he added, would leave a frontier of "ruins and endless graves" between Germany and France.

Tackle Problem Early Advise

Hitler coupled his suggestion for a general attempt to solve Europe's problems with a declaration that it could not be done "while cannons are thundering or mobilized armies are bringing pressure to bear upon it."

Why The Weather?

Air sickness! One may have "air sickness" either from lack of oxygen as in high altitudes, or from "bumpy" air. It is said that pilots who become accustomed to bumpy air never do adjust to a low amount of oxygen. Passengers who ride infrequently do not generally become immune to the discomforts of bump air, and stewardesses are at their wits' end in catering to their critical appetites. Discomfort due to the lack of oxygen can be overcome by sealing the cabin when an elevation of 8000 feet is reached. More air is then pumped in, keeping the pressure (and consequently the amount of oxygen) the same as at the 8000-foot level.

General Franco Orders Germans To Leave Spain

Two large German trusts were dissolved, the paper said. In addition, all Germans occupying key positions in Spanish firms were ordered to leave the country.

LITHUANIA NEXT TO SIGN PACT WITH THE SOVIET

Russia Continues Her March Toward Domination of Eastern Europe

10-YEAR AGREEMENT

By WITT HANCOCK

Moscow, Oct. 6 (AP)—Lithuania has been summoned as next to sign on the dotted line as Soviet Russia today continued her march toward domination of Eastern Europe.

By concluding a ten-year nonaggression accord with little Latvia yesterday—a treaty closely paralleling the one a week ago with Estonia—the Soviet Union added to her list up for control of the Baltic.

The treaty gives Russia the right to establish several air fields, naval bases at her western neighbor's ports of Liepaja (Libau) and Ventspils (Windau) and a coast artillery base to "protect Riga Bay".

B.E.F. Reaches France Without One Casualty

By J. F. SANDERSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 6—(CP)—The British expeditionary force with all its vehicles has been transported to France without a casualty, it was announced today.

The War Office declined to give the number of the troops or vehicles transported.

Leslie Hore-Belisha, Secretary for War, when he reviews the situation in the House of Commons Friday, day, is expected to say that more than a million tons of British materials have been transported to France than it was ever thought possible in the limited time since hostilities opened.

The task of transporting the expeditionary force to France has been of much greater magnitude than in 1914, because of vastly increased mechanization. The weight of equipment each ship had to be reinforced to carry it.

The only incident during the whole operation was when one transport struck a boom and was forced to turn back. Even it did not produce a casualty.

British Submarine Crew Remains Calm While Depth Bombs Burst

London, Oct. 6 (CP Cable) — A gripping story of how a British submarine in hostile waters escaped the pulverizing force of nine depth charges, while its crew gamely held themselves in when the last explosion would come, was told by a naval eye-witness.

The ship came safely home after depth charges smashed the periscope, put engines out of action and plunged the submarine into darkness. It rested on the seabed while the charges exploded at an average of one every two minutes for an hour. As it came to the surface British warships and aircraft fought off enemy planes to protect it.

Between each detonation the men grimly held their "draw" on the time for the next explosion.

The navigator was a member of the Royal Naval Reserve who served with Canadian Pacific Steamships before the war.

The crew was said to have been prepared to blow up the craft rather than surrender to the enemy when finally forced to the surface.

Bomb Every Two Minutes.

The account said early one morning in her "allotted patrol area in enemy waters" the submarine fixed her position and dived.

"Shortly before breakfast the detonation of a depth charge quite close to her, suggested emphatically that she was in the vicinity of enemy forces," it continued.

U.S. NAVY MOVES TO GUARD LINER AFTER "HOT" TIP

Head of German Navy Warns U.S. Liner Iroquois Would be Sunk

NO EXPLANATION

Captain of Liner Ordered to Search Ship for Explosives

Washington, Oct. 6 (CP)—Navy and Coast Guard craft moved today to guard the American liner Iroquois after President Roosevelt disclosed receipt of a startling report that the refugee-laden steamship was to be sunk.

The tip came from the head of the German navy, Admiral Raeder, but it left unanswered the question of how and why and by whom the sinking was to be done. Likewise it offered no explanation of how the Reich acquired the information.

The White House disclaimed any belief in the report, which many interpreted as a Nazi manoeuvre to make American think the allies plotted to aim the vessel to arouse sympathy for their cause.

However, first comment from Senate Foreign Relations Committee members indicated the manoeuvre—if it was such—was not taken that way by the administration.

Warning Is Believed.

Senator Key Pittman, committee chairman and administration lieutenant, said:

"It occurs to me that no one would have more knowledge of such facts than Admiral Raeder—nor as to the method of destruction of a vessel."

876-TON SHIP SUNK BY U-BOAT

London, Oct. 6 (CP)—The Ministry of Information announced late today that the British ship Glenfarg, 876 tons, had been sunk by a U-boat.

The announcement added the crew had been picked up and landed but one man had died of wounds. The number of the crew was not announced.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The full story of the attempt made by British and France to win Soviet Russia as an ally has yet to be told but Russia's course since the outbreak of the war suggests Nazi Germany was willing to pay a higher price for Russian friendship than the Allies. That price was acquiescence in Russian expansion westward.

Yesterday Russia, without fighting, won the right to place its armed forces on the soil of a third neighboring country — Latvia. Nazi Germany moved into Austria without a fight and did the same in Czecho-Slovakia but on its third venture into Poland met war. Russia seized half of Poland with out a struggle and gained the right to occupy first Estonian and now Latvian territory.

In the abortive pre-war negotiations with Russia which continued right up to the announcement of Russo-German non-aggression pact Britain and France refused to include Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia in the general guarantee being extended to Poland. This was because those small states, carved out of the Baltic fringe of the former Tsarist Empire, wanted no Russian guarantee. They were suspicious of their would-be protector.

Great Britain and France were unwilling to buy Russian support with a price consisting of the territory and independence of other states but Germany was willing.

Recent Russian moves when viewed in the light of the negotiations with Britain and France, point to a settled plan to capitalize on the war between Germany and the Allies. Each move is wholly consistent with a determination that whether the German struggle with the Western Powers ends in victory, defeat or draw, Russia will be stronger.

Warn U.S. Ship to Be Sunk

The S. S. Iroquois, American coastal steamer now en route from Ireland to the United States with a capacity load of American refugees, is to be sunk, according to a warning sent the United States government by Grand Admiral Dr. Erich Raeder of the German navy. The warning, which was revealed to the American people in a statement by President Roosevelt, said the American ship was to be sunk by a "nation now at war with Germany."

Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker Dies, Outstanding Figure in Ministry

Principal Emeritus of Albert College Has Had Long Career of Over 60 Years in Church—Principal of Albert College for Many Years Under Whom New College Was Built—Has Been Principal Emeritus of Institution Since Its Opening—Former Minister of Bridge Street Church

He was educated at Albert College, Belleville, and Victoria University, which at that time was located in Cobourg. From Victoria University he received the degree of Master of Arts in the year 1882; the degree of Bachelor of Divinity in the year 1887 and the degree of Doctor of Divinity in the year 1905.

Rendered Great Service to the Church

Allies Will Study Reichstag Speech Unhurriedly

British Government Statement Says No Peace Proposal Likely to be Accepted Which Does Not Remove Menace of Aggression

'MORE THAN WORDS'

Hitler's Proposals 'in Present Form Are in Many Respects Vague and Obscure,' Contain 'No Suggestion for Reparations for Wrongs Done by Germany to Other Peoples'.

London, Oct. 6 (CP)—The British government said tonight Adolf Hitler's peace proposals would be "subjected to careful examination in consultation with the governments of the Dominions and the French Republic."

The statement added:

"But it is necessary to remember two things:

"1. No peace proposal is likely to be accepted which does not effectively free Europe from the menace of aggression.

"2. Something more than words would be required to establish confidence in any peace proposals Germany might make."

Th government statement, read by a Foreign office spokesman, said that Hitler's proposals "in their present form are in many respects vague and obscure. But it is noped that they contain no suggestion for reparations for the wrongs done by Germany to other peoples."

RUSSIA COOLING TOWARDS HITLER

Copenhagen Dispatches from Moscow Quoted by BBC Today

London, Oct. 6 (CP)—The British Broadcasting Corporation today quoted Copenhagen dispatches from Moscow as indicating the Soviet Union is cooling toward its new German partner.

Moscow diplomatic circles "increasingly regard the Russo-German pact as an illusion which is about to flicker out as a friendship of convenience that can be dissolved when good reasons appear," one of the dispatches, which were published in the Copenhagen newspaper Politiken, said.

"The union is based on hard dealing and the exchange of promises which are amended whenever interest demands it," the dispatch said. "It is appreciated in Moscow that the Germans do not willingly look on Russia's advance to the west as their expense. Berlin has merely received from Moscow a promise of military neutrality which they know the Soviets may break. Hitler has further received promises of Russian supplies of raw products but all exports regard certain articles as almost impossible to fulfill without damaging Russia's own defences."

Says Heavy Allied Bombers Patrol 600 Miles Off Coasts

New York, Oct. 6 (CP) — Great Britain and France now operate heavy bomber air raids for a distance of 60 miles off their coasts, the skipper of a 7,000-ton freighter said here last night.

"The war has been dealt to the German submarines," said the captain.

He declared the only arms his freighter carries are "three pistols which have been on board a long time," but the bombers that roared overhead kept watch for underwater craft on recent ocean crossing.

"When we passed outside the 600-mile zone, we were met by destroyer which were also escorting eight other freighters, six of them British and two French," he said. "But they were travelling too slow for us. They were making only eight knots and we can do fifteen. So we left them behind."

The skipper said his ship made one detour of twenty miles to avoid a submarine. Owing to the vigilance of the patrols, shipping is now informed of the position or most of the Nazi U-boats. They are spotted from the skies; some are sunk, and the whereabouts of the others in the lanes of travel are reported with almost clock-like regularity, he said.

How Hitler's Word Has Been Kept

By the Canadian Press

Since Adolf Hitler came to power in 1933 many of his important pronouncements have been before the Reichstag. Included were these:

MAY 18, 1933—Demanded equality of arms and said Germany was ready to join "every solemn non-aggression pact."

JAN. 30, 1934—Promised security of Austria would not be violated.

JULY 13, 1934—Defended Nazi blood purge as a move to prevent a revolt.

MAY 21, 1935 — Said Germany had no "intention of arming to attack" and pledged participation in arms limitation moves.

MARCH 8, 1936 — Announced movement of troops into demilitarized Rhineland.

FEB. 18, 1937—Renounced any isolation of Germany and retraction of Versailles Treaty acknowledgement of war guilt.

FEB. 20, 1938—Told Great Britain no differences with her "aside from our colonial desires" and promised "protection" to German minorities.

JAN. 30, 1939 — Assured world Germany and Italy determined to give common support to common interests."

APRIL 28, 1939 — Denounced Anglo-German Naval Pact and non-aggression agreement which made "appreciable progress."

SEPT. 1, 1939—Pledged war until victory if necessary. Soviet Russia was supplanted by a Government which would yield disclaimed need of Italian and Danish aid. Poland but pictured Russia Germany's eternal friend.

Arms Borne Until Peace in Europe Ensured—Daladier

Paris, Oct. 6.—(CP-Havas)—Premier Daladier today declared France and Great Britain will not lay down their arms until a peace which ensures an end to aggressive movements in Europe by one state or group of states is "effectively established."

"The peace we want excludes all domination in Europe", the Premier told the Foreign Affairs committee of the Senate.

"It can be found only on the right of peoples to life and liberty."

Chrysler Corp. Awards Banner for Efficiency To Hastings Motors

The "Golden Banner", emblematic of one hundred per cent efficiency, given by the Chrysler Corporation of Canada to its representatives throughout the country, was awarded the Hastings Motors of this city, the other day.

The banner is one of eight awards that were spread over the Dominion, given for outstanding service to the public.

Manager Ivan Scott paid tribute to the co-operation of his staff. "If it were not for the loyal support, and interest shown in their work, the award would not have been possible," he said.

The banner has been hung in a prominent place in Mr. Scott's office.

BEFORE THE SNOW FLIES

Look over your home—inside and out—and see if there isn't something else you could do to have repaired or renovated before winter sets in . . . new storm windows or doors, flashing on the roof or chimney renewed, repairs or renewal of the heating furnace, or other improvements. It is easy to finance such improvements under the Home Improvement Plan and Mr. Dredge at the Bank of Montreal will be glad to tell you how a loan may be obtained.

30-POUND MUSKIE LANDED AT HEALY FALLS ON THURSDAY

A battle of over an hour was necessary on Thursday before Mr. and Mrs. John Platt of Frankford were successful in landing a thirty-pound muskie caught at Healy Falls. The fish struck on a double spoon bait and is one of the biggest caught in that district this season.

Brickwork on S. A. Citadel Completed

With richly-colored red brick walls, rearing high above the white cement of the boarding, the new Salvation Army Citadel on Pinnacle Street is rapidly nearing completion.

Bricklayers completed the erection of walls and other brickwork yesterday, as carpenters finished work at the building of the roof.

Partitions have been placed in position in the basement, where Sunday School, songster and band rooms will be located. Pouring of cement for the main floor started today.

Favored with ideal weather, construction has been maintained as per schedule, Contractor Thomas Adams stated this morning. While he would not forecast a date for the actual completion of the handsome structure, he felt that operations would be finished well within the allotted time.

"This has been made possible through the fine co-operation of the artisans and laborers", he said. "They have worked well, and have done a splendid job."

MAGICIAN THRILLS LARGE AUDIENCE BY ADROIT FEATS

Edward Charles Displays Uncanny Skill With Cards, Paper, Rope and Other Articles

Demonstrating with skill that at times bordered on the uncanny, Edward Charles, magician, now appearing at the McCarthy Theatre, alternately thrilled and amazed a large audience at his opening appearance last night.

With the deftness and dexterity of the polished artist that he is, Mr. Charles demonstrated the series of tricks and stunts that mark him as one of the cleverest artists of his kind to perform in this city.

Legerdemain and prestidigitation as it is called to the "trade" finished from the clever hands of the performer. His tricks with a deck of cards were exceptionally good, while a simple piece of paper worked miracles in his hands.

Articles disappeared in thin air before the eyes of the audience to reappear in place far from the scene of their disappearance. Needles and pins were likewise seen comfortably swallowed by the artist to appear again when replaced in the original piece of paper.

Rabbits, pigeons, pieces of cake and other articles played their part in the show which was one of general amusement and entertainment. A piece of rope was transformed into a series of knots in a quick flip of the hands to straighten itself in the hands of the same process.

The entertainment is clean, wholesome and productive of good entertainment that alternately inspirites and thrills the audience. Mr. Charles is appearing at the McCarthy box office tomorrow night, with a matinee tomorrow afternoon.

Proper Credentials Needed by Prospective Recruits for R.C.A.F.

Deluged with applications, recruiting officers of the Royal Canadian Air Force have been given advice while hir followed will save prospective recruits much trouble.

It is pointed out that before applying for enlistment in the Royal Canadian Air Force it is necessary for the prospective recruit to be in actual possession of a birth certificate which must be produced, proof of educational qualifications of which must be entrance to high school or better—two letters of recommendation, one if possible from a recent employer, and if he has served previously in any branch of His Majesty's forces, he should be able to produce his discharge certificate.

Belleville youths seeking enlistment in service unit have given a decided preference for the R.C.A.F., but have found medical requirements extremely rigid ones.

Police Blotter

"I tried to enlist in the army, but they turned me down because my poor sight in one eye. At least I could have filled the job of cook, the same as I did in the last war," William Kittner, of Toronto, pleaded as he appeared for sentence after being convicted of intoxication in a previous court. Kittner produced his army rejection slip. Statement of the accused that days in the common jail, to date from the time of his arrest, Kittner only has two days left to serve out his sentence following which he stated he would again try to enlist in some other branch of the army.

Roy C. Peters, Belleville, appeared on four charges of theft from his employers. At the request of Crown Prosecutor Gedman, local barrister, the cases were enlarged for one week and bail of $1,000, was produced. Application was made by his request, Magistrate Butler declared at the morning calendar and jokingly replied:—

"Do you realize next Friday is Friday the 13th?"

Both Crown Attorney R. C. Donnelly, K.C., and Mr. Goodman exchanged knowing glances without response.

Two highway traffic cases, which saw charges of careless driving increased, concluded the proceedings today.

Chief Kidd, clerk of the court, revealed there would be no session of police court on Monday, Thanksgiving Day.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE LATE ANDREW G. DAVIE

"The Lamplighter," as he was known to thousands, and advertising manager of The Ontario Intelligencer, has written his final "30".

Aplively wit, pungent observations on the sidelines of daily living, deft, lively little daily editorials on the frailties of human nature and the world, have been snuffed in the manner of the ending of all good newspapermen everywhere.

To those who had known and worked with Andrew G. Davie in the newspaper rade for many years, the end was sudden, unexpected. It was the severance of an interesting and illuminative friendship gained through the close harmony of daily work.

To men of the publishing business Andrew G. Davie epitomized the good newspaperman. He was a man whose facile pen could match the nimbleness of the brilliant, searching writings of the star reporter, whose very seriousness of personal editorial researching could be as deep as that of the foremost legislator.

As "The Lamplighter," Andrew Davie brought his Home Forum column "Sidelights", appearing daily in The Ontario Intelligencer, into prominence. One of the most quoted of columns, it contained daily some of the most thought-provoking and illuminating and brilliant writings to be found anywhere in the world of present day columnists. Many of his articles had been quoted in other papers of the country from coast to coast.

To the Man in the Street "Andy" Davie was the thoughtful, humorous friend, who knew the humble peddler and men of the city's highest ranks. Where human nature was to be found, there might "Andy" Davie be, turning the mirrored sunlight upon darker corners bringing into cameo relief the daily little stories which even the most experienced reporter might pass with unsuspecting thought.

Andrew G. Davie had been schooled in the newspaper journalism and had adopted Belleville during the later years of his life as his home. Belleville had been glad to welcome this distinguished son of journalism, and to extend the same hospitality that the city has to its sons who had gone abroad to gain fame and return home to accept the honors of happy citizenship. But in the passing of Andrew Davie, as in the passing of other brilliant men who have gone before, there will be that gap which only time can heal.

WARTIME SECRECY

Secrecy is essential in keeping from the enemy facts about so many branches of war activity. In recent papers appeared a despatch from "Somewhere in England," telling of two bus loads of newspapermen being taken on a tour of shadow shell plants becoming lost. So completely hidden from the public view from general knowledge were these plants that even guides have to ask directions.

That very secrecy is going to help oust Hitler and his Nazi group, and to win peace.

There was a time in the world's history when such secrecy was not necessary. Today with so many means of communication the ordinary little details of everything that find themselves in general property and enemy property. So absolute secrecy to assure unmolested production of munitions and safety of workers and refugees from the great cities is imposed.

This secrecy is a consolation to parents mothers who are left in the cities or who go to the rural places of security, fathers who keep the home fires burning or who labor in the cities at essential work, or who are in the army in Britain or on the Continent. Children miss their parents and parents miss their children but the children are safe, where no enemy can find them. In the country retreats millions of their youngsters go to school, learning the lessons which will make them worthy sons and daughters of their heroic mothers and fathers, who are doing the ultimate for the sake of civilization against war personified in the German Nazi party who have turned everything into guns and bombs. There is little doubt that a gigantic task rests on the teachers and those who guard the young, but they do their duty without demur. They and their little charges too will help to win the conflict over Hitler.

The "new" lives of the children in "secret" places will bring compensation in a sort of romance in their surroundings. In spite of the drawbacks they will grow strong and be secure.

REORGANIZING THE POLES

General Sikorski of Poland plans the formation in France of a great army of Poles now in Canada and the United States of no fewer than 200,000 men who will be trained for battle with the Germans on the Rhine front. In France at the same time are hundreds of thousands of Poles who will go to make the army of great proportions.

The Poles are a far-flung race. Many of them are in foreign lands and it is from these that the revival of Poland will spring as well as from the Poles who have managed to live in the country, now dominated by the Germans and Russians.

The appeal of the new president will not fall on dull ears. The Poles come of a heroic race, who have stood the forefront of oppression and have battled through the centuries against the Prussians. In the year 1939 they do not come to an end. They persisted even during the long years of domination by the Germans and the Russians prior to the Great War when Poland did not have a name on the map, except as Russian Poland and so on.

The callous Nazis of course know that they are flouting and have flouted every principle of racial rights in their domination of Czechoslovakia, and Poland. The other day there was a statement credited to well-informed Germans at Berlin that the German government did not desire to "Germanize the non-Germans," but such even if a promise of the chief Nazi himself, would mean nothing. The German record in Bohemia and other parts of Czechoslovakia in the past year shows a disregard for every sense of justice.

OCTOBER

October has already proceeded nearly a week on its way as the trees and the shrubbery show with their yellow, brown and scarlet tints coming into prominence and the green foliage steadily lessening. But it will be a little while before the full glory of October is come with scarlet and gold and with the green background of the evergreen which do not shed their leaves or needles.

October is a favorite with poets and writers. Some fine lines have been written on this month of gorgeous pageantry of fields, skies, hills, valleys and highways. Francis Thompson wrote:—

"How are the veins of thee, Autumn, laden?
Umbered juices,
And pulped ooze
Pappy out of the cherry-bruises,
Froth the veins of thee, wild, wild maiden
With hair that musters
In gold and clusters,
In tumbling clusters, like swarthy grapes,
Round thy brow and thine ears o'ershaden
With the burning blackness of eyes like pansies,
Like velvet pansies
Where through escapes
The splendid migh t of thy conflagrate fancies;
With robe gold-tawny not hiding the shapes
Of the feet wherewith it falleth down,
Thy naked feet unsandalled;
With robe gold-tawny that does not veil
Feet whose white red
Is meshed in the brown,
Like a rubied sun in a Venice-sail."

Another poet describes the season:—
Now autumn fire burns slowly along the woods,
And day by day the dead leaves fall and swell,
And night by night the monitory blast
Was in the key-hole, telling how it passed
O'er empty fields, or upland solitudes,
O'er grim wide wave; and now the power is felt
Of melancholy tender in its moods
Than any joy indulgent summer dealt.
William Blake says of autumn:
O autumn, laden with fruit, and stained
With the blood of the grape, pass not but sit
Beneath my shady roof; there thou mayest rest
And tune thy jolly voice to my fresh pipe,
And dance! and the daughters of the year shall dance!
Sing now the lusty song of fruits and flowers
Perhaps the finest poetry referring to this season is found in these lines of John Keats:—
"Season of mists and mellow fruitfulness!
Close bosom-friend of the maturing sun!
Conspiring with him how to load and bless
With fruit the vines that round the thatch-eaves run;
To bend with apples the moss'd cottage trees,
And fill all fruits with ripeness to the core."

Nor Do Wild Animals Find Peace

The automobile has given us tenfold more leisure and the opportunity ours at the touch of a button. But the more we are offered the less we have. We are like the wind but get nowhere.

Observed this in a stroll I took the other morning. Within a mile from my doorstep I found a world that had been lost to me since my boyhood. It was a strangely new and beautiful world. It was not like a blind man whose sight had been miraculously restored, as he gaped at clouds and grain waving in the breeze and the play of sunlight on weathered boards.

I heard things, too—things that one does not hear on a speeding car. I felt like that fabled giant of antiquity, whose strength vanished when he lost touch with the earth. Freed from the rubber-tired insulation which customarily isolates me I walked the soft soil and listened to sounds inaudible to my senses.

There was, for example, the encounter with a farmer and his son, engaging in repairing a windmill. Here was a crisis as real as anything in Europe; for the stock must have water, and time pressed. The mad world I had left behind me seemed strangely unreal as I took a hand with the ropes and heaved with the farmer and his son at the dislocated windmill; and I had a personal sense of triumph when we finally got it spinning again.

Contentedly I left them, sent went sauntering down the road, my eyes and ears alert for new adventure.

Motorists reckon everything in miles and their pace. My eyes firmly fixed on the horizon for them to be the wonders underfoot. What slave of gasoline, for example, has ever seen an ant lion or a hermit spider?

Across the fields I could glimpse the concrete highway, that triumph of engineering, over which mechanical marvels flew the giant waterbugs. Many of them. I doubt not, were in pursuit of pleasure, racing from one place to another, seeking awe or at least release from ennui.

Yet at the moment I was the envy one of them was a cousin of the grey and furry monster beside whose hole I lay and watched.

An extraordinary creature, this hermit. Unlike his cousins, the family is skilled in architecture, building burrows more after the subterranean mansions — covers that are marvels of camouflage and concealment.

From these lairs they emerge, with wide shoulders like gorillas to subdue a grasshopper, or even beetle. Wrestling, one wonders more than ever, what life is all about. What difference is there, really, between Germans emerging from their walls of iron and concrete, ready to devour Poles, and a Spider, springing on an unwary beetle?

Although all the animal kingdom there is no destiny but to eat and be eaten. Even in the jungle is always violent. It is not conceivable that peace can ever be negotiated between the wolf and the sheep, between the cat and the canary, between the spider and the ant. Is it any more conceivable that there can be peace between species of man?

Life is a battlefield on which no armistice is ever signed. The wind ripples the seas of maturing grain, the billows gently over the hill, the sun keeps busily regulating the masterpiece in green and gold, with his autumnal experiments in scarlet and tan. Every prospect pleases and man only reviles. But one has only to sit very quietly, waiting carefully, to discover that death is everywhere, that destruction never ceases, that life is a never-ending struggle between hunter and hunted.

What a pity that men must fight each other, when all the rest of creation is so busy trying to devour men. If that thought needed any point, I got it when a wasp thrust his poniard in my bare arm. And if you don't think that's a point, you don't know wasps as I do!—By Vincent O'Brien in Chicago News.

Precautions Regarding Infantile Paralysis

With epidemics of infantile paralysis in many parts of the world it is only natural that mothers of small children should be a little anxious until the next few weeks—September and October—pass by. Most cases of infantile paralysis occur during August, September, October and November.

In Illinois a State Committee has been organized composed of physicians and others of special training and wide experience in the control of infantile paralysis. In the Illinois Health Messenger this Committee outlines the diagnosis and treatment of infantile paralysis.

The Committee recommends (a) the immediate and complete isolation of patients once that it is definitely learned that the patient has the disease. (b) Keep the patient in bed, (c) no moving from one place to another of a patient in the acute stages of the disease unless absolutely necessary, and then only with the greatest care to avoid any muscular movement in the patient as far as possible.

Late symptoms—pain and tenderness in the back; weakness or actual paralysis of the muscles.

Late findings — reflexes at knee, ankle, elbow are not normal, being either increased, diminished or absent. There is muscle weakness or paralysis.

There is, of course, just the one point that parents must remember. Any illness, usually in good health and spirits, comes in overwhelming numbers. Indeed, any slight head cold, he should be put to bed immediately is called in. It is the putting of the child to bed and the immediate calling of the family physician that gives the child every chance for recovery.

Although I have written about the importance of putting any ailing or suspicious child to bed, I believe the above instructions and findings from the Illinois Health Messenger are very much worth repeating.

"COFFIN NAILS"

A Chinese coffin was the burial place of opium and narcotics customs officers discovered when they inspected the cargo of a steamer from U. S. to the Orient. Where else would you expect to find "coffin nails" than in a coffin? They couldn't have been the kind advertised as "mild," "coffin" is carload.—Chatham News.

FAN MAIL

The new recruit boasted so much of what he would do to the enemy that his sergeant told him to report to take a rise out of him.

One morning he received the following letter: "Dear Sir,—In the name of famous Gehenal: "Heartiest congratulations on enlistment. We need men like you!" He pinned it up on his locker with the remark: "Gee, I'm proud of you.—George R.I." He showed his second-wing instructor's barracks.

But he smelt a rat when the instructor said: "Goering says he will reagin unless you do. How much to remain neutral?—Hitler."—The Legionary.

S. O. S. LANGUAGE

11.20 a.m.—The American Merchant's operator picked up the "S S S S" signal, which means "Submarine sighted or attacking." The Famad Head then identified herself and gave her position.

11.30 a.m.—The Famad Head flashed: "Still being chased by submarine."

11.55 a.m.—The Famad Head flashed: "Submarine has ceased pursuit. Carry on. Say still chasing us."

11.35 a.m.—The Famad Head flashed: "Submarine has ceased pursuit. Will probably want you soon. He's catching up fast."

12.18 p.m.—The Famah Head flashed: "Submarine now only one mile behind us. Can't come for us now, old man, and do all speed you can. Wish you the best of luck."

The American Merchant answered: "Okay, many thanks."

The Famad Head answered: "I sure hope so."

That was all. The American Merchant started to the rescue, but Wallace Burah, the Famad Head's radio operator, and the Famad herself were captured by the German raider Deutschland.

What a pity that men must fight each other, when all the rest of creation is so busy trying to devour men. If that thought needed any point, I got it when a wasp thrust his poniard in my bare arm. In Kitchener's Time—and Now

On the Saturday before the Declaration of War in August, 1914, the Central Recruiting Office at Scotland Yard attested just eight recruits. That may seem almost incredible today, considering the fact that war had already begun between Austria and Serbia, that the armies of Russia, Germany and France were mobilising and that relatively few people in Great Britain believed that England could possibly remain neutral.

On the Monday and Monday the recruiting office, of course, remained closed, in the typical British way, regardless of the onrushing doom. On the Tuesday, however, there was such a crowd of applicants outside the office doors long before opening time that it took the recruiting officer 20 minutes, with the aid of a score of constables, to force his way through.

By August 8th most of the London Territorial battalions were at war strength. By the 11th recruits were being enrolled at the rate of 2,000 a day. The news, especially that whilst came from Belgium, through which the German armies were already hacking a way, supplied the sharpest incentive. Patriotism was kindling a martial ardour, and "to deride patriotism," as has been well said, "made impermissible shock."

There was not much "impermissible blood" in the Old Country throughout the autumn of that fateful year. But there were dreary and unavailing regrets that multitudinal warnings during the past few years had been so grievously neglected.

The spirit of the British people in those first days was wonderful. There had been nothing like it within living memory. The nation united to give its best to the common cause and trusted where it could not see.

Above all, it trusted Kitchener. Both the Cabinet and the people of the old country had been saying that nothing but conscription would do, those in the know, and those who judge have said that the Cabinet would not have dared refuse 5,000,000 men. Lord Derby got 1,750,000 men. "Your King and Country need you. Will you help?" The response of the 1,000,000 men is immediately necessary in the present grave national emergency.

That was the first proclamation calling for recruits. Kitchener's request his first 100,000, men of splendid physique, between 19 and 30 years of month. Then he asked for another 100,000 and got them, too. And he then got a third and a fourth, and almost as rapidly if the military authorities were capable of the task of dealing with a multitude who had to be housed and trained and equipped—as it usually is unready—had not raised their standards of requirements. The rush was checked, and in a week recruiting for the Regulars dropped to less than a third.

It was not that the need for reinforcements had diminished: it had, in fact, grown more urgent. But Kitchener was helpless owing to the

With Ribbentrop in Canada

Sir,—He was a bank clerk, then; afterwards, he was newspaper man in Ottawa. He spoke good English, was an agreeable companion and a violinist. Now he is Hitler's Minister to Canada.

It is not by accident that a man who has an intimate knowledge of our Canadian people, capable and willing servants is a leader of pro-Nazi fifth column activities in Canada and others, less obvious German, are planted in financial institutions and commercial concerns. Every knowledge of methods and clients are useful. Ribbentrop's men have the pay-roll is before they raid; knowledge of the foreign accounts of those—Jews and others—within Germany has been valuable to the Nazi party and to Germany and German wealth their own.

It is by no accident, even today, that Imlandis pals Canada's pernicious German propaganda reaches the public by impending quarters throughout Canada and reaches us, individually, in forms that can be most insidious and contentious.

It is fortunate that we have had this example; let us learn by it. Let us be very careful. Let no one gain by association in the slightest degree certain of his position and antecedents. Refuse to believe or repeat non-isolationist assertions. Think of any news is more than suspect if it comes from the lips of such associated Canadian determination to win and end this war.—H. Clark in letter to Montreal Star.

with misgiving from the purple heights of Olympus, that argument that "the Red Army will carry out its great mission of emancipation with great enthusiasm" and the creepy-crawly sensation down the spine that the Red Army knifing anyone in the back is greatly unheasest of in criminal affairs, another personal attack upon Finland was attempted in the process up with freedom and glory to the west and to nothing of those two terms should ever be used again in connection with the Russian spiritual instinct for self-respect. Perhaps we had better let the tyrants and dictators—and there are unfortunately all the fine words they can find: it would be easier for everybody to use a single one of them now that they have been so thoroughly and irretrievably besmirched by those who combine a talent for treachery with a genius for misrepresentation.—Letter Guardian.

FAITHFUL DOCTOR

For over forty years Dr. John Moore, a physician of Poppleton, has paid faithful family physician, his practice covering Brooklin and a wide district. In all kinds of weather, he went out on visits to the poor and needy with the high ideal of service always his first consideration. He was also a member of Brooklin church and layman whose advice was sought in Anglican church councils.

Dr. Moore passed away in 1937, but beautiful stained glass windows in St. Thomas Anglican Church, Brooklin, given by Mrs. Moore, and dedicated last Sunday, are a permanent memorial. The inscription on the window reads: "He went about doing good," is fitting and appropriate.—Oshawa Times.

Fish Here for Grand Dishes

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

NEW REPORTS from the Bureau of Fisheries and the Fishery Council of the Middle Atlantic Area are encouraging. We learn that fish is appearing more and more on the home menu and that fish restaurants report increased patronage. This is all to the good, for fish, while low in calorific content, are chuckfull of vitamins, proteins and minerals. If you want to serve fish a different way, here are some swell recipes.

Is the silvery mackerel your favorite fish? Then broil a whole split mackerel or fillets. Melt two tablespoons butter, add salt and one teaspoon finely-chopped onion. Pour over boiled fish. Leave in oven one minute with the door open. Serve at once.

For haddock in celery sauce, boil the haddock in fish stock. Serve with celery sauce. For this cook sliced celery in water to cover until tender. Drain. To the water add equal amount milk. To each cup liquid use two tablespoons butter and two tablespoons flour. Melt butter. Add flour. When boiling, add milk slowly. Cook. Season with salt and pepper. Add cooked celery. Pour sauce over fish. Garnish with chopped celery leaves.

Fish in a Ring

Try Fish a la Ring at that next supper party! Mix three tablespoons butter and stir in three tablespoons flour. When boiling, slowly add two cups milk, stirring constantly. When thickened, add one chopped pimento, one-half cup chopped mushrooms and one-half cup diced celery. Add two tablespoons lemon juice to two cups cooked fish, flaked. Add to sauce. Season with salt, paprika and one-fourth teaspoon nutmeg. Just before serving add one beaten egg to enrich and bind the mixture. Do not over-cook.

Salmon with Egg Sauce is made by cooking the fish in fish stock. (Stock is water with salt, vinegar or lemon juice added to make fish firm and white; to give flavor, onions, soup greens, carrots, bayleaf and peppercorns are added to the water). Cook eight minutes per pound. Serve with white sauce that has one hard-boiled chopped egg added for each cup of sauce used. Hollandaise, shrimp, lobster, oysters and caper sauce are other tasty combinations.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S

The W.M.S. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church met on Wednesday, October 4th., Mrs. Fargey presiding. The meeting was opened by the singing of "The National Anthem", followed by the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. (Rev.) Walker read the Scripture after which the President led in prayer. The hymns "Fight the Good Fight" and "Faith of our Fathers", were two well chosen hymns. The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Mrs. Fleming and Mrs. Ranson and the Current Events read by Mrs. (Dr.) Reid. Mrs. Bell sang a splendid solo "Prayer Changes Things."

Rev. W. J. Walker was the speaker and had as hand much information regarding the work of the church in Canada. Only two conclusions, could be drawn from his talk. First we can slip into indifference in the matter of Christian Service or second we can still accept the challenge of carrying on a task which God means to have carried on.

A vote of thanks was given Mr. Walker and after singing "Who is on the Lord's side", Mrs. Morrice closed with prayer. The hymns for the service were chosen by Miss Russell.

Mrs. Walker and her group consisting of Mrs. Bateman and Mrs. Weir, Mrs. Morrice and Mrs. Darrel.

Smart Steppers For Autumn

By ALICE ALDEN

CONTINUE to expose your toes for cocktail and evening but step into something more functional for the street. Shoes are hailed this autumn as refined and lady-like, a credit to the shoe-master's art! Lines are simple, colors dignified and leathers sleek, whether kid, doeskin or suede. Suede is frequently combined with a contrasting leather, while kidskin is more often self-trimmed, as in the shoe pictured at right. This is one of the models with Turkish, or bulldog, toe to give the foot a short look. And it has a stitched cuff and toecap. The kid opera pump, left, illustrates the vogue for bows on everything in the wardrobe this fall, including shoes. Either shoe might be matched to the hand-stitched, finger-free gloves in mocha.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Her Boy Friend Backward About Meeting Her Family

Dear Miss Fairfax—

I've been going with a certain young man for a few months now, but I can't persuade him to come into the house. When he has a date with me, he insists that I meet him in front of the house, and then we go for a walk, to the movie, or to a band concert.

I had one quarrel with him on account of this, but we made up again and he apologized. But when I ask him to come and ring the doorbell and get me, he still insists that I meet him in front of the house. My folks have nothing against him; in fact my mother has been extolling to my meeting him outside. What would, you advise, under the circumstances?

Alice

I suggest that you explain to your boy friend that your mother objects to you meeting him on the outside, and that he really must come to the door and call for you in the house. I can't imagine why he objects to doing this, inasmuch as your people are willing to have you go out with him. He may be a little bashful, and if he does come in, I suggest you do not bring the entire family in for introduction at the same time. Let your mother be the first to meet him.

He Wants to Keep Up the Friendship

Dear Miss Fairfax

When I first met this girl I grew to care for her at once and made things as pleasant for her as I could. We had a few quarrels but made up again each time. She may still be interested in me but it seems as if it is merely an old friendship. Whenever I call, I don't know whether she is anxious to hear from me or not. I suppose this is because we've quarrelled, babied and made up so often.

And now there's a rival on the scene. He has a car and plenty of money, which I lack.

I couldn't bear to break off with her, for I still care about her in my own "dumb" way. I know I've been no fool, but I want to remedy the situation. What can I do to regain the old standing I once had?

Nick

From your letter (which was far too long to print) it seems to me that you become reconciled with this girl only to quarrel again. Why don't you cut out these skirmishes, likewise the pitched battles? Even the most devoted lovers can't keep up such a pace. And as for the deadly rival with the car and money, you are not which him quarrelling with the girl? Indeed, you are.

Take a hint from him. Be amiable show her how much your friendship can mean to her and how much it means to you. Do as you did when you first met—make things as pleasant for her" as you can.

When Boys and Girls Go to Dances Together

Dear Miss Fairfax

I go to school dances and club dances with a certain boy whom I like very much indeed. I've often wondered whether he cares or not if I dance with other young men. If I ought to ask his permission, just how would I go about it? Or perhaps it isn't necessary that I ask him. Please tell me.

Bothered

No, indeed, girls do not have to ask permission of their escorts, when other boys ask to dance with them. Neither is it necessary for a boy to ask his girl friend if he may cut in on other girls. He sees to it that she is not a wall-flower, and when he wants to dance with other girls he must introduce her to desirable partners.

When a boy takes a girl to a dance, the rule is that he dances the first one with her she supper dance and last dance, and then he sees her home. With these obligations fulfilled he is free as his duty as a partner and a gentleman.

Tips on Choosing Wallpapers

When you are choosing your wallpapers, remember that the scale of the pattern is of the utmost importance. In general it is wised to choose small patterns for small rooms, and large patterns for large rooms. There are no fixed rules about this, but to attempt to decorate from the pattern books you must have had a good deal of experience and must have a good deal of imagination. A big dramatic pattern naturally makes a small room look smaller, but a small design if repeated many times on a large area gives a restless, jumpy feeling to the room.

Before you make your final decision about the wallpaper, get a large sample as you can (even if you have to pay for it). Look it up on the wall and work your imagination as hard as you can, to try to visualize how the paper will look with the design repeated on all the walls.

Consider stripes. The wallpaper manufacturers have certainly considered them very much this season. We have never had so many different kinds of stripes to choose from. Narrow stripes, medium-width stripes, dramatically wide stripes, feel-indeed stripes are especially smart this year, and, of course, are safer to use than the tables in contrasting colors. For a rather dark room you might like to consider one of the new and lovely candlewick stripes, one stripe in a soft shade, and the other, of exactly the same width, in a satin stripe of the same shade. I found an especially beautiful one in a golden tone, which would make a dark room glow.

Many striped papers this season are of one striking shade combined with a white stripe. Sometimes this white stripe is over-laid with a formalized lace-design.

I often wonder why wallpaper shops don't show more plain color that it is possible to buy these plain papers have, this year, been revised, so that they charmingly keep in step with the times and are not that high-lighted at the moment. If you are a newcomer to the wallpaper world, and are still a bit fearsome of pattern, you might find exactly the shade you want in a plain wallpaper . . . perhaps just the shade that you haven't been able to achieve with the painter.

The family of pinks seems to be the shade of the moment this season. A fresh, clear pink. Becoming shades of peach. Lovely apricot. And even richer and deeper shades of that darling of most women's hearts . . . dusty pink, called by various names.

The Early American enthusiasm is probably responsible for the increase in the number of papers with clear white backgrounds.

Difficult to achieve in paint is a second shade of yellow. Perhaps this accounts for the especially large number of yellow papers from light yellow to a rather deep golden shade, and very lovely and radiant they are, friendly to dark rooms.

Alluring shades of green there are too. And, for the blue-enthusiasts, a rich and glowing shade from light to dark.

Floral designs are infinite, as well they should be. The floral stripes, re-introduced several years ago, made such a definite hit that we have even more of them this season.

Watch your enthusiasm for scenic papers. (I mean the domestic scenic papers, not the sets of imported ones.) Scenic papers are especially suitable for rooms in which we don't spend much time, . . . entrance halls, hallways, dining-rooms. In a living-room they may easily become tiresome; in a bedroom they may become restless. Too often a scenic paper doesn't stay in the background, where it should stay.

Some rooms . . . powder rooms, children's rooms, some types of bedrooms . . . are made more cheerful by papering the ceiling as well as the walls. Sometimes the ceiling is painted to match the background color of the wallpaper, or one of the colors in the pattern of the paper. Or you might be interested in having the painter put in the white paint for the ceiling a few drops of paint of the shade of the background color of the paper. . . this gives a harmonizing glow from the papered walls.

Quick Relief From STOMACH PAIN

To neglect pain and distress in the stomach, however slight, is to court serious trouble. Such disturbance is usually due to excess acid attacking the delicate stomach lining. At the first hint of pain or distress, take Macleans Brand Stomach Powder. Its four properly balanced and potent alkalies neutralize excess acid, relieve the stomach, stop pain, aid elimination of stomach gases and protect the stomach walls against the biting attack of the acid. Get a bottle and keep it handy. Be sure to ask for Macleans Brand Stomach Powder, which is only genuine if the signature "Alex. C. Maclean" appears on bottle and carton. Recreation Hour

This year for the first time in the Collegiate's lengthy history the school has an occational recreation hour. Last Monday the Imperial Oil Company troupe appeared on the stage and we were entertained with hit tunes, modern songs, tap dancing, ventriloquism and singing.

On Thursday we heard with great enthusiasm a lecture by Dr. Trot of Queen's University on the Maginot Line.

This recreation hour is still in the experimental stage, but is looked upon with great favour by the student body.

The Home Nursing Course is to begin Wednesday, October 5, and from all reports a good attendance is expected.

Friends, students, citizens, lend me your ears. Please do not be frightened by strange noises heard on the streets on a Tuesday evening. It is merely the practising of various members of the band returning from meetings. The practices for boys and girls have been held separately, but owing to numerous requests the practices will soon be for all voices. Mr. Mayhew, our director, has noticeably acquired many wrinkles since the organization has begun. He will doubtless suffer from a breakdown before the end of the year.

Our victory yesterday in our first O.S.S.S.A. rugby game in three years is a matter for great jubilation. All of us who could scrape up the attendance fee of ten cents were out. Any others (?) Anyway, it was a good game and a grand day for it.

U. S. NAVY MOVES

Senator Pat Conally, Texas Democrat and a committee member, said he thought President Roosevelt was right in ordering protection for the fleet "when a threat has been made that it was going to be sunk".

Several United States naval ships and a Coast Guard cutter were rushed to accompany the Iroquois to New York, where she is due next Wednesday. The captain was ordered to search the ship for explosives and to double his lookouts and patrol watchmen.

The Iroquois, a 6,200-ton vessel, left Cobh, Ireland, on Tuesday with a crew of 213 and 584 passengers. Only those who were able to prove American citizenship had been permitted to book passage on the vessel which was chartered by the United States Lines "to bring home Americans caught in Europe by the outbreak of war.

The United States Navy declined to divulge the names or number of the ships sent to search the Iroquois. It also kept secret the latter's position.

The White House statement issued late yesterday said:

"Yesterday the head of the German navy, Grand Admiral Raeder, officially informed the American government, through the United States Naval Attache (Commander A. E. Schrader) in Berlin, that according to information on which he relied, an American ship, the Iroquois, is to be sunk when it nears our American east coast.

"The sinking of the Iroquois, Admiral Raeder said, would be accomplished through a repetition of circumstances which marked the loss of the Athenia."

Torpedo Blamed.

(The British liner Athenia, with many Canadians and Americans on board, was sunk off the coast of Ireland the day Britain declared that a state of war existed with Germany. The British Admiralty as well as persons rescued from the vessel blamed a torpedo from a German submarine, but in Germany there were contentions that the Athenia had been sunk by foes of the Reich to arouse feeling in the United States.)

Mention of the Athenia in Admiral Raeder's dispatch conveyed to many persons here the impression that Germany was, in effect, saying that Britain or France intended to sink the Iroquois and then blame a German submarine.

(The New York Herald Tribune in a dispatch from Washington said the "present warning by the German Admiralty regarding the Iroquois recalled that prior to the last departure of the Lusitania from New York the German Embassy publicly warned Americans against sailing on that British ship. The Lusitania was sunk by a German submarine during the last war with some Americans on board and aroused bitter resentment in the United States.)

Stephen Early, a presidential secretary, said the cabinet devoted almost its entire session yesterday to the message before deciding to make it public. The latter was done, Early said, in order that the public would "know as much about it as the government."

Too Absurd To Deny.

London, Oct. 6 (AP)—Admiralty sources today brushed aside as "too absurd to deny" an official German tip to Washington indicating that the United States liner Iroquois was to be sunk in fulfillment of a plot by the allies.

The Iroquois sailed Tuesday from Cobh, Eire, with 566 American passengers and a crew of 212. The passengers were in night from the disaster.

The Admiralty sources spoke unofficially. Official comment was deferred but naval officials were reported astonished by German Grand Admiral Erich Raeder's warning to the United States liner Iroquois was limited today to the following:

"Ask Britain—we have done our duty by giving the warning. It is now up to Britain to explain."

BRITISH SUB

"Her captain decided to have a look at them through his periscope and put his ballast pump in action to rise to the surface. Another depth charge promptly exploded much closer.

"The crew lay down to conserve valuable oxygen consumed by movement. During the next hour they counted six detonations as the enemy groped about in search of them with sweep wires, electrically operated bombs and depth charges."

The account went on to say the submarine could do nothing but remain on the bottom, and during this time the crew held "sweepstakes" at sixpence a throw on when the next explosion would come.

"The bombardment intensified. For the next hour the explosions averaged one every two minutes. They grew gradually more distant. Then there was a lull.

"About tea time the strained, weary men in the submarine heard a wire scraping over the after jumping-stay. A series of bumps thudded along the hull.

Shattering Explosion.

"Then what they awaited happened. A shattering explosion—all lights were extinguished. There was everywhere the crash of broken glass, and in the silence that followed, the sound of water spurting and the hiss of air escaping from the high pressure system.

"Portable electric lights revealed enough of the catastrophe. One motor and both engines were out of action. From half a dozen leaks in the air system air hissed as from a punctured tire."

The air gradually grew foul, the report said, and the first lieutenant passed around peppermint drops and a bag of candy to his men.

When the commander knew by his clock that darkness had fallen, he mustered his men and told them that if ballast tanks held he intended to rise to the surface and "although his ship was as helpless as a log . . . fight to the death."

The men loaded torpedo tubes and prepared ammunition for other guns, and "as a last grim measure they prepared a demolition charge to blow their ship to pieces rather than let her fall into the hands of the enemy."

Finally, when all was ready for what they believed would be their "last fight", the crew blew the tanks and rose floundering to the surface.

The pressure inside the hull had raised to a dangerous point.

Cruisers To Rescue.

The "lightweight" captain guarded against being literally blown through the hatch when it was opened, by having a 200-pound signalman hold him by the legs, the account said.

Despite this protection, the force of air blew the captain's binoculars over his head, the eyewitness reported.

"He climbed out and looked anxiously about him. It was a clear night, and there was nothing in sight," the account said.

The periscope was gone, the wireless smashed, communication pipes crushed and engines disabled.

But the crew eventually made sufficient repairs to sail slowly away and send out a wireless for help.

British cruisers and an aircraft carrier appeared just as enemy bombing planes appeared overhead.

"An air attack by the enemy bombing planes crumbled under the anti-aircraft fire of the cruisers and the attacks of fighters sent up by the carrier," the account continued.

When the crew reached a submarine base, the commander found a letter from a rural relative awaiting him, opening with the line:

"We hardly realize there is a war."

Details of the submarine's personnel and her position were withheld.

Reds Insist "We'll be Back" After Absorbing 2 Defeats From the Yankee Bombers

Monte Pearson Given Full Credit for His Fine Game by Losers

HAD REAL FAST BALL

Reds Went Twelve Frames Without Hit Before Lombardi Singled

By GAYNE TALBOY
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 6 (AP)—Cincinnati Reds are a brave lot of boys, if nothing else. When they left here last night bound for home and a resumption of the World Series against New York Yankees tomorrow, they yelled belligerently: "We'll be back."

A full appreciation of this stout-hearted, devil-may-care attitude on the part of the National Baseball League champions can be had only by the 118,000 who sat in Yankee Stadium for the past two afternoons and watched the lads from the west absorb two cruel beatings.

Beaten 2-1 by Red Ruffing in the opener shut out 4-0 by Monte Pearson, the Reds might have been forPearson's two-hit pitching performance given had they refused to continue the classic unless they were given a head-start of, say, three runs a game.

Still Have Heads Up

But in their dressing room and on the train last night they were insisting—we'll be back—and Manager Bill McKechnie was railing: "Nobody can tell me we are as poor a ball club as we've looked the last two days. We're going home with our heads up."

McKechnie was right, the Reds cannot be quite that bad. Everybody, by any kind of series, ever was mowed down so mercilessly as they have been for two days.

In two games they have made just six hits, all singles. Only one Redleg, Ival Goodman, has reached second base, and he scored there once in the first game after drawing a walk. Of the three who saw first after accepting Pearson's deceptive fast ball yesterday, two on clean hits and another on a pass, none went any further.

Failing for Pearson

When Ernie Lombardi plunked his single to centre in the eighth yesterday he broke a string of 12 consecutive innings in which the Reds had failed to scratch any sort of a hit and had been retired in order by Ruffing and Pearson.

The crowded stadium was pulling for Pearson to get his no-hitter when Lombardi caught an outside curve squarely on the nose and shot it over second base. After the spell had been broken, it didn't matter so much that Bill Werber noticed another hit after two were on in the ninth. Pearson, the 30 year old veteran Oklahoma City-Californian had pitched one of the classic games of World Series history.

The Reds said it was his fast ball, rather than his change-of-curve, that baffled them. He struck out eight, sending Kelley Elmer Craft going down three times swinging. Only one runner reached second, through the fourth, fifth and sixth innings. Pearson struck out four batters and forced two others out at first. On only two delays did he accept a little help from his infield.

Walters Hurls Well

"About all I can say is Pearson, Pearson, Pearson," said Coach Hank Gowdy. "You can't beat a man you don't hit."

Bucky Walters, like Paul Derringer before him, turned in a fine job of chucking for the Reds. Of the nine hits pounded by the Yankees over the two ball games, the third, and they were set down in order for the last three innings. He struck out five and owned to only one serious mistake—the second ball that Babe Dahlgren whipped into the left field stands in the fourth inning.

"The pitch shouldn't have been quite where it was," grinned Walters.

COLONELS DEFEAT ROCHESTER WINGS

Capture Little World Series Title by Winning Seventh Game 7-3

Rochester, N.Y., Oct. 5—(AP)—It took a long time, but Louisville Colonels of the American Association are baseball's world champions for 1939.

After a series of postponements, the Colonels battled their International league rivals, Rochester Red Wings, 11 innings last night before winning 7-3 and the series four games to three.

Louisville scored four runs in the 11th inning to gain the decision.

Roy Henshaw let Reese single in the 11th, and the shortstop stole second. An error by Henshaw and Monte Weaver's sacrifice fly scored him, and the additional run followed as Paul Campbell's triple, a fielder's choice, a sacrifice and Pinkie Hartley's single.

Mike Ryba gave up the last run.

BELLEVILLE BOY WILL MISS OPENER

One statement that will hold true for the opening of the eastern Canada grid season on Saturday is that "everybody will be without somebody". Injuries have been plentiful this fall, one of the victims being Wally Hilton, above, Queen's half with University of Western Ontario, who will be out of the opening game with Queen's victim of a broken rib.

Hilton is a graduate of the Belleville Collegiate Institute, where he learned the rudiments of the grid game and was a lever of strength with the "tri-color" in 1933 and '34 when the B.C.I. won the senior Interscholastic rugby football honors.

ST. CATHARINES TEAM TO WATCH 'LANKY' DOUGLAS

Open Defence of Their Dominion Lacrosse Title in Vancouver Tonight

EXPECTED TO WIN

West to Have Advantage of Home Floor and Longer Rest

Vancouver, Oct. 5—(CP)—St. Catharines Athletics will keep their eyes on big Alvin (Lanky) Douglas when they open defence of the Canadian lacrosse championship here tonight, in the Mann Cup final with Montreal Winterseason Adanacs.

One of the first things that came to the attention when they arrived today was the fact Douglas had just been awarded the Mathedy trophy by the inter-city league as the most valuable player of the year.

A rangy defenceman who runs 6 feet, three and stands with the accuracy of a baseball pitcher like Monte Pearson, Douglas led the league in individual scoring during the last season. Early in the season, he marked up a record for one game by scoring 13 points in one game.

During the regular schedule, he scored 69 goals and 32 assists, 19 more points than any other player in the league. In the league playoffs, he stood out again, scoring 15 goals and five assists in 11 games.

Manager Predicts Win

But Douglas isn't the only player Athletics will have to watch when they renew rivalry with the strong British Columbia champions. According to Manager Max Macdonald, the team has improved 100 per cent in the year since it dropped three straight to St. Catharines in the 1938 Dominion finals at Toronto.

MacDonald goes so far as to predict without qualification that his team will take the Mann Cup back to New Westminster once again. The Salmonbellies last won it for the Royal City in 1937.

Adanacs will have at least one advantage over their eastern rivals in tonight's game, opening of the three-of-five series. They will have had more than two full days' rest from their trip to Nelson where they won the British Columbia title. The Athletics will have had little more than 12 hours to get used to city pavements again before they take the floor.

All-in Good Shape

MacDonald says his players are all in good shape for the series. Some nursed minor injuries after the seven-game series with Vancouver Burrards for the inter-city championship and the two-game set with Nelson Maple Leafs, but the manager said they all would be ready for the game tonight.

British Columbia lacrosse officials named Harry Gilmours of Vancouver to referee the series with Jerry Kendall of Brampton, Ont., who came west with St. Catharines. After tonight's game, the teams move to New Westminster for the second and third games. If any other games are necessary, the fourth is scheduled for Vancouver and the fifth for New Westminster.

Eastern Football Season Opens Saturday with Possible Upsets Looming on Horizon

Argos Will Have Galloping Red Storey Back When Team Meets Royals

VARSITY CRIPPLED

Queens May Pull Surprise and Beat Western Right in London

By JACK CALDER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Just to give the eastern football scene the final touch for the official opening, Big Buster Storey gallops back into action for the Dominion champion Argonauts tomorrow when they engage Ted Reeve's Montreal Royals in a big four inaugural at Toronto.

Red Storey, who ran riot against Winnipeg in the national final last year, comes back to the grid wars after a summer of lacrosse in his home town, Orillia. There isn't any question about whether he will be a difference to the Argos, who haven't been the same without him in exhibition games.

Storey will take the place in the half-line left vacant by injuries to Art West, who may not be in the line-up for three weeks. Bruce Stewart some of the kicking assignment that has been bothering Coach Lew Hayman since the departure of Nobi Tabirara, Argo star in their 1937 and '38 title drives, for his home in Hamilton.

Isbister at Hamilton

Isbister will be hooting for Hamilton's Tigers when they invade Ottawa to open the schedule with the Rough Riders, the revivified club that last season was the only side Toronto has picked to overthrow the Argos.

The intercollegiate union will also get under way tomorrow, while as usual the Ontario Union will open hostilities Monday—Thanksgiving Day. The University of Toronto goes to Montreal to meet McGill's Intercollegiate champions tomorrow while the University of Western Ontario, favored to take the O.U.A.A. title, opposes Queen's at London.

Toronto's annual Turkey Day classic, pitting the East-End Balmy Beach Club against Sarnia's long-time foe, R.C.A.F. Trenton, may draw the biggest attendance of the week-end, possibly better than 10,000. The other Ontario union game will match Montreal Westmounts against the Ottawa Rough Riders at Ottawa.

Royals Learn Defence

Ted Reeve never coached a team yet that had to "learn" how to play anyone defensively. So the Royals may have the combination to beat Hamilton's high-scoring record to break down the hipper-dipper of the Argos.

If so, the contest in Varsity Stadium may turn into something of another Argo march. Gordie Perry, Jackie Hudson, Norm Nosworthy and Herb Wilkinson will be counted on to give the Montrealers an edge in kicking that may spell the difference—if not a tight fight.

Confident that this is their year the Rough Riders will be out to make it just that from the opening whistle. Jackie Arnie McWatters and Tony Golab from Balmy Beach and Bill Murray, new spark in the backfield, highly evident in exhibition games, will be counted on by Westmounts.

New power brought to the Hamilton squad by Isbister, Nosworthy and the return of Tony Manorek from Toronto has been somewhat nullified by the retirement this week of George Ward and Bill Murray of the Tigers backfield.

Varsity Crippled

University of Toronto sends a crippled contingent to Montreal. Snapback Doug Turner's sick knee developed a hemorrhage this week and will keep him on the sidelines along with Murray Scott and Charlie Potter. Bob McNair, Redmen, who didn't lost quite all their 1938 championship team through graduation, is counted on to quite a ball game in Molson Stadium.

With one of the greatest backfield arrays in the East, Queen's could go right through the Intercollegiate schedule without a loose on paper. But Western hopes have been stilled before, and with a line-up nearly intact from 1938, Queen's can upset the dope right off the bat.

The Balmy Beach-Sarnia spectacle will lack some of the name players—it won't have Lou Smith, out Bommer Stirling kicking for Sarnia and Al Dyer, Bruce Beaton—but it will hold all the old-time fight. Both clubs have interesting groups of youngsters who would like to play two games in one day, and there's that extra incentive to have to get along without either of the key kickers, Mike Merlik and Hank Calloway, both of whom are on the injured list.

After a one-sided exhibition victory over Montreal Royals, the Westminster boys have the unenviable thing of the O.R.F.U. No one expects them to do anything but with Peterborough, which has lost some of its ablest 1938 performers.

CHIEF LITTLE BEAR

The full-blooded Indian grappler who meets Alex Piers, Boston, in the opening scrap of a three-bout professional wrestling card at the Humb Arena tonight. Besides the "redskin", a masked wrestler, Hemsley Johnson de Malch, the former Canadian amateur champion also appears.

Gehrig Makes First Appearance In the Series

By BILL BONI
Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, Oct. 6 (AP)—A broad-shouldered fellow in a Yankee baseball uniform, with a familiar No. 4 on its back, slowly climbed the three steps out of the Yankee dugout before the second game of the World Series.

From a distance, Lou Gehrig looked like a young man—robust and full of vigor. He grasped a railing to climb those steps yesterday, and it was with the gait of an old man that he shuffled the few feet to the box of Mgr. Joe McCarthy, the Yankee manager's wife.

She looked at him for a moment. Then, while her husband, Grace Gehrig, which is starred for it, many men today.

A regular visit to Stanfield's fashion of Shirts and Longs, which is starred for it, many men today.

Only Appearance in Series

It was not only at time, in two days of series play, that Gehrig appeared on the stadium field in uniform. Perhaps it was the last time he ever will. Lou's contract is up this year and, unless the Reds win two games in Cincinnati, this series will return to the stadium.

The man who did so much to help make the Yankees what they are today, the man who was the mainstay of this World Series(except for the professional and amateur cameras), who has many more pictures of Gehrig alone in the dugout than of Joe DiMaggio, or Monte Pearson, or Paul Derringer, or Buck McCormick).

Sports Roundup

By EDDIE BRIETZ
Associated Press Sports Writer

Cincinnati, Oct. 6—One of the Pittsburgh scribes summed it up nicely. He said, "The Pirates went home to their own city and want to play the Yankees." ....If you're a baseball fan in Detroit when Lefty Cochrane's Tigers were winning championships, you have a kick at baseball fever raging in this town.

That gruelling National League finish is bound to have taken a lot out of the Reds and there appeared to be no stopping the Yankees, even with Lombardi and Frey getting a hit each. Then Red Ruffing, the 250-pounder, perhaps his rookie find Junior Thompson, will be given a trial, and his ace hurlers, Derringer and Walters have failed. The series, rest today and resume the series Saturday in Cincinnati.

The Picton baseball club is well represented in the ranks of the Canadian Army. After the 1939 baseball season terminated many of the Picton ballplayers apparently decided tossing bombs in the general direction of Hitler would be just as much fun and perhaps more profitable. Hence, to hit the tantalizing curves of Stan Spink another year. Headed by Lieut. Ian Church, there is Sergeant-Major "Friday" Dalrard, Keith Evans, Randy Robins, Les Shannon and Davie Young in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, while Chris Lockyer and Al Hodgins, Sergeant in the Air Force. Church was a veteran player of great promise before he left and Lockyer, an infielder, We dabbled there is another baseball club in Canada that operated this season, to boast of having three of its 1939 playing roster now in the Canadian Army.

Belleville softball fans will be deprived of the services of Johnnie Bearden, Alf. Rowbotham and others in 1940, as was suggested in this column recently. Nothing is certain, the migration of any Belleville softballers to Kingston is definitely out. It seems a foreman at the Kingston tannery spoke to Bearden and Rowbotham regarding employment in Kingston next season. Later Rowbotham was offered a job and Bearden seemed interested until recently as he learned there wasn't much of a future in the tannery business, especially in Kingston. Now, as the softball diamond stands in Belleville, there'll be the same annual scramble for softball signatures next year, that is if the boys don't decide to migrate elsewhere, which is highly improbable. Two years ago Northern Ontario softball moguls were interested in securing Bearden's services and made him several tempting offers, but Belleville interests held Johnnie. That was the season Fred Myers and Gerald (Gus) Ethier migrated to the gold fields.

Did you know that—

George Weiss, general manager of the Yankee farm teams, has never sold one of his outstanding Newark stars for less than $40,000. Just what the Giants paid for Mickey Wilek, the sensational young second sacker, has not been announced, but it is believed to have been around $50,000.

Red Rolfe, third baseman for the Yankees, had slapped a grounder to second just before this picture was taken, but Lonnie Frey, Cincinnati second baseman, picked it up and got it, over to Frank McCormick, seen with his back to the camera, in time for a putout. Rolfe is seen just as he reached the base. Rolfe was unable to get a safety all day while Buck Newsom, pitching out two of the four secured by Cincinnati as they lost the first world series game to the Yankees 2-1. HITLER PROPOSES

"If these problems must be solved sooner or later," he said, "then it would be more sensible to tackle their solution before millions of men are first use'eanly sent to death and billions in riches are destroyed.

"As continuation of the present state of affairs in the west is unthinkable. Each day will soon demand increasing sacrifices."

He introduced the subject of a peace conference by saying that the "most important condition" for a "real revival of economic life in an outside Europe is the establishment or unconditionally guaranteed peace and of a sense of security on the part of individual nations."

Reduce Armaments Mooted

"This security," he added, "will not only be rendered possible by a final sanctioning of the European status, but above all by a reduction of armaments to a reasonable and economically tolerable level.

"The essential part of this necessary sense of security, however, is a clear definition of the legitimate use and application of certain modern armaments which can at any given moment have such devastating effect on the pulsating life of every nation and hence create a permanent sense of insecurity.

"I believe, however, that a sense of national security will not reign, in Europe until clear and binding international agreements have provided a comprehensive definition of the legitimate and illegitimate use of armaments.

"It must surely be possible to emulate the Red Cross and draw up some universally valid international regulation. It is only when this is achieved that peace can reign particularly in one generally populated continent—peace which, incidentally, would be a salvation or fear, will provide the only possible condition for real economic prosperity.

"To achieve this great end the leading statesmen of the nations will one day have to come together in order to draw up, accept and guarantee a statute on a comprehensive basis which will ensure for them all a sense of security, of calm, in short of peace.

"Unthinkable" Is Made

"Such conferences could not possibly be held without the most thorough preparation, that is, without exact elucidation of every point at issue. It is equally impossible that such a conference which is to determine the fate of this continent for many years to come could carry on its deliberations while cannons are thundering and mobilized armies are bringing pressure to bear upon it."

Referring then to the "unthinkable" state of affairs in the west, he added:

"Every both (sides (eventually) destruction will strike deeper, deeper and whatever cannot be reached by long distance will be totally destroyed from the air. This battle of destruction won't be confined to the land. No, it will reach far out over the sea.

"Today there are no longer any islands. And the national wealth of Europe will be destroyed in the form of shells, and the vigor of every nation will be sapped on the battlefields."

"One day, however, there will again be a frontier between so many and France, but instead of fortifications there will be only ruins and endless graveyards.

"Mr. Churchill and his companions may interpret these opinions of mine as weakness or cowardice if they like. I need not concern myself with what they think; I make these statements only because I owe it goes without saying that I wish to spare my own people this suffering."

Ready to Fight

"If, however, the opinions of Messrs. Churchill and followers shall prevail, this statement will have been my last. Then we shall fight. Neither force of arms nor lapse of time will conquer Germany. There never will be another November, 1918 in German history. It is impossible for the will to capitulate of our people.

"Mr. Churchill may be convinced that Great Britain will win. I do not doubt for a single moment that Germany will be victorious. Destiny will decide who is right. One thing only is certain. In the course of world history there have never been two victors, but very often two losers. This seems to me to have been the case in the last war. May those people and their leaders who are of the same mind now make their reply. And let those who consider war to be a better solution reject my outstretched hand."

As to Germany's currently close relations with Russia, he acknowledged that in the past he had declared the U.S.S.R. was "organized on principles which differ from those held in Germany."

But, he added:

"Since it became clear that (Joseph) Stalin saw nothing in these Russian-Soviet principles which should prevent him from cultivating friendly relations with states of different political creeds, National Socialist Germany sees no reason why it should adopt another criterion."

Pact of Co-operation

The new German-Russian pact, he said, was not only one "of peace, but also of constant, satisfactory co-operation for both states."

He put great stress on what he declared had been his efforts to "rid our relations with France of all trace of ill-will and to render them tolerable for both nations."

Saying that peace could be had in the name of the world's peoples, but not in the name of "Jewish agitators," he proposed the question: "Why is there war in the west?"

Poland of the Versailles treaty cannot be reconstructed, Hitler said. What Poland is to become, he declared, will be determined by Germany and Russia and by Soviet Russia alone.

Germany and Russia, he explained, are ready to make all sacrifices for the creation of a peace zone in eastern Europe.

Unofficial Version.

DNB, Nazi News Agency, sent out an "unofficial version" of the speech which read from which the following is taken:

"We have again summoned you here to give you an insight into the present and as far as possible into future. This ringing of bells signifies Germany is celebrating a great and historically unique victory.

"An army of about fifty infantry and cavalry divisions on Polish soil entered the lists against us. Destruction of our fighting forces was regarded as self-evident.

"Eight days after the outbreak of this fight the die had been cast."

The Führer then told of deeds attributed to the German army in Poland. His reference to the ringing of bells apparently commemorations throughout Germany which coincided with Reichstag speech.

Hitler began speaking at 10:00 (6:00 a.m. EST).

Of the Polish operations he said, "German armies covered resistances of unprecedented dimensions which more than fourteen months would have been necessary twenty-five years ago."

Based On Justice.

He renounced any further claim to territory with the exception of colonies but he said those claims were not made in the form of an ultimatum by force but that the demand was based on justice and reason.

He made more or less specific proposals for the erection of a peace state provided that it "not be a centre of intrigue" against Germany and Russia, and settlement of eastern Europe's minority trouble, including those regime the Jews.

His proposed conference, Hitler said, must not be held under a threat of force.

Dwelt on Politics.

During the first forty minutes he dwelt on the political side of the war, the causes, bringing out the harmony's friendship for Russia and asserting Germany was not striving for world hegemony.

During the next fifteen minutes, he discussed the war in the west, the practical revision of the Versailles Treaty, declaring he had not done was a happy event for all humanity.

He had revised the treaty bloodlessly, he said, and the reconstruction of the last phase—a reference to the Polish war.

"That the last remnant of the British army was able to hold out in Warsaw, Modlin and Hela in October is attributable solely to our cool wisdom and feeling of responsibility," Hitler said.

"I had forbidden the sacrifice of more men than absolutely necessary. Whatever I did was absolutely essential to do was done without regard for sacrifices. What, however, could be avoided was left unfinished.

Pleading Proved Vain

"An attempt to persuade responsible Polish army leadership—insofar as there was any—concerning the purposelessness, yea, the madness of their resistance especially in a city of 1,000,000 inhabitants, proved vain.

"The generalissimo who himself lived in an inglorious manner compelled his country to a resistance which at best had to lead to its destruction.

Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz was Polish commander.

"The city (Warsaw) was converted into a fortress. The entire population was called upon to participate in the fight.

"Out of pity for women and children I offered those in charge at Warsaw at least to permit the civil population to depart. I offered to have free passage. The Polish commandant did not even deign to reply.

Warsaw and heavy artillery were directed to attack only objects which were military beyond preadventure of a doubt."

Hitler recalled the history of the various additional attempts to persuade Warsaw to surrender and offered to spare Warsaw horrors out of the city.

"I finally ordered the attack to begin Sept. 26," he said. "The same defence (command) which first considered it base for its dignity even entertained more humane thoughts and very quickly changed its attitude.

"The German attack began Sept. 25-27. It (the city) capitulated. With 130,000 men, it did not dare to attack. But he said those claims were not made in the form of an ultimatum by force but that the demand was based on justice and reason.

He made more or less specific proposals for the erection of a peace state provided that it "not be a centre of intrigue" against Germany and Russia, and settlement of eastern Europe's minority trouble, including those regime the Jews.

His proposed conference, Hitler said, must not be held under a threat of force.

Dwelt on Politics.

During the first forty minutes he dwelt on the political side of the war, the causes, bringing out the harmony's friendship for Russia and asserting Germany was not striving for world hegemony.

During the next fifteen minutes, he discussed the war in the west, the practical revision of the Versailles Treaty, declaring he had done was a happy event for all humanity.

He had revised the treaty bloodlessly, he said, and the reconstruction of the last phase—a reference to the Polish war.

"That the last remnant of the British army was able to hold out in Warsaw, Modlin and Hela in October is attributable solely to our cool wisdom and feeling of responsibility," Hitler said.

"I had forbidden the sacrifice of more men than absolutely necessary. Whatever I did was absolutely essential to do was done without regard for sacrifices. What, however, could be avoided was left unfinished.

Pleading Proved Vain

"An attempt to persuade responsible Polish army leadership—insofar as there was any—concerning the purposelessness, yea, the madness of their resistance especially in a city of 1,000,000 inhabitants, proved vain.

"The generalissimo who himself lived in an inglorious manner compelled his country to a resistance which at best had to lead to its destruction.

Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz was Polish commander.

"The city (Warsaw) was converted into a fortress. The entire population was called upon to participate in the fight.

"Out of pity for women and children I offered those in charge

Resists Disappear

"The Soviet Union is the Soviet Union, Nationalist Germany is Nationalist Germany. But one thing is certain: from the moment when the two states agreed to respect each other's distinctive regime and principles, every reason for a mutually hostile attitude has disappeared."

Tracing then the past relations between Russia and Germany, Hitler asked:

"It is easy to understand that capitalist states of the west are interested today in playing off these two states and their principles against one another. For this purpose, and until it is realized, they would certainly prefer a Soviet Union as a sufficiently respectable partner for conclusion of useful military pacts."

Hitler said the western states regard it as a "perfidy" because they approaches to Russia were rejected and, instead, a rapprochement between Germany and Russia resulted.

Then he labelled the German-Soviet interests insurance "not only of vital interests insurance "not only of peace but also of constant, satisfactory co-operation for both states."

"Germany and Russia, together, he said, "will relieve one of the most acute danger spots of Europe of its threatening character and will, each in its own sphere, contribute to the welfare of peoples living there, thus aiding European peace in general."

Hitler now was speaking at a very rapid rate.

He said the German-Russian agreement was the best refutation of assertions by "insolvent journalists" that "Germany is aspiring to world domination."

He then outlined five "aims and tasks" resulting from the collapse of Poland "in so far as the German sphere of interests is concerned".

Aims Outlined.

These, he said, were:

1. Demarcation of a German border which "will do justice to the historical, ethnological and economic facts".

2. Pacification of the entire conquered territory "by establishing stable measures of peace and order".

3. A guarantee of security for Germany and its, entire sphere of interest;

4. Re-establishment and reorganization of life, trade and transport;

5. Establishment of a "new order of ethnographic conditions, that is to say, resettlement of nationalities".

Developing the fifth point, he declared this war not a problem restricted only "to the German sphere but a task with far wider implications, for the east and south of Europe is to a large extent filled with splinters of German nationality, whose existence cannot be maintained."

No More Disturbing Factor

In the very existence of such splinters, he said, "lies the reason and cause for continual international disturbances x x x it is, therefore, essential for a far-sighted ordering of the life of Europe that resettlement should be undertaken here so as to remove at least part of the material for European conflicts."

Germany and Soviet Russia will support each other in attaining this end, Hitler said, and "together will allow a definitive Polish state of centre to become a disturbing factor" for Germany or for good relations between Berlin and Moscow.

He then launched into an analysis of the "methods of Versailles" and why they "proved an utter failure."

"Since the 'resurrection of the German people' through National Socialism," he declared, "normal relations existing between Germany surrounding nations had been cleared up to a great extent.

Not Due to Demands

"The uncertainty that today is weighing down the common life of nations is not due to German demands," Hitler asserted, "but to the measures published in the so-called democracies.

"German demands themselves were formulated in a very clear and precise way.

"They have, it is true, found their fulfilment not thanks to the good will of the League of Nations but thanks to the dynamics of natural development."

The aim of the German Foreign policy as pursued by me has never been other than to guarantee the existence, that is to say, the life of the German people, to remove the injustice and nonsense contained in the treaty which not only destroyed Germany economically but has drawn victor nations into disaster as well."

Then Hitler expressed his conviction that it was "fortunate for humanity" that he had succeeded in removing the "craziest, most impossible Versailles clauses without bloodshed in all cases but Poland and without compromising foreign statesmen in the internal politics of their countries."

Summarized Efforts

Hitler summarized under 10 points his efforts to "clear up relations between ourselves and our neighbors."

He mentioned —aggression pacts with the Baltic states and Germany's endeavors to establish and consolidate friendly relations with countries such as the Netherlands, Belgium, Switzerland, Yugoslavia, Hungary and Italy.

He laid special stress on his efforts to rid our relations with France of all trace of ill will and to render them tolerable for both nations. The return of the Saar territory was one demand which I asserted as my indefeasible precondition of a French-German understanding. After France herself had found a just solution for the problem, Germany had no further claims against France.

"No such claims exist any longer and no such claim shall ever be put forward."

Not a Problem

Alsace-Lorraine, Hitler said, "does not constitute a problem which could even interfere with French-German relations," because, he said, it was of "slight" importance to Germany.

"It is impossible for a French statesman to get up and declare that I have ever made any demands on France the fulfilment of which would have been incompatible with the honor or French Interests," he maintained.

The Reichstag thundered with cheers when he added, "It is, however, true that instead of demands I have always expressed to France my desire to bury for ever our ancient enmity."

Turning to Germany's other enemy in the West, Hitler declared he had devoted "no less effort" to achieve Anglo-German friendship. He said, however, he acted contrary to British interests.

"Animosity on the part of certain British statesmen and journalists," he charged, had caused the ideas and those other honors.

Wants Understanding

Asserting that the aim of these men was "to seize the first opportunity in order to resume the fight with Germany," Hitler expressed belief that "there can only be real peace between Germany and England when the world if Germany and England come to an understanding."

"Because of this conviction," he declared, "I have often shown the way to an understanding. If in the end there was not the desired result, it was not really my fault."

MEMBERS LEAVE DUPLESSIS' GOV'T.

Declare Premier Had Placed Party Politics Before His Duty as Canadian

Montreal, Oct. 6—(CP)— Premier Duplessis' electoral campaign, launched Wednesday night on the combined issues of Provincial autonomy, conscription and Canada's war participation, left him today without the support of two of his English-speaking followers from Montreal, one of them a Cabinet Minister and the other a Member of the three-year-old Union Nationale Government.

Hon. Gilbert Layton, Minister without portfolio, and W. R. Bulloch, Member for Westmount, quit the Government less than 24 hours after the 49-year-old lawyer-Premier asserted at Three Rivers that he was not willing to the Oct. 25 elections constituted a referendum for life and survival of French-Canadians.

Layton resigned because he said the Premier had placed "party politics before what I consider is his duty as a Canadian." He said Mr. Duplessis' speech left him no other alternative than to resign.

Bulloch withdrew his support when he accepted an invitation of the Westmount Conservative Association to run as an Independent Conservative in the estimonial— St. George Riding. He said he was disappointed in the Premier, but added that his own attitude in supporting the Federal Government in prosecuting the war did not depend on Mr. Duplessis' Three Rivers speech.

The brief but amazing message from Handsome swept away almost all Mike's self- composure....

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By Vera Brown

CHAPTER VIII

In the midst of her confusion Handsome burst out of the elevator, strode into the lobby. It was like a first call entrance. He exuded well being, complete content. Pressed, shaved, not a hair out of place. And he had on a new suit, Mike was sure.

In that first glimpse of Handsome, Mike was more furious than she had been in her life. Here she'd lost sleep, been hair wild with anxiety over him, and he steps out of the elevator looking as though he did not have a care in the world.

Then Handsome caught her eye, and waved, his old salute.

Mike melted. His progress was slow across the lobby. Downey stopped him. Some tourists asked for autographs. Handsome came in a kind of triumphal procession to her counter.

"How's the Skipper?"

Maybe he'd forgotten he'd ever written it. She'd pretend she hadn't got it. But his eyes travelled to the spot where the note had been. As he opened the morning paper casually, he said:

"Did you get my note?

"Yes."

"Well?"

People came up to the counter. Mike was busy for a little.

"Larry, you've lost your mind."

"Never felt better in my life." He grinned at her. "I bet you were surprised."

"Surprised is a mild word for it."

"When can I talk to you? What about lunch?"

"You know, I don't take more than fifteen minutes."

Then, it will have to wait until dinner."

"I've got to go home."

"All right then, I'll come over and see Jimmie. I got that baseball from Ace today. I'll come on over after dinner."

Mike did not answer. "See you later, Skipper." He waved goodbye. "I'm going to a movie after I wrap myself around a steak."

Mike stared after him, torn between resentment and laughter.

"Steak, indeed! And I haven't been able to eat for 24 hours worrying about him."

Never had the subway seemed so slow as it did that night. Mike fingered her gloves impatiently. There was so much to do. The house would be in shambles and she was firm in her determination to get most of the family away before Handsome came.

When she walked into the house, everybody had eaten, and were gathered in Jimmie's room. Her mother had left her some supper on the kitchen table. Mike went in to see Jimmie, bent down and kissed him.

"You're having company tonight."

"Handsome?" Jimmie's face lighted.

"Yes."

"Great!" Her brother Jack jumped up. "I've got a picture I want him to autograph."

"I'm dying to see him!" Mary cried.

"Now look here, all of you. You two kids are going to the movies."

They wailed their voices in violent protest.

"You are, Mother, you help me. They've got to. I won't have this place all cooped up and you kids hanging all over Handsome when he comes."

"You're mean!" Jack retorted.

"You're to see him. You can come in before he leaves. But he's coming just to see Jimmie. Help me get this room fixed up, Mary."

Mrs. Shannon joined in the argument with the children.

"Do I have to leave?" asked her father.

"Of course not, dad." Mike dropped a kiss on his head. "But please just this once, Mary!"

Mike rushed out into the sitting room, began picking up papers, magazines. It was a shabby room, with shabby furniture. Mike looked at her home with impartial eyes. Dad had done the best he could. Handsome might just as well know, first as last, they were poor.

Mary coming out of her sulks joined Mike in the living room. She brought the carpet sweeper.

"You're a darling, Mary!"

"You'll keep him here until we get home?"

"Of course. Here's money for the movies." Mary gave Mike a hug. "Now go and change your dress. Fix your hair. I'll take care of this mess," she added.

Mrs. Shannon was busy in Jimmie's room and Mr. Shannon was in the kitchen with his son. Finally he went into his bedroom, came back with his hat on.

"I'm going to get out of here while all this fuss is going on."

"Dad, I didn't mean that."

"Oh, I'll be back. I want to see this Handsome fellow."

"Dad, put on your good coat."

"I'll do nothing of the kind. This is good enough for a ball player!"

A half hour later, when Mike came out in a dress, washed clean and went in to Jimmie, he looked at her approvingly.

"Gee, you're pretty!"

"That's because you love me."

"But doesn't Handsome love you, too?"

"Don't be silly, dear. Of course not."

"I'll bet he does. I'll tell him he's got to."

"If you do, he'll never come back."

Jimmie laughed: "I'll bet he will."

Mike sat down in a chair beside Jimmie: "Darling, you won't do anything to make me sorry I asked him to come, Jimmie? You won't say anything foolish that will make me unhappy?"

"Aw, no. I'll be good."

Mary took Jack off to the movies before eight o'clock. Mrs. Shannon went to change into a fresh house dress. Mike found waiting difficult. She wished now she'd not told Handsome he could come. She went into her bedroom and looked again at that note he had left for her in the morning. But Jimmie called her, and she went on in to him.

It was desperately hard, sitting there, pretending to devote all her time to Jimmie when her ear was strained to hear the doorbell. The hour dragged on.

After nine Mike had almost given up hope when the door bell rang. She rushed to push the buzzer, her hands trembling. Her mother, pretending not to notice Mike's nervousness, went into Jimmie's room.

Mike opening the door, could hear Handsome tramping up the four flights of stairs. She leaned against the doorway, waiting.

"How are you, Skipper?" Handsome called when he caught sight of her face from down the hall. He came in as casually as though he were accustomed to climbing those stairs every day.

"You're the only guest we've ever had who could climb up here and not puff!" Mike managed a laugh.

"That's because I live right:" He bent nd kissed the tip of her nose, threw his hat on the davenport.

"Mother's in with Jimmie. He's so excited."

She led the way into the stuffy bedroom. Handsome came over Jimmie's bedside.

"How's kicker?" he demanded, grinning down at the boy. "And here's that baseball."

Handsome of course, won Mrs. Shannon completely. Mike knew that would happen. Her mother was beaming obviously adoring.

"Boy, your name isn't on here!" Jimmie protested holding the precious baseball in his left hand, the hand which was not crippled.

"I'm not up to that yet. Next year, maybe, when I'm going first. I'll autograph the other side for you. By that time, you'll be well enough to come and see me play."

"Do you really think so?"

"Of course."

Jimmie started a long cross-examination, questions of every kind. Handsome settled himself beside the boy and his huge frame seemed to fill the little bedroom. Mrs. Shannon slipped out of the room after a while. And finally Mike left the two together.

"I like Mike. She's swell," Jimmie said when his sister had gone. "So do I; I think she's swell, too."

"I'm glad."

"Are you?"

"Sure! Most of the guys she knows are sissy guys."

"Then I'm not a sissy?"

"Oh, no. You can fight!" Jimmie grinned.

They got along famously. Mike came back and then Handsome told Jimmie he was leaving town with the team soon.

"We'll be on the road for six weeks this time. I'm going to miss Mike.... and you Jimmie."

"It must be fun travelling in a parlor car."

"A fellow gets kinda tired of it." Handsome smiled at Mike as he thought of the banned poker games.

"Now, Jimmie, I've got to take Mike out for a little while. She's my girl you know, and I've got to buy her some ice cream." As Jimmie's face fell, Handsome added: "We'll come back and bring some. What kind? Chocolate?"

"Chocolate!" agreed Jimmie.

Shortly Handsome and Mike found themselves out on a Brooklyn street.

"I've got to talk to you. There's a candy store on the corner."

"It's pretty dreary."

"That doesn't matter. Not when I'm with you."

They went into the little neighborhood store. A nickel piano was playing.

"I've got beers," Handsome told the waiter, "and also a quart of chocolate ice cream to be taken out."

The clerk grinned and shuffled off. The piano was playing "Sidewalks of New York."

"Well, Skipper, here it is." He pushed a package over to Mike. "Open it."

She tore the paper off the little package. Out slipped a gorgeous diamond.

"Larry! Your ring!" For the first time she noticed it.; diamond ring, of which he was so proud, was gone from his hand.

"Now put it on. Don't say one word. I want to explain things. I got it reset last night after the game."

"But I can't take this."

"Nonsense, pin it on. Doesn't it look pretty?" Handsome admired her hand with the beautiful ring.

"I've got to begin at the beginning. I think however some of the sports writers will know. I told Mr. Crisp I was going to marry you."

"Larry!"

"It's a long story. I should have had it in hand before, but I just never thought of it."

Mike laughed helplessly.

CHAPTER IX

"Now, leave that ring on. I mean it. We're going to get married. Crisp was swell about it. Though it was a good idea," said Hogan.

"I'm glad Mr. Crisp approved." Handsome did not even appear to notice the one of Mike's voice.

"Listen, Mike, I'll go great guns with you around. You're lucky for me I know. I knew the moment I saw that 'carrot top' of yours in the cloak room!"

"Redheads are lucky, for you, Larry!"

"One redhead is."

Mike gripped the edge of the table, "Larry, you must be crazy. I'm glad if I've helped you, if you think I'm your friend. But for anything else...."

"Don't be silly. I'm nuts about you. I can't do anything without you!"

"Putting aside all other considerations, Larry, I've a pretty big responsibility at home. Dad isn't well and he earns very little. I keep things going."

"What the heck! If I'm in the big dough, if I get in the World's Series coin this year, we should worry!"

"I can't let you support my family." Mike shook her head impatiently: "Besides, that's all beside the point, Larry. I couldn't marry anybody I didn't love."

That seemed to amaze Handsome: "But you love me. Of course you do! So what's the argument?"

"Larry, Larry!" It was like arguing with Jimmie. The old Jimmie. Something in her voice warned Larry.

"I've known a lot of girls in my time, and you're the first one who ever made me feel like this! Mike, there couldn't ever be anybody else. You're the skipper from now on!" He leaned across the table. "Kiss me."

"Larry, not here!"

"Come on home then...." And he pulled her after him, leaving their untasted root beers on the table.

Out into the soft May evening they hurried. Under the spell of the spring night, everything seemed different. Men and women strolled in unaccustomed leisure. Even the automobiles seemed to move more gracefully. The night was working a miracle with Mike in the city.

For a moment did Handsome doubt what Mike's answer would be. He stopped her in the shadow of a moth eaten elm to hear the corner and kissed her.

"You're wonderful!"

Mike's head was swimming. She tried to keep straight.

"I'm no good without you, Mike. Together we'll show them! You see. You're lucky for me, I tell you."

He held the hand which wore his ring in both his as they walked slowly now toward her home.

Handsome was planning light heartedly: "We'll be in the Series dough, now, I'm sure of it. That is, if you're going to keep me in line. We'll be married in the fall and we can go south before training season begins. It's great down there. You've never been south, have you?"

Mike had never been any place, only to Manhattan from Brooklyn, and to Coney Island and nearby beaches now and then, she caught her breath as she visioned what life with Handsome might be. She'd make him love her, make herself so necessary to him, that he'd never leave her. But if she failed? If he grew tired? Like a warning, Mike could see the endless pageant of women who would fawn on Handsome. They did now, even when he was only rookie pitcher. What would they do if he became truly famous?

But Mike did not tell Handsome she'd marry him. That was unnecessary. He'd known it all along.

"I'll dress you up so you'll make Dusty Lee's wife look like a back number," he boasted. "You've got the looks, you're miles and miles ahead of her!"

Mike had to laugh. He was such a boy.

"Now let's go home and tell Jimmie," he suggested.

But she didn't. Mike was firm. She was so afraid of this sudden happiness. Wait a little, Larry. Give me time. Let me get used to the idea."

Handsome grinned at her panic; Gee, everybody in town will know it in a little while. You see if they don't. Those things won't keep. Why, I'll bet a dollar I will guess. They're talking enough now."

"Promise, Larry. Just a little while. It's just...." Mike's voice trailed off. She could not tell him that she did not want to marry him this could happen.

"You'll change your mind." Mike tried to keep her voice light.

Handsome stopped still in the middle of the street and turned her around, facing him: "Look at me, Mike. Sorry."

"I know my own mind, Skipper. There is no mistake about that."

"But things change."

"We won't." His voice was so emphatic that Mike's heart leaped. They walked on in silence for a block. Then Mike got up her courage to speak:

"Larry, if you ever change your mind.... now, now that it's new.... if you ever do, and you might," then she added, "or I might...."

"Of course, you won't."

"But if you should, you'll be honest with me, Larry?"

"That's easy. For it won't happen, Sweetie. If it did, I wouldn't have to tell you. You'd know it by the way I'd act. I'm not a liar or silly talk! You know it is too."

Mike did not answer him. It was odd in all their conversations, it never occurred to either of them that Handsome might change mind, that he might be just another flash in the pan, for the national game.

"Fame does queer things to people, Larry."

"It won't to me."

"But, my sweet, it isn't you. It's other people. They do things to you."

"Honey, I've been something of a hero all my life. Even in grade school. I could always play ball, be never had to study. I'm not phenomenal, or my algebra. There was always some guy to do it for me. I'm not a fool, Mike. I know I'm lucky. I'm glad, chuck strong as an ox. Give me another kiss. You're not the kind of a girl who'll be a jealous wife."

They had reached the shabby apartment building Mike called home. Going up the second flight of stairs, Handsome picked up Mike in his arms and carried her.

"Put me down! Somebody will see us."

"Stop kicking, Skipper! You weigh practically nothing."

At the door of their apartment Handsome set her down and kissed the tip of her head.

"Now, forward march!"

Inside they found Jimmie waiting impatiently for them. "I thought you weren't ever coming back," he said as Mike smoothed his pillows, bent to kiss him.

(To Be Continued)

"Stop kicking, Skipper!" soothed the husky Handsome as he carried the embarrassed Mike upstairs....

Gas-masked men and women are pictured waiting to pass through a gas chamber during a big demonstration of "passive defence" in Bucharest, Rumania. This demonstration was organized especially for officers of the air force and navy, and their families, all of whom are obliged to have at least 24 hours of air raid precaution training. Now that the Rumanian bear has started to prowl in eastern Europe, Rumania is being extra cautious.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 6 (AP)—Buyers ran the prices of "war" shares up fractions to around 4 points in the stock market today but the splurge soon faded and many gains dwindled by as much as half.

Traders listened to Reichs Fuehrer Hitler's peace proposals at Berlin and many interpreted them as likely to prove unacceptable to the Allies. In consequence they bid up steels, aircraft, chemicals, rubber specialities and rails.

Running against the main trend for small losses in the Canadian group were Dupont, McIntyre Porcupine, Distillers and Lake Shore. G.P.R. inched forward, Dominion Bond around a full point in the bond market.

Stocks participating in the upsurge included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Sperry, Dupont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Air Reduction, Great Northern, Pennsylvania Railroad, Pullman, American Can and Foundry, International Harvester and Caterpillar.

TOBONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 6—(CP)—Volume tapered off on Toronto Exchange today in early afternoon action. Most leaders held their gains.

The early rise evidently translated traders' opinions that the Hitler speech did not "close doors" as early peace and the so-called war stocks shot ahead. National Steel Car led with a 2-point advance to a new high for the year. Other steels followed with lesser gains.

Wright Hargreaves led gold gainers with a minor advance of 7.30. Sigma lost 10 to 6.25. Upper Canada, listed on the Exchange for the first time today, sold around 55. Kerr Addison lost a few cents.

Coast Copper, Sherritt Gordon and Pend Oreille were best of the strong base metals. Smelters and Nickel both showed small advances.

PARTRIDGE REPORTED FAIRLY NUMEROUS

Partridge are numerous through the northern townships of Hastings County this fall, and district hunters who take to the woods in search of the birds during the first shooting period from October 9 to 14th, should find hunting good, according to Charles McCaw, Millbridge district resident, a visitor in the city today.

Due to the closed seasons of the past few years, the birds have shown a distinct gain in numbers and appear less wary and shy than formerly when hunted annually.

The second open season on partridge in lower Ontario will run from November 6 to 11th.

ITALY HOPEFUL

Rome, Oct. 6—(AP)—Italy was hopeful but not optimistic today that Adolf Hitler's proposal for an all-inclusive peace conference might open the way to peace.

Premier Mussolini was understood to have been familiar with the text before it was delivered. Stefani News Agency began to distribute the speech to newspapers before Hitler was half way through.

Prices Unchanged

Toronto, Oct. 6.—No price changes occurred in local produce lines at Toronto yesterday, although dull trading marked butter.

The egg market continued firm, with fresh receipts clearing well and no accumulation evident. Best demand was reported in the two top grades.

Despite the fact that buying interest was practically absent from the market, butter prices held steady. Holders appeared content to wait until demand revived, and offerings did not prove burdensome to dealers.

Agricultural Outlook Said to be Good

Livestock generally in Hastings and Prince Edward County is in good condition, and pastures recently have shown better quality to assist in fall breeding, it is stated in the current crop report of the Ontario Department of Agriculture for this district.

In Hastings County some late potato blight is reported, though questionings of growers of the district this week revealed that this potato ailment is not serious. Recent wet weather is credited a contributory cause.

Apple harvesting is well under way through Prince Edward County, and about half of the present season's crop has been picked. McIntosh apples have predominated in shipments being received at cold storage warehouses.

A scarcity of feeder cattle is noted in some sections through the western part of the Province, and the recent higher prices of cattle have slowed down purchases, it is reported.

Poultry is going to market fairly steadily in the eastern counties, and the Brockville pool has been a busy one, according to the report.

TRUCK SIDESWIPED BY PASSING CAR

After passing three large transport, an automobile driven by Leonard A. O'Donnell, Toronto, sideswiped an oncoming truck one mile west of Simcoeonville on Highway No. 2 early last evening. O'Donnell escaped with minor injuries but his motor car was a complete wreck. The truck was driven easterly by Albert McGee of Napanee. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine investigated and later reported that charges of careless driving would be preferred against O'Donnell. "The automobile was practically demolished as the whole left side was damaged although beyond repair," revealed the investigating officer.

War Veteran Lawyer Intercedes in Court

The exemplification of comradeship for a war buddy in distress was clearly demonstrated in today's local police court, held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., when Charles A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., voluntarily came to the assistance of a fellow war veteran who found himself in minor difficulty after having imbibed freely but not well last night.

"I never saw this man before, but I see he is a war veteran and in difficulty," interrupted Mr. Cameron when David Mowbery, Weston, was charged with intoxication.

"However, I spoke to him and he assures me he was never in trouble before and merely slipped a little. He can pay the fine if given time to return home," assured Mr. Cameron, who also is a veteran of the last war.

Mowbery was removed from a Canadian National passenger train as it passed through Belleville early today. He was intoxicated and disturbing the passengers, police stated. The conventional fine that is assessed all inebriates was levied in this case, but Mowbery was given time to return home and forward the fine, as suggested by his war buddy, Mr. Cameron.

Bingo for Chickens Proves Quite Popular

Bingo for chickens under the sponsorship of the Kiwanis Club proved most popular entertainment in the old A. & P. premises on Front Street last night. One pair of dressed fowl, all bloodtested, were given to the respective winners at the Kiwanis bingo.

The chickens were obtained through the Agricultural Committee of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville, and its dummies during the winter," was the advice given by the department.

Colebrook Resident Celebrates His 100th Birthday

One of the district's oldest residents, Henry Purcell of Colebrook, today is observing the 100th anniversary of his birth, the resident of many congratulatory and good-will messages from his friends.

Mr. Purcell still takes an active interest in affairs of his homestead and was about his daily duties as usual this week. He was looking forward to today's birthday party which will be featured by a cake decorated with 100 candles.

He was born in Camden East in 1839, and joined the Orange Lodge at Tweed in 1857. Since then he had not missed a Twelfth of July, "and" in eighty-two years, it is his proud boast.

PUBLIC WARNED NOT TO BURN LEAVES AND RUBBISH ON STREETS

First bon-fires of fall will soon be lighted on residential streets of the city and again the annual warning is given by the city department of public works that city bylaws prohibit the burning of leaves or other rakings on permanent or treated pavements. "Rake the leaves onto the lawn to serve as humus during the winter," was the advice given by the department.

LITHUANIA

Similar concessions from Estonia have given Russia the right to establish naval bases on one mainland port and on two islands, along with air bases and garrisons for 25,000 soldiers in that country.

May Allow Additional Ports

Unformed sources in Helsingfors, Finland, said two additional Estonian ports might be allowed Russia for conversion into naval bases.

Reports Durg also said that the Lithuanian Foreign Minister, Juozas Urbsys, would fly to Moscow today to complete Russo-Lithuanian discussions.)

Observers speculated whether the Soviet, flushed with its diplomatic successes while Europe's other major powers were at war, would summon Finland, Rumania or Afghanistan after Lithuania. All lie along the line of Russia's progress south to the northeast and southeast.

The Soviet press did not allude to it but diplomatic circles here were convinced that the Russian advances into the Baltic area were designed to protect her, from possible attack from Germany.

SOVIET "MYSTERY MEN" IN UNITED STATES

These two Russian "mystery men" were speeded through New York customs under diplomatic immunity, as the Italian liner Vulcania landed from Genoa. They refused to talk to newspapermen. They were described on the passenger lists as Commissars Philip Razonoff, LEFT, and Valery Agoforoff.

Shown here is the long line of customers outside one of the bleacher entrances to Yankee Stadium, waiting to pay their $1.10 on the line and grab the best seat they could before the start of the first world series game between the Yankees and the Cincinnati Reds. As usual, some of the fans at the head of the line had waited all night for their preferred position. This picture was transmitted from New York by Phonephoto.

Chloe's Career

By Marian Phillips Johnson

"NOW don't start bewitching me," warned Jerry Wood. "I don't believe in love at first sight, you know."

Chloe Carter's eyes, blue as the Florida sky, twinkled understandingly and her generous young mouth smiled.

"Neither do I," she agreed. But she liked the bristling charm of his smile, the mischievous gleam in his gray eyes and his smooth black hair.

"And marriage," proclaimed Jerry loftily, "is the grave of ambition."

"Don't I know it!" questioned Chloe, whose dancing feet had carried her into a recent Broadway success and who was now resting up for an even greater role in Hollywood. "Brilliant young playwright and dancer dub marriage a menace," she headlined.

And grinned.

All this happened the first time they met.

They began with a spin down Biscayne Bay in a sea sled. And during the days that followed they tried the autogiro, surf-bathing, and splashing sun and loafing at the hotel pool.

And then Chloe's mother, discovering Jerry, delivered warnings and admonitions. And the newspapers began publishing reports about the lovely Miss Chloe Carter and the brilliant Mr. Jerome Wood and speculating as to a possible love affair between them.

Mr. Jerome Wood stayed away from Chloe all the next day.

The following morning the papers proclaimed: "Mr. Wood and I are great friends," says Miss Carter, "but I shall never marry. I have my career to think of."

Mr. Jerome Wood drew a deep breath of relief and made ah possible haste to resume friendly relations with Chloe. The jolly times were resumed.

One night they danced for a long time. And then they wandered out through the hotel gardens and sat in the moonlight. Quite suddenly and unexpectedly they were in each other's arms.

After long minutes of silence, "I guess," mused Chloe glumly, "this vacation has made me forget things a little."

"Yes," agreed Jerry quickly, "that's it, of course. It's the climate, doggone it. I'll hit it off for the Anglers' Club tomorrow. I'll get one of those six hundred pound fish you hear about and have it mounted. You can take it to Hollywood with you—to remind you of another big fish."

Chloe and Jessie Carter went to Hollwood and Chloe began dancing in earnest with Noel Fane who was to be her partner in her first picture. The newspapers woke up and remarked that the glorious Miss Carter seemed more interested in Mr. Fane than seemed necessary for the success of the picture and the studio publicity department took sentimental pictures of Chloe and Noel and spread them everywhere.

"The Florida newspapers published a photograph of Mr. Jerome Wood and a Miss Susan Belden on somebody's yacht. And Jerry was smiling.

One night Chloe's telephone rang. She reached for it listlessly. "Hello," she moaned.

"Hello," said Jerry.

"Oh," gasped Chloe. "Did you get that fish?"

"No fish," lamented Jerry. "Just chowder parties and tournaments and drinks. Chloe—there isn't much propinquity about a telephone."

"Why, no," agreed Chloe, astonished. "There isn't."

"Suppose I come out and talk it over."

"Oh," cried Chloe, "do!"

He came by plane. "What about this Noel Fane?" he demanded abruptly. "Chloe, tell me."

Chloe's laughter was lightly tinged with scorn. "Newspaper stories," she scoffed. "You know how they are."

"Do I?" cried Jerry. "Chloe, did you see that grinning ore of Susanne and me?"

"Yes," nodded Chloe, with a bright little light in the blue of her eyes. "I saw it."

"That's what I thought," said Jerry. "Chloe, honey, I don't believe in love at first sight, and marriage is the grave of ambition, and I've got to do a new play and when I do a play I'm impossible. I growl and snap at people. Sometimes I shout. But somehow right now I can't think of anything but you. I can't write a single word!"

"I know!" nodded Chloe, "I've vowed I'd never marry but I'm mad about you, Jerry. So what?"

"So we'll get married," decided Jerry suddenly. "I'll shut myself in a cave when I write and only come out when I smile. Chloe, what do you say?"

"Yes," murmured Chloe happily, "even if I have to make you my career!"

GERMAN TROOPS BEING REPLACED BY YOUNGER MEN

French Army "Digs in" on Muddy Saarland Front in Preparation for Offensive

NIGHT IS CALM

Paris, Oct. 6 (AP)—French troops dug in on the muddy Saarland front today in preparation against any German offensive while French premier conferred with Commander-in-Chief Gamelin and other leaders behind the lines.

French military circles reported large German troop movements. Older German soldiers were reported rapidly being replaced by younger campaigners from the German armies that invaded Poland.

Last night was calm, however. The war ministry communique said only patrols were active in the sector southwest of Saarbrucken.

Police in Paris and in other cities tore pictures of Lenin and Stalin from news kiosks, confiscated and searched for Adrian Ramette, who, with Parfonnet Bonte, wrote to Edouard Herriot, president of the Chamber of Deputies, demanding a parliamentary session to consider peace.

Orders were issued for the arrest of Ramette and Bonte, both Communist members of the Chamber of Deputies, but Ramette had fled. Rumors ran French cafes of the secretary general of the Workers' and Peasants' Party organized when the Communists party was banned.

Police said searchers of both men's homes had disclosed evidence to justify charges of "being in communication with a foreign power."

The ousting of Communist mayors and municipal councillors was confirmed with 67 removed in the Paris region and a total of 317 soon to be replaced elsewhere by appointees named by district police prefects.

The Socialist leader Leon Blum, former Premier Leon Blum, adopted a vacillating attitude toward the Communists for their condemnation of the Russian "betrayal" and denouncing Soviet diplomacy.

Several deputies of the outlawed Communist Party, however, already had resigned after the signing of the German-Russian friendship pact. Raids on homes of others, suspected of intrigue with the enemy of the state, continued. If found guilty they may be liable to fines of from 100 to 500 francs ($2.29 to $11.45) and imprisonment of from one to five years.

Heavy rains bogged military operations in the French sector to protect their left flank along the Luxembourg border and kept an alert watch at the other end of the line, near Switzerland.

Germany reported concentrated in the Black Forest near Switzerland, however.

French sources said they had taken precautions against the possibility of an attempted German invasion through neutral countries in the north.

The press placed Germany as isolated as a result of her pact with Russia. It said Italy, Japan and Spain were standing aloof in the belief that Russia merely was out to gain everything possible while Germany was preoccupied with war in the west.

SAYS BRITAIN SHIPS PLANES, TANKS TO TURKS

Informed Source in London Says Shipments Have Been Made During Past Two Weeks

TURKISH MISSION

By PIERRE MAILLAUD
(Havas Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 6 (CP Havas)—Great Britain has been shipping planes, tanks, big guns and other war materials to Turkey during the last two weeks, a well-informed source here disclosed.

The Turkish military mission which arrived here two days ago is engaged in active talks with British officials, but completion of its task is awaiting result of the parallel diplomatic conversations between Ankara, London, Paris and Moscow, on the problem of a new Turkish-Soviet agreement.

Russia, it was reliably reported here, is pressing that Turkey consult with her before any action is taken with the Anglo-French-Turkish accord promising aid to Rumania and Greece if they are attacked.

Certain advantages now are said to be seen by Britain and France both in a Moscow-Ankara accord, but it has not yet been decided whether granting Russian demands would be worth these advantages.

In any event, Britain is confident, a qualified source said, that Turkey will loyally execute her understandings in the pact with Great Britain and France and therefore the eventual Balkan line-up will be.

ALLIES WILL STUDY

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 6 (CP Cable)—Adolf Hitler's peace terms as outlined in today's Reichstag speech will be carefully and unhurriedly examined by the British government in conjunction with France and Poland, but observers here gave them an extremely remote chance of being accepted.

On the surface the German proposals might look attractive, but they prompted these questions:

Three Questions.

1.What guarantee other than Hitler's word—which is absolutely unacceptable in the light of past agreements in view of his record of broken promises—is there that the peace terms would be observed?

2. It is possible to suppose that Britain and France would agree to Germany and Russia remodelling a large part of the Polish State between themselves when the allies went to war because of their pledged word to Poland to protect her frontiers against an aggressor?

3. Britain and France went to war to smash Hitlerism in all that implies from force. Would the peace terms remove the constant threat of Hitlerism to the peace and security of Europe? Is there in the terms a hint that Hitler remains as leader of the German state now that Poland's independent secured there will be no more outbreaks of aggression, no more atrocities like those of the recent shattering armed diplomacy?

No Public Official Reaction.

There was no immediate official reaction to the Reichstag speech. There may not be for a few days and Prime Minister Chamberlain always has promised to give unhurried, careful consideration to any peace plan submitted to Britain. There is no doubt he will consult the French and Polish governments before making an official reply.

Parliament will reassemble Monday, Nov. 20. Tuesday it would be his weekly war review Tuesday and it is possible Chamberlain then his first public reference to Hitler's proposals.

The British people without doubt would refuse to hand over any colonies to Germany, which Germany now remained his one territorial claim. As a matter of fact the British people probably would not be interested about colonies at all, preferring to back Premier Hitler. Even the former Premier Leon Blum, adopted a vacillating attitude toward the Communists for their condemnation of the Russian "betrayal" and denouncing Soviet diplomacy.

Several deputies of the outlawed Communist Party already had resigned after the signing of the German-Russian friendship pact. Raids on homes of others, suspected of intrigue with the enemy of the state, continued. If found guilty they may be liable to fines of from 100 to 500 francs ($2.29 to $11.45) and imprisonment of from one to five years.

Heavy rains bogged military operations in the French sector to protect their left flank along the Luxembourg border and kept an alert watch at the other end of the line, near Switzerland.

Germany reported concentrated in the Black Forest near Switzerland, however.

French sources said they had taken precautions against the possibility of an attempted German invasion through neutral countries in the north.

The press placed Germany as isolated as a result of her pact with Russia. It said Italy, Japan and Spain were standing aloof in the belief that Russia merely was out to gain everything possible while Germany was preoccupied with war in the west.

REV. DR. E. N. BAKER

hall, Port Hope, Mount Forest, Euclid Avenue Church, Toronto, Orauford, Chatham, Bridge Street Church, Belleville, Broadway Tabernacle, Toronto and Sault Ste. Marie, Ont. In all his pastorates Dr. Baker was successful in his ministry but was popular and esteemed highly by the people for his sincerity, steadfastness of purpose and ability. His personality was pleasing personality attracted and held many friends wherever.

Assumed Principalship in 1913

In the year 1913 Dr. Baker returned to Belleville from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., to assume the principalship of Albert College, succession to the late Rev. Dr. W. P. Reid and he held this important position most efficiently until the year 1926 when he retired.

During his regime Dr. Baker always visualized a new and greater Albert College and eventually he was successful in getting under way the commencement of the stupendous allotment of this object.

Work his executive ability manifested itself to a remarkable degree and his efforts were crowned with success. Splendid and stately modern college buildings of Collegiate Gothic architecture which are an ornament to the city and a credit to the United Church, are the result largely of the great energy he put into the undertaking and his ability to inspire his co-workers in the project. Albert College owes much to Dr. Baker and his outstanding services, his loyalty and devotion and within the walls of that seat of learning for many years to come his name will be revered.

Dr. Baker was married twice; his first wife, whom he married in the year 1881 was Miss Mary Ann Eaton, Ont., and of this union there survive him four sons, Mr. Harold Baker of Houston, Texas; Dr. Herbert W. Baker of Woodstock, Ont.; Charles Baker Sherbrooke, Que.; Dr. Fred Baker of Detroit, Mich.; three daughters, Mrs. Gladys Baker, now the wife of the Rev. E. J. Bunt, Methodist minister and Dean of Kwansie Gakuin, Kobe, Japan.

The death of the year 1904 Dr. Baker married Miss Jennie Axford, Toronto, and of this union one daughter, Mrs. Douglas Campbell, survives him.

For some years prior to her marriage Mrs. Baker occupied a most efficiently the position of Professor of Home Science, St. Thomas, Ont.

Friend of All

In this city Dr. Baker will be missed for a long time to come; his unassuming figure will be seen more passing along the streets with a greeting for all and a hearty handclasp for many. Young and old knew and he occupied a high place in their esteem. In public affairs he took a prominent part and his counsel to worthy causes. Fraternally he was a member of Trinity Lodge, A. F. & A. M. No. 283 and served as Master in the year 1911. He was a popular member of the Rotary Club. In Bridge Street United Church, Bridge St. E. the pastor during the years 1892 to 1895 his absence at the services and social gatherings will create a considerable void in the hearts of all. He was truly a good man and the words of the psalmist, "Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, . . . I will fear no evil; for thou art with me; Thy rod and Thy staff comfort me" seem to apply most appropriately to him and his passing to the great beyond. Along his pathway through life he left an influence for good; he was a friend to many when friendship was much needed; he had words of encouragement for those who were in trouble and discouragement, and he visited and cheered the sick; he was truly a God-fearing man and in this city and throughout many parts of Canada there will be ushered by those who knew him well, the brief prayer, "God Rest his Soul." May his spirit find in future state such as is so beautifully expressed in Robert Browning Whittier in the lines:

"Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease,
And flows forever through heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There from the music round about me stealing
I fain would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long."

INDIANS WERE POOR ARCHERS

Bridgeport, Conn., Oct. 6 (AP)—Tales about the prowess of the North American Indian with the bow and arrow are "the bunk" says Henry W. Schreiber, promotion manager of Remington Arms. Schreiber told a Lions Club gathering the Indian was a poor archer and rarely made a shot at distances greater than 10 yards.

Excerpts From Address Given By Adolf Hitler to Reichstag

Berlin, Oct. 6—(AP)—Excerpts from Adolf Hitler's speech to the Reichstag today follow:

"Now, in the last few days our towns and villages have been decorated with flags and wreaths in honor of Reich. Bells are ringing to celebrate a great victory. . . . A state of no less than 35,000,000 inhabitants has arms against us. x x x

"Poland's army was the major part of the Polish army was either scattered, captured or surrounded. . . .

"Thus, the last remnants of the Polish army were able to hold out in Warsaw, Modlin and on Hela peninsula, only for a few days due to their prowess in arms, but only to our our overwhelming and our sense of responsibility.

"I forbade the sacrifice of more German blood than was absolutely necessary. x x x"

"The Polish soldiers as individuals fought bravely in many occasions, but their officers, beginning with the command, can only be described as irresponsible and unscientious and inefficient.

"There are many bitter statements with the object of forestalling the intervention of historical legends for the legend is to be woven around why who took part in this campaign will be branded as criminals and common soldiers who added yet another burden to their immortal glorious record."

"The total losses for the army, navy and air force, including officers, are 10,572 killed, 30,322 missing, 322 wounded; 3,404 missing.

"Those figures for the missing a certain number who fell into Polish hands will probably be found to have been killed in action and not taken prisoner.

"The German forces have in calm preparedness taken up positions in the West and are ready for attack. Our submarines are fighting in a heroic manner and the memory of our heroes of the last war."

"Versailles was the cradle of a Polish State which lived and emerged from the misfortune of Versailles in utter disregard of almost 500 years of experience, a state was constructed at Versailles which, according to its whole nature, was sooner or later bound to become the cause of a most serious crisis.

"A state can be destroy to say, now ranks among our fiercest enemies. At that time clearly foresaw all this. I mean Lloyd George. At that time he expressed apprehension that in that state an accumulation of conditions was being created which must lead to conflicts which sooner or later might lead to great European complications."

"When Polish Government

proceeded gradually to subjugate Danzig I endeavored, by means of negotiations, to find a way to a solution whereby Danzig in accordance with its wishes, its population could be nationally and politically united with Germany without destroying Polish interests and so-called rights of Poland.

"Today I can express sincere that these were ultimative demands, that ultimation is a lie."

"Minorities living in that country (Poland) had to suffer what amounted to a reign of terror. Germans with hundreds of years of inhabitants are now left without the slightest trace of any rights. Killed. In others women were violated and murdered, girls and children outraged and killed.

"For more than four years I fought in the Great War on the Western Front, but such things did not happen to either side."

"No other course remained than to show them their mistake by striking back with the weapons which they themselves had used for years.

"If this step on Germany's part has resulted in a community of interests with Russia, that is due not only to the similarity of the problems affecting the two states but also to that of the conclusions which we have drawn from our own experience with regard to their future relationship."

Hitler It became clear that Stalin found nothing in the Russian State friendship which was hostile to Germany. Him from cultivating friendly relations with States of a different political system. Socialist Germany sees no reason why she should adopt another criterion. . . .

"Long periods in the history of both nations have shown that the inhabitants of Russia and the German states in Europe were never happier than when they lived in friendship with each other."

"It is easy to understand that Germany and the States of the West are interested today in shaping in these two States and their principles and their ends. . . .

"Germany and Russia together will relieve one of the most acute danger spots in Europe of its threatening character. Each State in each in its own sphere, contribute to the restoration of the economic life of the whole of Europe. It actually considered it one of my life aims to improve the two peoples.

"The German nation has gladly followed my lead in this respect. I see my endeavors crowned with success but it is only because of an animosity on the part of the German people against Jews and journalists, which has deeply affected me personally.

"I believe even today that there can be no lasting peace in Europe and throughout the world if Germany and Russia do not come to an understanding. If in the end there was not the desired result, it was not my fault.

"Before I came into power Central Europe was sinking into the hopeless chaos of Bolshevism. Bolshevism have wiped out that crime does not amount to a breach of my word, but to me it is sacrilege; I am proud of it as my deed before history."

"I read in certain newspapers that there are people who believe that a peaceful settlement of relations between Germany on the one hand and France and England on the other was doomed to failure, and that a new appeal to arms would inevitably proved that I, filled with appreciation of responsibility, would not collapse and that I only made such a proposal out of cowardice, or from a sense of weakness.

"When, irrespective of all this, I have expressed my ideas on this problem, I am prepared to appear in the eyes of many people as a fool and even as a finished man. My prestige is sufficient for me to allow myself such an attitude.

"Why should this war in the west be fought? For restoration of Poland? Poland of the Versailles treaty will never rise again.

"I have also realized that it would be senseless to annihilate millions of men and then destroy property worth millions in order to reconstruct a state which at its very birth was created an abortion by all those not of Polish extraction.

"What other reason exists? Has Britain legal claims? Germany and England which might threaten the British Empire or endanger its existence?"

"But if this war is really to be waged only in order to give Germany a new regime, that is to say, in order to destroy the present Reich, then I am ready to create a new Treaty of Versailles, then Germany will be completely pacified in vain, for neither will the German people nor the world accept a second Treaty of Versailles before it. And even should this come to pass, in the course of even eight years of war, then this second Treaty of Versailles would become the sources of fresh conflicts for the future.

"In any event, a settlement of this world war cannot be carried out without consideration of the vital interests of its most powerful nations. Germany is ready to enter, at lapse of from five to ten years, and in any way to enter into an attempt made twenty years ago which is now ripe for it, but in the last we cannot settle any problems except perhaps the ruined finances of the countries, economic disasters, newspaper owners and other profiteers from the war.

"In my opinion by far the most important task is the solution of the perfectly clear.

"As far as Germany is concerned the Reich government is ready to take part in the international exposition of the aims of its foreign policy."

"I can begin by stating that the Treaty of Versailles is now regarded by them as obsolete; the whole German people is ready for any sacrifice, reason for any further revision of the Treaty, especially as the demand for adequate colonial possessions justly due to the Reich, namely in the first instance for the return of German colonies.

"This demand for colonies is not based on any imperialistic historical claim to German colonies, but above all in her elementary right as a share in the world's sources of raw materials. This demand for colonies has already been recognized by force but a demand based on international law and sane economic principles."

"The most important condition, however, for the solution of the economic life in and outside of Europe is the establishment of an unconditional sense of security and of a sense of security on the part of the European nations.

"This security will not only be rendered possible by the final assertion of the Treaty of Versailles but above all by the reduction of armaments to a reasonable and economically tolerable level."

"I believe that a sense of national security will not return to Europe only by declarations of honor, but practical agreements have provided a comprehensible basis which is legitimate and illegitimate use of armaments. . . .

"To achieve this great end, the leading statesmen of the continent will one day have to come together and they must find a way which guarantees a statute on a comprehensive basis which will ensure for them all a sense of security, of calm, in short, of peace."

"It is impossible that such a conference should fail to determine the fate of this continent for many years to come, could carry on its deliberations during years of thundering or mobilized armies are marching against each other in vain.

"One day, however, there will again be a frontier between Germany and Poland. Millions of flourishing towns there will be ruins and endless graveyards.

"Then Germany and his companions may interpret these opinions that they held today as an outcast on change.

"The professor, booted as Carlo Zarcone, was seized by detectives last night when Mesach was handed him money packages supposedly containing $4,000 at a prearranged meeting place.

Police set the trap after Meads had been released, and when he seized him into their car at pistol point early yesterday.

Nazis Swallowed Up in Bolshevism in Nine Months, German Predicts

In Hitler's Hatred of British Nazi Leaders Are Quoted As Saying He Turned Germany Over to Soviets, Which She Will Never Escape Again

By GERAUD JOUVE
Havas Staff Writer

Amsterdam, Oct. 6 (C.P.-Havas)—Within ten months the Nazi regime in Germany must be swallowed up in Bolshevism, a German industrialist recently arrived from the Reich declared here today.

"The Bolshevization of the Third Reich has begun and is operating at nightmare speed," he claimed.

Great nervousness is reported evident among German industrial leaders. Communistic tendencies in Nazism, always latent, find

"And if they further demand the return of their colonial possessions which formerly were their property, which they had not taken away from them but which they bought or war but honestly acquired by purchase, exchange and treaties. Moreover in all my demands, I have always kept within the limitations by way of negotiation". . . .

"It cannot be denied that since the German people have found its authentic leader and its unique capitulation, the relation existing between Germany and other countries and nations has been cleared up to a great extent.

"The uncertainty that today is weighing down the common life of nations is due to the fact that many hands, but to the malignant intentions pursued in the so-called democracies."

"Germany has concluded non-aggression pacts with the Baltic states. Their interests are also in an exclusively economic nature."

"Germany has taken no steps in regard to the Scandinavian states nor handed over to Denmark under the terms of the Treaty of Versailles. We have claimed no revision."

"Holland: The new Reich has endeavoured to continue the traditional friendship with Holland. . . . Belgium: The Reich has put forward no claim to Belgium in any way have been regarded as a threat to Belgium.

"Switzerland: Germany adopted the same attitude toward Switzerland."

"My chief endeavour has been to rid our relations with French of a trace of ill will and render them more friendly. . . . The pact, as set forth with the utmost clarity necessary duties in this domain and have never gone back on that declaration. Return of the Saar territory and of Alsace-Lorraine regarded as an indispensable premise for a definitive settlement of Franco-German problem standings . . .

"After France herself had found a solution of this problem, Germany had no further claims against France. Her frontiers are now stronger and no such claim shall ever be put forward".

"Among the German people, who have made it possible to eradicate the idea of everlasting enmity and conclude the pact with France, there is a great achievements of the French nation and for its history. Every German soldier has the greatest respect for the feats of the French army. I consider it the task, effort to the achievement of a Franco-German reconciliation and Anglo-German understanding, that, here, I am that, of an Anglo-German friendship.

"At no time and in no place have we ever acted against the British interests. Unfortunately I have only too often been forced to publicly criticize Britain's British interference in German affairs, even in cases where British statesmen were of the opinion that I actually considered it one of my life aims to improve the two peoples.

London, Oct. 6.—(CP Cable)—Vincent Massey, Canadian High Commissioner in London, and Mrs. Massey as trustees of the Massey Foundation, have offered to the Canadian Government an offer to use the foundation to equip and maintain a convalescent hospital for the use of members of the Canadian Expeditionary force.

Arrangements already have been made in England for the building of a large country house for the proposed hospital.

No announcement was made of the amount the offer involved.

Under an order issued by Justice W. T. Kelly in Toronto Wednesday $1,000,000 will be given. The order was issued following an application by the Crown for the ruling as to whether such a contribution was permissible under the grant conditions of the Foundation.

The Massey Foundation already has contributed $12,000,000 to charities.

AIR VETERANS AS TRADESMEN

National Defence Seeks Ex-Airmen With View to Employment in R.C.A.F.

Ottawa, Oct. 6 (CP)—Veterans of the air forces are being sought by the Department of National Defence for Air, it was announced, to enlist in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

While the settled policy of the National Defence Department is to enlist only young men for service in the Royal Canadian air service gunners, the experience of men who saw service in the first Great War and also will be useful to the force where their services can be obtained.

It was announced today that the R.C.A.F. is trying to compile a census of ex-ratings of the Royal Naval Air Service and ex-airmen of the Royal Flying Corps and Royal Air Force and the Royal Canadian Air Force in order to ascertain the possibility of their employment as tradesmen.

Registration Offices

Such men are asked to report or write to any local officer of the employment service of Canada. These offices are being supplied with forms for the ex-air force men to fill out, giving particulars of their qualifications for any employment in which they have been engaged since their discharge.

For this purpose the men are asked to communicate with the General Superintendent, Employment Service of Canada at Ottawa, Toronto, Regina, Winnipeg, Toronto or Montreal.

Slightly eight years on the ground are required by the Air Force to keep one man in the air. With the expansion of the Royal Canadian Air Force being projected as one of Canada's major war efforts the need has arisen for additional ground men, particularly those having experience.

FINE AND TERM FOR REMARKS

Austro-Hungarian Told He Would Have Been Executed for Similar Words

London, Ont., Oct. 6.—(CP)— A plea that he had been drinking when he made remarks he began disparaging British Government leaders in the presence of other labourers working on the Welland Ship Canal, was entered by William Phillips, 41, of Cardoc Township, from counsel for the Defence of Canada Act today. He was fined $400 and costs or three months in the Ontario Reformatory.

If the fine is not paid, Phillips must serve a further three months. He is a native of what formerly was Austro-Hungary.

"This man has enjoyed the hospitality of Canada for twenty years," said Crown Attorney Norman Newton, "and people in the area where he lives and is employed living in constant fear of persecution and threats. He used similar language in his homeland he would be executed by a firing squad."

"I believe you made remarks to prejudice recruiting," said Magistrate Hyndman. "I have no sympathy for traitors like you."

TOM COCHENOUR HORSEMAN, DIES

Owner and Breeder but Never Realized Ambition to Win King's Plate

Dundas, Ont., Oct. 7.—(CP)—Known throughout Ontario for his efforts to improve the breed of Canadian horses, Thomas A. Cochenour, 72, died at his home here yesterday after a long illness.

Owner and breeder of many famous race horses, one of his ambitions never realized was to win the King's plate at Toronto.

He was a native of Bulkeley Corners near the village of nearby Greenville. In his youth he went to Costa Rica in Central America to work for a railway company. He later ventured into farming and on his retirement in 1937 was a partner with his brother of a sugar and coffee plantation of more than 7,000 acres.

In 1923 Mr. Cochenour returned to this area, bought a horse, Brass Ankle, and built up a racing stable. Among racers he purchased were Muriel Harden, Barton Gal, Ohio Gal and Costa Rica, which is still racing.

After he turned to breeding, developing such well-known horses as Worthy Duke, Papalico and Quatre Bras.

WARM POLITICAL FIGHT PROMISED IN OLD QUEBEC

Issues in Campaign Sprout Quickly and Will be Debated by Three Parties

CENSORSHIP FELT

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Oct. 7 (CP)—The French Canadian province, rich in traditional battle as much as a hearty meal, is in the midst of a political campaign that is developing into one of the most portentious his province ever had known.

The platform warfare was precipitated when Premier Duplessis suddenly called an election for October 25 while the attention of the province was held almost exclusively on the war. Issues in the campaign have sprouted quickly and un expectedly and will be thrashed out between Premier Duplessis' Union Nationale, the Liberal party and Action Liberale Nationale.

From the question of provincial rights under confederation, which the lawyer-premier first described as the reason for his government's existence, to the issue of conscripted rift in a half dozen directions.

The resignation of a cabinet minister and a supporting party member of the Legislature follow-Mr. Duplessis' announcement, observer opened his campaign at Three Rivers last Wednesday.

RUSSIAN REFUSAL

Reports Claim Soviet Demands Before Outbreak of War Included Baltic Concessions

By WITT HANCOCK
(Associated Press Staff Writer)
Moscow, Oct. 7 (AP) — Reliable though unofficial sources said today Great Britain and France demanded Russia before the invasion of Poland for permission to send troops and planes to the front in preparation for going quickly to Poland's aid in the event of war.

These sources said the request had been turned down because the allies had declined to promise in return that Russia would be allowed to send her troops into White Russia and the Polish Ukraine and be granted concessions in the Baltic States.

(It was widely reported during the time that Britain and France were seeking Russian enlistment in the bloc opposed to Nazi aggression that both Poland and the Baltic States would not permit Soviet forces on their soil even if they were sent ostensibly to aid them.)

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The remarkable thing about Adolf Hitler's speech yesterday was not what he said but the indifference of the world to it. Unlike earlier Hitler speeches it was not greeted with a tense mixture of fear, hope and curiosity.

For three years this man who rose from an army corporal to become absolute dictator of a powerful nation had the world hanging on his every time he spoke. Each of his major utterances brought something new, something terrible for some group of people in Europe.

Yesterday he spoke after firing a shot. His words precipitated no fear of war for the war had come. His peace proposals, any peace proposals he could make without losing his hold on the German people, were almost answered in advance.

Until war started Hitler had something to say as to war and peace. Now, for all the first time, he has a situation he does not control. Hitler's proposals, if sincere, display a lack of understanding of the relationship of public opinion and governments in a democracy.

He apparently believes Prime Minister Chamberlain and Premier Daladier may halt the forces of their nation at a word just as he can halt the German forces. He fails to see that just as it took time to rouse the people of France and the British Empire to war it would take more than the words of their leaders to bring a short of achieving their aims.

Another remarkable thing about the speech was that it contained no threat except that of a long war. He did not echo the implied threat made by his Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop about Russian action if peace proposals failed. Hitler he promises immediate thrust by German armed forces, in the air, on sea or on land.

Government Silent on Dispatch Suggesting Hitler Would Agree To Armistice Proposed by Neutral

Press Generally Regarded Reichstag Address as Offering Little Hope for Cessation of Hostilities

Government Intensifies Campaign Against Espionage by Rounding Up 40 Germans Who Landed in England Before Outbreak of War

London, Oct. 7 (CP)—Britons looked with suspicion on Adolf Hitler's "outstretched hand" today as the government analysed the German dictator's speech in the Reichstag special in time to permit Prime Minister Chamberlain to deliver his reply before the House of Commons Monday.

The government was silent, meanwhile, on a news dispatch from Berlin suggesting that Hitler would agree to an armistice were it proposed by the head of a neutral power.

London morning papers carried the dispatch in their late editions without comment.

The press generally regarded Hitler's Reichstag address as offering little hope for cessation of hostilities.

The Times declared British statesmen "are concerned not with what Herr Hitler finds Hitler himself and Hitler's record."

Reading Hitler's speech pledges to Poland, The Times said:

"Against this background of falsity, France and Great Britain view the invocations to themselves which Herr Hitler ends, and the 'peace proposals' with which they were associated."

Colleagues of Hitler Says Fuehrer Confident Offer Will Be Heeded

Sources Close to Him Say He Will Refuse Further Elucidation of Speech — Mussolini and Roosevelt Mentioned as Possible Mediators

Berlin, Oct. 7 (AP)—Colleagues of Adolf Hitler represented the Fuehrer today as "serenely confident his proposal to end the war will be heeded."

The Fuehrer's speech before the Reichstag yesterday was characterized by Nazis as a "political offer demanding a clear-cut political reply."

But sources close to him said he would refuse to give further elucidation of the speech as a preliminary to negotiations for an armistice. Details it was said, might be worked out later.

There was a general belief that the best qualified neutral in sight to make the initial move in mediation under the condition Hitler laid down was Premier Mussolini.

There was no positive information or substantiation in Berlin, but the impression in informed circles was that Mussolini would make an address in the next few days to bring Hitler's offer a step nearer to realization.

Report From Rome.

Rome reports said Premier Mussolini might be willing to act as an intermediary in any exchange of ideas between Germany and the Allies.)

Casting about for other neutral states which might attempt the delicate role of mediation, some German leaders looked to Sweden. There was even an unsubstantiated rumor that Sweden already had consulted other Scandinavian countries to see if a conference at Oslo might be arranged.

Roosevelt Mentioned As Mediator.

Well informed sources said Hitler might approach President Roosevelt of the United States to act as a mediator. However, these sources appreciated that past offers by the president of the U.S. have been for mediation of European quarrels had been rejected by Hitler and that the offers were followed by anti-American propaganda in Germany.

In his Reichstag speech, Hitler offered a cessation of hostilities based upon an exclusive German-Soviet Russian determination of the future of Poland, or war from which he expressed certainty Germany would emerge undefeated. He also envisaged an international conference to end the establishment of European security.

In quarters close to the government it was said that if, during Hitler's waiting period, an enemy should go out of his way to make a hostile demonstration against Germany, perhaps bombing a German city or sink a German ship—the Reich would conclude immediately that Hitler's "outstretched hand" had been rejected.

Then, it was said, Germany would take the offensive in the west.

German Army Commences.

The Supreme Army Command issued the following communique:

"East of the Vistula and in the region of Suwalki, the advance toward the German-Russian border continued without a hitch in unions with Russian troops.

"There were two divisional commanders and 100 officers among the last remnants of the Polish army which capitulated near Kock yesterday.

"In the west, local scouting and home guard actions were carried out pulsed. Otherwise there was only a sporadic barrage of fire.

"Enemy scouting planes attempted to fly over Bonn in the afternoon. One of them was shot down in an air fight at Godesberg, a second was forced down at Bustichen. The crew of four, among whom was one first lieutenant of the general staff, were taken prisoner. There were no losses on the German side."

Canada Planning to Improve Accommodation for Military Planes

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—(CP)—Canada is planning to improve accommodation for military airplanes on both the Atlantic and Pacific, extend winter training facilities at Camp Borden and build a new wireless station at Port Colby, Vancouver, it was disclosed last night in the annual issue of the Canada Gazette.

The Gazette, the Government's official publication, carried announcements by the Defence Purchasing Board concerning plans to be let for various military projects in several parts of the Dominion.

At three points on Nova Scotia's coast additional accommodation is to be provided for Royal Canadian Air Force boats. Tenders already have been called for seaplane hangars and three hangarlike hangars at Dartmouth. Sydney will get two hangarlike hangars and Yarmouth three landplane hangars.

At Saint John a landplane hangar is planned for the Air Force. Additional accommodation for landplanes is to be provided by two hangars at Patricia Bay, B.C. Here also will be built a new slipway and wharf for R.C.A.F. seaplanes and a new boat repair and maintenance building.

For the Mount Grey wireless station tenders are being called for an operating station, living quarters, steel masts, roads and fences.

It was made known that fuller use is to be made of winter training facilities at the Camp Borden, Ont., station of the R.C.A.F. and tenders are being called for the erection of hangars.

At the Petawawa military reserve tenders are being called for construction of wood hutments at Camp Lake, in the heart of the 109-square mile reserve.

CHILD FALLS FROM WINDOW

Douglas Werden, Ager 2, of Picton, Injured in Fall from Second Storey Crashing heavily to the sidewalk of Picton's main street this morning, two-year-old Douglas Werden was rushed to Prince Edward Hospital in a critical condition.

The baby, whose parents were away at the time, fell from the ledge of its second storey home window above Walmsley's Machine Implement Store, just in front of which it fell. A son of the owner of the store picked the child up and rushed it to the hospital. It is believed that the child sustained severe head injuries besides concussion.

Mussolini Ready To Help Hitler In His Proposals

Rome, Oct. 7.—(AP)—Authoritative sources here predicted Premier Mussolini today as ready to help Adolf Hitler's proposals for ending the war, provided Great Britain and France signified their willingness.

The British reaction to the Fuehrer's speech yesterday was considered in the Italian capital generally as "not too bad", but optimism was tempered by the fact that a definite opening for negotiations still had not emerged from London or Paris.

Editorials in the controlled Fascist press indicated the government, however, was not stepping forward to push along the proposals. Newspapers merely published acceptances and other overtures as offering a 'constructive basis for negotiations'.

Crew Outwits Chinese Pirates, Battles Typhoons, Nearly Starved

Quatsino, B.C., Oct. 7 (CP)—The story of a six-month battle with the sea, pirates and starvation was told today by the skipper of the Chinese junk which finally found haven at this Vancouver Island west coast settlement.

From the deck of his 50-foot craft, Tai Ping, Captain John Anderson described how he, his wife and four crewmen outwitted Chinese pirates after leaving Shanghai, then twice battled typhoons on the Pacific and for weeks lived on one bowl of rice a day for each person as their supplies dwindled. Their ordeal ended when the craft was sighted in the Quatsino Sound entrance, and towed to safety.

Capt. Anderson had ordered a big sail cut on board killed to supplement their meagre rations on July 29 but the next day they sighted the Queen Charlotte Islands north of Vancouver Island and four days later were given food and supplies by the United States coast survey vessel Discovery.

They arrived here yesterday, completing their perilous voyage across the Pacific. Richard Hallburton, noted author, and his crew had their lives attempting a similar voyage in a junk to North America.

Military Commanders of France and Britain Discuss German Strategy in Light of Hitler's Reichstag Speech

Paris, Oct. 7.—(AP)—France settled herself today for a long war, her announced determination to "carry on to victory", apparently unshaken by Adolf Hitler's "last" offer to end hostilities.

There were indications of a growing conviction that the war was about to enter a new phase, marked by decisive operations and the new threat of a German offensive.

Military leaders indicated France was prepared for any surprises the Nazis might spring.

Latest information from the front said German troops were continuing to harry French outposts in the Saar and Palatinate sectors, apparently in an effort to test the French strength.

Troops Move Up Steadily

German reinforcements were reported moving up steadily behind the Siegfried Line. These reinforcements included large numbers of heavy tanks and airplanes, it was said.

A communique issued this morning by the French General Staff reported nothing unusual was active in the region southwest of Saarbrucken during the night.

Military sources said German activity had been "more noticeable" in the last 24 hours. Small forces of Nazi troops were reported operating on the Wissembourg and Saarbrucken sectors.

A young German ace pilot who lost his way and landed behind French lines was taken prisoner and his plane seized.

THE WEATHER

Toronto, Oct. 7 — (CP)—The weather is cool and cold over all the Prairie Provinces but it has moderated somewhat in the Peace River district. Rain has fallen from the Great Lakes eastward with showers occurring in many districts.

Lake Superior: Moderate winds cloudy with scattered showers cooler tonight. Sunday moderate winds partly cloudy and quite cool.

Manitoba: Fair and cold. Sunday fair and somewhat milder.

Saskatchewan and Alberta: Fair today and becoming milder.

Why The Weather?

Winter and war! Every season brings its own style of warfare and army equipment. In the last 1914-18 years, armies were made for all manner of winter contingencies. The men wore heavy boots and studded bomb-proof shelters, and special clothing for warmth and for camouflaging, such as white linen or fallen leaf covers for steel helmets. As the ground became frozen they dug in with special boring tools and explosives. Winter interfaces with large-scale military operations, by if the weather is very severe, but cold weather is most favorable for fighting, especially in lowlands where there is no snow. The principal suffering is from colds and frostbites.

Nine Potatoes Fill a Pail

Farmers of North Hastings who have been engaged in harvesting the potato crop report a good yield. Threshing of grain has been about completed in the district, and although a short straw crop is reported, the grain has turned out exceedingly good, considering the adverse weather conditions during the later part of the season. Fall plowing is well underway, and conditions for this work are reported ideal, with the land in excellent shape.

WAR RESPONSIBLE FOR PRICE RISE

Farmers Bound to Receive More for Their Agricultural Products

By The Canadian Press

A touch of grimness and irony mingled with the outstanding celebration of many Ontario farmers Monday as they observed the first second Great War is responsible for both the long-awaited rise in farm produce prices and the fact that their sons wear uniforms.

Before the outbreak of war, the farmers could be grateful that weather and farming conditions were at first seemed threatening because of the late spring had turned favorable. Farm production in grains, vegetables, livestock and dairying was well up to average, farm prices were the same or somewhat lower than in the fall of 1938.

Since Sept. 1, when Hitler's hordes invaded Poland, there has been a steady rise in prices for all agricultural products. Experts predict prices will go even higher because of the war, which also must bring its concomitant of personal tragedy.

Statistics on yield and Toronto wholesale prices from the Ontario Department of Agriculture show the farmers of the province are well prepared to take advantage of the higher prices and that the farmers' income will be substantially higher than in 1938, when some crops, especially potatoes, were poor.

Wheat that sold for 59 cents a bushel Oct. 1, 1938 was up to 67 cents at the start of this month. Oats are about three cents a bushel higher than a year ago and barley five cents.

Choice steers over 1,050 pounds were $8.20 a hundredweight Oct. 1, 1938. They are about $7.75 today. Calves and hogs are about the same but good handyweight lambs are up from $7.75 to $8.10.

Eggs are generally cheaper than a year ago but the price is still rising. Cheese is only slightly changed on the upside. No. 1 creamery butter that was 23½ cents a pound steadily from October, 1938 until last Aug. 15, 1939, is up to 27¼. Ontario new potatoes last fall were 67 cents for a 90-pound bag and today are up to 90 to $1.05 for the same amount.

With the gold of the pumpkin, the scarlet of the apple and the many shades of harvest fruits and vegetables forming a colorful background for the majestic gobbler and other seasonal birds, the Saturday market assumed a typical Thanksgiving appearance.

By far the heaviest offering sold at the local market for many weeks, the display was indicative of the generous harvest that has been gathered in this immediate vicinity.

While the outside market where piles of potatoes crammed every capacity all morning where a delectable offering of turkeys, ducks, chicken and dairy products was "on parade."

His Majesty, King Turkey, in all his splendor, was offered for holiday tables in numbers, were variable with hen turkeys weighing in the vicinity of eight and ten pounds commanding 36 cents the pound. Egg prices maintained the same level of last week-end with "A" selects selling at thirty-three cents per dozen. Mediums were offered at thirty-two and thirty-three cents for the pullet eggs, while second quality were quoted at thirty cents.

The touch of color that was on the outside market was featured with the gold of the pumpkin, the colorful hues of autumn and winter apples and the lesser shades of vegetables. Choice peaches were offered at twenty-five and thirty cents the basket, while choice grapes offered at the same price. Whites were quoted at 30-35 cents for the 4-quart basket.

Flemish Beauty pears sold at sixty cents the peck, while Bartletts and Clapps Favorites moving well in the latter half of the week at the basket. McIntosh Red apples headed that variety of fruit at one dollar the bushel with seventy-five cents the peck. Wolf Rivers and Talmans were quoted at thirty cents for basket lots. A number of melons were available at from five cents to ten cents each. Blue Damson plums were quoted at twenty-five cents, while fancy prunes at fifty cents for six quarts.

Potato quotations showed no change from those of a week ago. By far the best quality that has appeared on the market thus far, these tubers were offered at one dollar the bushel with seventy-five cents bearing the label of production were also steady with bushels quoted at one dollar. Baskets were offered at fifteen and twenty cents. A small quantity of select corn was offered at fifteen cents the dozen ears. MOIRA W.A.

The September meeting of Moira Women's Association was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Emerson on Thursday, Sept. 28.

At 2:30 the president called the meeting to order. Opening prayer from Mark was given by Mrs. F. Hevtig. Mrs. Coleman Townsend and Miss Betty Zinkler favored with a pleasing duet. Dr. Clarence Salisbury of Canado Kiangsu, China, was then favored with a splendid address, giving an insight into the wonderful work in the mission station in Arizona of which he is superintendent. Since going there twelve years ago he and Mrs. Salisbury have increased the original accommodation from twelve beds to one hundred and twenty at present. A power house now supplies lighting. The natives nine their own coal, silver and turquoise. They have trained the native Indian girls till they graduated in nursing and at present have thirty-eight young girls receiving twenty-seven different tribes, two coming from Alaska and one an Eskimo girl. An Evangel goes from ward to ward in the hospital Christianizing the patients. Dr. and Mrs. Salisbury were formerly medical missionaries in China for twelve years. He was greatly delighted in showing old scenes of China and old scenes of his childhood having been born at Moira. Mrs. Salisbury brought greetings from the mission stations of Arizona, as she is president of that society. She told of her work there and how the interest is awakened for better living in these Navajo Indians who seem to be the most self satisfied people in the world. She requested the prayers of all the members

SUNDAY AS DAY OF NATIONAL PRAYER

The churches of the Dominion following the proclamation by the Government will observe Sunday, October 7th, as a National Day of Prayer. The proclamation states that Canada has been forced to take up arms "in defense of rights and liberties unjustly attacked and to prevent unprovoked aggression and we therefore believe it fitting that our people of Canada should be enabled to make a public and solemn avowal of duty to Almighty God."

At this season of the year when the harvests are gathered in and man is filled with the spirit of thanksgiving it is appropriate that a day of national prayer should be observed in Canada because of the internal situation of war. Even as people prepare to observe the Thanksgiving feast, they should feel how blessed this land has been in its liberty and in its bountiful harvests, which they have been permitted to gather, far from such scenes as those in Poland where lives and harvests have been swept away along with justice and with every individual and social right. As man recognizes that Providence has blessed the land with harvests and with the products of industry, the people in health and in freedom from disasters such as floods and earthquakes and that under Providence their lives have been spared to grow up in this Dominion under the benefits of the British constitution, it is appropriate that they should meditate upon the blessings of British citizenship, that they should unite in national prayer and humble supplication for blessing upon the cause and for guidance in their individual lives and in the national life.

May God bless Canada and the Empire and mankind and may the prayer of men and women make public and solemn avowal of duty to Almighty God.

The Sunday of prayer naturally at this time associates itself with the observance of Thanksgiving which is set for Monday.

HITLER'S PROPOSALS

The world waits upon Britain and France to learn what they think of the speech of Chancellor Hitler to the Reichstag on Friday morning. Britain and France will examine carefully the proposals he offered, but the democracies are not to be hurried. Signs however are not lacking which show that the position of the plan submitted will not be lacking. Prime Minister Chamberlain may reply on Tuesday in his weekly address on the war.

Hitler pictured unprecedented horror if the war had to be carried on. He called his address his last offer of "a peace settlement on a comprehensive basis." He said he wished to spare his own people suffering, that there had never yet been victors in war, and not very often there have been two losers. He promised with Russia a peace zone in Europe which would remove difficulties and spoke of "splinters of German nationality" or groups settled in various parts of countries which he sought to bring within the Reich and if they could not be joined he proposed resettlement to eliminate these disturbing factors in Europe. He spoke of returns of former colonies to provide Germany with raw materials. He declared war would sap the vitality of nations and suggested a peace conference, declaring that revival of economic life demanded an immediate return to peace.

A British Government statement issued early last night impressed this that no peace offer is likely to be acceptable that does not free Europe from threat of aggression, and that more than words were required to establish confidence. The statement also hinted that the Hitler proposals in their present form were vague and obscure in many respects.

Opposition to the Hitler plan was voiced early, on the ground that the offer provided nothing new, and that its acceptance would mean a Nazi Europe, according to the London Standard. The British Government statement also noted there was no suggestion of reparation for the wrongs done by Germany to other peoples. French and Rome unofficial reactions were said to be outspoken against the Hitler offer. The statement also demands that more than Hitler's word will be required on any undertaking, according to the British view.

NOONDAY SERVICES

Decision of the Belleville Ministerial Association to hold three days a week at noon on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays a service of intercession from 12.05 to 12.20 o'clock during the wartime crisis is one which will commend itself to the people of this city. The churches as it was said by a leading minister "stand for the indestructible values of life and be used as a quiet haven at this time for those who would commune to God" the great cause on which the nation and Empire are embarked. Services will be brief and will consist largely of a hymn, leadership in prayer and meditation and the singing of the national anthem. It is believed will be a source of great strength to those who would spend fifteen minutes at noonday, freed from the worries of business and activity, to think on the realities of life and the enduring things and on the things for which the British Empire stands.

The first service will be held on Monday, Thanksgiving Day, at noon at Bridge Street United Church and on Wednesday and Friday at the same church. The services will be held in one church each week.

It is hoped that many will avail themselves of this opportunity of intercession and worship at this trying time in the history of the world, the church and civilization.

THE Y. M. C. A. APPEAL

Next week Belleville Y. M. C. A. opens its annual campaign to raise funds for the association which is known as "a friendly guide at every fork of the road" to youth. This year the requirements are $4,627. It is the centre of many youth activities, leadership training, social development, nature study, Bible study, handicraft, music, athletics, physical and social activities, intellectual and spiritual developments. It teaches without cost boys to swim, provides a central place of meeting for many organizations or groups. It has done fine work for needy and jobless men.

War has brought added opportunities and consequent burdens to the Y. M. C. A. at large.

The National Council of Young Men's Christian Associations on the outbreak of hostilities at once wired Prime Minister King its desire to make available experience and resources for service " to Canadian youth at this time of crisis and expressed the desire to confer with the Government regarding ways and means by which these may be most effectively utilized.

The Belleville association has offered its services and stands ready to render every possible service to the men who enlist and enter active war service. The association will extend its privileges to sons of men on active service (boys 10 to 18 years of age) free of cost.

THE BALKANS AND THE BALTICS

In the Balkans and in the Baltic states there is uneasiness. The former stand in the way of possible aggression, they fear war which has been very close to them in Poland. Germany has tried to make them trade with them while keeping down their industrial development so as to prevent their becoming obstacles in her path. In the Baltic states there is the fear of Russia which has had concessions given her by Estonia. The Baltics naturally fear the Soviet because Finland, Latvia, Estonia and Lithuania were once part of the old Russia from whom they still hope to preserve their liberty and right to development along their own lines.

None of these Balkan and Baltic states has sympathy for Germany and Russia. It is the same with Poland which looks upon Germany and Russia with no love for what they have done in the conquest and carving up of their country.

It is the same in the rest of the world. Any state which has been brought into relationship with Nazi Germany has a low opinion of their policy and of them and longs to see the death-blow given to their system of threat, domination and repression.

A SPIRITUAL FORCE

The Polish power is a spiritual power. Secretary Hull of the United States in refusing to recognize the German-Soviet domination of Poland, said "Mere seizure of territory does not extinguish the legal existence of a government." Territorial Poland is the victim of aggression and force, but its government sought refuge abroad.

The United States in recognizing Poland Government as existent, is accepting a spiritual principle.

I have seldom seen much ostentation and much learning met together. The sun, rising and declining, makes long shadows; at midday, when he is highest, none at all.—Bishop Hall.

Free will is not the liberty to do whatever one likes, but the power of doing whatever one sees ought to be done, even in the very face of otherwise overwhelming impulse. There lies freedom, indeed.—George Macdonald.

The only liberty that is valuable is a liberty connected with order; that not only exists with order and virtue, but which cannot exist at all without them. It inheres in good and steady government as in its substance and vital principle.—Burke.

Liberty is the right to do what the laws allow; and if a citizen could do what they forbid, it would be no liberty, because others would have the same powers. —Montesquieu.

Where liberty dwells, there is my country.—Milton.

Doukhobors, A Dying Race

Now we are among the Doukhobors.

Most all the average American knows of the Doukhobors is that they are the strange religious cult from Western Canada who visit in their clothes when they get mad.

Several friends who hear I am coming up here wrote that they hoped I could somehow arrange a visit with the Doukhobors when I get mad.

But that has not come to pass. In the first place, I've found the Doukhobors very friendly and courteous people, and I have no urge to heckle them.

And in the second place for maybe this should be first) I haven't yet seen any Doukhobors who would look especially noteworthy in the raw.

So the Doukhobors, fully cloth ed, and I, also fully clothed, have got along fine.

The Doukhobors are an experiment in Utopianism, an experiment that didn't work. The cult began about 200 years ago in Russia. The Doukhobors were simply Russian peasants, and that's what they still are. There aren't any Doukhobors left in Russia any more. They're all over here.

The original Doukhobors got it into their heads they were going to be regular saints on earth. Consequently they didn't drink, smoke, swear, eat meat or eggs. Not anything (even a bug.) They didn't steal, lie or fight.

It was that no-fighting business that got them into trouble. In Russia they burned their guns, rifles and refused to take the oath of allegiance to Nicholas Romanoff. (They wouldn't take the oath because that would be swearing!) So they got sent off to Siberia.

At one time, there were more than 20,000 of them. They were persecuted in many ways. At last they petitioned the Russian Government to let them move, lock, stock and barrel, to some foreign country. The Government consented—with a big sigh of relief, I suspect.

So the Doukhobors came to Canada. Count Tolstoy, the great Russian novelist, was one of their supporters. He wrote in their behalf, and they came. Around 60 of them arrived in Halifax, Nova Scotia, in 1899, and more later.

Canada didn't ask them to come; it merely gave them a haven. The Doukhobors went to Canada from Nova Scotia to Saskatchewan. The Government gave them land. Some of the Doukhobors refused to become naturalized. They declared that they still would be swearing you see, and Canada didn't like that. There was trouble over tax lands.

So in 1907 the bulk of the Doukhobors gave up their Government land in Saskatchewan and moved on over to British Columbia and settled north of there.

From what little I had heard previous of the Doukhobors, I had supposed there were a few score of them, a few hundred at most.

But, gee whiz, there are between 18,000 and 17,000 of them out here. Their villages are just chock-full holding their own from year to year.

A friend of mine who has been in Russia says they still are typical Russian peasants. They are spread in agricultural settlements over a strip about 100 miles long. The towns of Nelson and Trail and Brilliant and Grand Forks are all heavy with Doukhobors.

I said previously that the Doukhobors were an experiment in Utopianism—that is, I mean their economic life was truly communal. Everyone owned land, but the property of his own, and they shared and shared alike out of the general organization.

And the whole thing—both their economic and their spiritual life—was based on love. The Doukhobors professed to love everything, from the humblest grasshopper to the smartest neighbor. That was their theory and it never has worked.—Ernie Pyle in New York World Telegram.

Increase in Heart Disease is Among Older aPople

When you read that cancer is increasing, it is well to remember that this term is often found in between ages of 40 to 85, and as more people live to these ages than ever before, naturally they will be more who will develop cancer.

We have been told that the number of cases of heart disease is increasing. This is true but it is possible now to discover what kinds of heart disease are increasing. The kind which is on the increase is among older persons because the size of the older population has doubled.

The increase in heart disease is not among younger people who are most likely to develop rheumatic heart disease; this variety — rheumatic heart disease — is actually growing less in number.

I am quoting from the little booklet "Man and His Health", published for the American Museum of Health, Inc., distributed at New York's World's Fair.

In other words, the fact that people are learning to live better and longer lives is shown by figures regarding heart disease look so bad. The outlook, therefore, is not entirely "as dismal as it appears to suggest." In proportion to the number of people, the death rate from heart disease has not increased to any extent.

"Nor is the increase in the death rate of heart disease among the middle-aged due to degenerative syphilitic heart disease, for this variety is being brought under control."

The point then is that as heart disease is being prevented in young people owing to the early removal sagd individuals are being attacked by syphilitic heart disease owing to the widespread campaign against this disease. Actual improvement in heart disease is among older individuals, because the span of life has been greatly extended the past twenty-five years.

Further, most with a failing heart now know that if they avoid excitement, eat small meals, take light exercise, rest more at night and during the day, go to bed for 4 to 5 weeks following a heart attack, they may live as long as others their age who have not had disease. This knowledge prolongs the life of a great many heart patients. Tend clinics have reduced the death rate from heart disease alarmingly.

ONLY FIT APPLY

Not all men between the ages of 18 and 45 who apply for admission into the various Canadian military units are accepted. The first medical examination for recruits have a definite purpose. Fit men only are wanted for the battalions.

Senator Dandurand states that in the last war 400,000 men went overseas from Canada. As these men were all physically fit except it was not good economy to enlist those and take them abroad to be discovered they were not physically able to do full military duty.

War does not stop for bad weather. Trenches have to be manned, bullets have to be dodged, but all kinds of weather under trying circumstances and unless a man is in perfect physical condition he will not be expected to endure the rigors of continuous exposure to all weathers.

That is why the stiff medical examinations are trying to select only those who are physically fit.—Oshawa Times.

LIVELY LINES

by

Arthur L. Burke

It is hard to explain, why from church we remain
And forego many blessings divine,
Why do we stay home or elsewhere should roam
On Sunday with others to dine.

Every neighborhood, fair, has its sanctum of prayer.
A place of vast riches and gain;
No matter our creed, it's communion we need
Then why from its portals remain?

With our radio set, other churches we get,
Other programmes may be in our search.
We travel afar, each Sunday by car
To keep other people from church.

We may go to our lodge but the church doors we dodge,
To service clubs give all our time.
Which our church can survive, what people can thrive?
If they think not on matters sublime.

To avoid future grief, let us turn a new leaf,
Let us worship with heart and with voice.
Should the sermon be dry, that is no reason why
We should stay from the church of our choice.

Then to church let us go and a fuller life know.
Let our banners for right be unfurled.
We can make ourselves strong, 'gainst the forces of wrong
And our lives of some use in the world.

War Bows to the Weather

Almost everything promises to be contraband in the present war, including weather forecasts. In all belligerent countries these already are closely guarded secrets. The familiar weather map printed in The Times each day is now unobtainable. Once the whole duty of a soldier was to fear God and keep his powder dry. Nowadays the generals fear the weather and do their best to keep anybody from knowing whether it will be dry or wet.

What happened in Poland might have been very different had the rains been earlier and fallen sooner. If the skilful German forecasters knew in advance that they would not be. Far from foolish is the suggestion that this war may be won not by the heaviest battalions but by the ablest predictors of weather.

The weakness of mechanical warfare is its dependence on nature. Not only must there be comparatively flat stretches of settled mechanics, but potent enemies are storms, bad roads and unexpected heat or cold.

Aircraft are essential. but their effectiveness is at the mercy of fog, head winds, ice-forming clouds or destructive storms.

Military science still knows little of the strengths, but this seems not to prevent it from dangerously vulnerable to too much Blitz, in the form of nature's lightning strokes instead of man's.

If it be true that Herr Hitler's blitzkrieg is the date for hostilities, perhaps it was barometers these gentlemen consulted rather than stars.—N. Y. Herald-Tribune.

How Much Work Can One Man Do?

Mr. Felix Belair paints a rather terrifying picture of what may be in store for the President of the United States even during a limited national emergency. It is a 24-hour job. The telephone may ring at any hour of the day during the night. The afternoon golf game has had to be given up. The President 'goes to bed with the assurance that tomorrow will be another day but like today and that he can never catch up with his work."

Sympathy may not be the right word for the feeling one has in reading about these and other details of Presidential life. But the facts do call forth one's deep respect for the man power. There are many things that even the busiest President simply cannot do. The Constitution has made some decisions for him, as the Supreme Court will testify when a case is properly presented. Congress has been given certain duties. Even so, his range of action is so great that the average person of us men can hardly carry the burden.

Perhaps a dictator's load is lighter than a President's since, if he wishes, he can act without consulting any one. But even a dictator cannot effectively unless he gets correct information, and he cannot get correct information out of the air. He must give time and strength to it. The fact is probably, that there is up by it.—New York Times.

Barber Shop Changing Now

Next to a newspaper office, perhaps the best place dispensing literature is the barber shop, and if you are not particular about the accuracy of the news, that's a good place to hear it. In addition to being a centre for the dissemination of news the barber shop is quite often a miniature house of commons with full debate on every imaginable subject. This has been true of barber shops for many decades, but ever since the discovery of the

The other day while undergoing one of our infrequent attempts to get discussing things with the barber, we heard a customer declare: After a little while a prospective customer came in, and seeing that all chairs occupied decided he couldn't wait and off he went.

And there was a sad look in the barber's eye. Before he opened his mouth we knew he was dreaming of the good old days when the menfolk had to see the shop full of customers, and an opportunity to discuss the affairs of the day. And then the barber began to talk.

"Well I'll be dingbusted," he said, "here the best part of the morning I even wait until I got through with you. Must be in an awful hurry. You know I used to get mad when they would be tickled to death to be around for half an hour for a haircut or shave. They would get out their watch and hold it in their hand and have a swell time until one of us hollered, "Next, please."

Then in a sad hook came into his eye as he said, "Gee, but things have changed. Some of them don't wait two minutes any more. I wonder what all this mad rush is about myself?"

And when we left the barber chair he was standing in the door. The tendency these days is to expect speed in everything. If a client in a store is not ready to serve us we walk into another store. We hate to wait for a seat at the show or a chair in the barber shop. And the funny thing about it is that when out of ten of us who are in such a hurry to get through with life and do, Shakespeare has the phrase for it, "Much ado about nothing."

Picton, Oct. 7.—The opening Fall meeting of the H. and S. Club was held on Tuesday evening in the Legion rooms with the new president, Mrs. F. J. Webster, in the chair. The feature of the meeting was an address by Dr. D. S. Lighthall whom he took his listeners back over the history of this county from the time of the Ice age to the beginning of modern times. He showed curios from his noted collection. These included fossils, spear points in copper of the Mound Builders found in their burial grounds; a book of pencil sketches depicting Picton in 1847; a water carrier's yoke that had belonged to the grandfather of the late Sheriff Barker; two hand woven blankets over 100 years old, one monogrammed and dated 1812; pieces of crockery said to be mound builders, and Indian relics. This was one of the most entertaining addresses ever heard by the club. Other items on the program were a vocal solo by Miss Florence Barber and a much enjoyed piano number. The club decided to add war work to their program this year.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Le Heup were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hyatt, Lake Shore House, Sandbanks.

A great deal of excitement was caused in Delhi on Monday afternoon when a herd of fifty western cattle broke away from the drovers. The animals stampeded and left a trail of broken fences, damaged lawns and flower beds over a wide area of the town before, after several hours, they were rounded up by the owners who are ruefully considering what it will cost to make everything right again.

Plans Completed For Registration Of Local Women

Centres to Open in City for Voluntary Registration Programme

During the week of October 14th to 21st, Canadian women will have the opportunity of making voluntary registration for service in national emergency. Many will offer themselves with the thousands of Canadian women who have already shown themselves eager to further this plan of survey. By means of such registration which will be compulsory with women in England, but in Canada voluntary, the information can be supplied the government, if required, on the national resources that can be offered by the women of the nation. While the plan is not considered necessary it is endorsed and recommended by the government.

The local committee met yesterday afternoon and found that the number of women many volunteered to help with registration is most gratifying. Centres have been arranged at convenient points in the city so that all women can register conveniently.

The voluntary registration plan has issued appeals. By means of a questionnaire information is obtained on the services that can be rendered and the special training desired by the women. Among the questions asked concerning the possibility of the person registering, taking a child or adult into their home in the case of an emergency. Another inquires if training for any national emergency is desired in such fields, as motor mechanics, emergency First Aid work, communal kitchens, intelligence work, etc.

Training centres will then be set up for instruction in special jobs. It is pointed out that if women replace men in salaried positions to release them for overseas duties they will receive remuneration.

Should circumstances arise so that women signing for certain duties are unable to undertake doming to the call comes, they are not bound to do so. But all should register, even if they have already themselves with other service organizations as the information obtained by the committee will be placed in the hands of the government.

Those who cannot offer their services in other ways can also serve by home sewing, knitting and crocheting. All should respond to the call for registration and those in charge of the centres will gladly explain what such registration hopes to accomplish.

A Gala Dinner Frock

BY ALICE ALDEN

A high Empire waistline . . . . underskirt molded to the figure . . . .overskirt widening to the hem line . . . black lace. That's one Paris designer's idea for a gala dinner entrance. The fragile lace is combined with chiffon to emphasize the waistline's new importance. Softness in the skirt at the centre back than elsewhere. The woman whose arms are thin should study the flattering effect of the ruffled shoulder-cap sleeves, directing our attention to black velvet gloves, one being cuffed in pearls. Naturally, such a gown looks its best only if it's worn over a high-waisted slip-molding foundation.

Let's Talk About Wallpapers

Choosing wallpapers is a thrilling adventure for the homemaker. And it's an especially daring adventure for the woman who has always had plain walls, who has grown tired of them, and who rather timorously takes the first step into the glamorous world of wallpapers.

For the woman who has become wallpaper-minded but whose taste has as yet ventured only into the choosing of the most conventional patterns, there is the ever-beckoning challenge of experiment with more daring designs.

For the woman who studied trends of wallpapers, trends in colors and trends in designs, as the eddies any other fashion trends, there are always new wallpaper worlds to conquer.

Look at your walls. Be honest with yourself. Do you really prefer to have them painted, or do you lack the courage to venture forth and choose a pattern and a color of wallpaper for your walls? Here's comfort for the woman who is wavering in her choice between paint and wallpaper . . . very often, very often, you will be able to find a wallpaper background-color near-to your heart's desire than a color that you will be able to achieve in the mixing of paint. The shades in the wallpaper are already accomplished —there for you to see, easy to visualize in your rooms. You can take a generous sample home with you, hang it on your wall, live with it for a while, see if it harmonizes with what you are planning for furnishings and curtains in that room.

Wallpapers this year are in such high style favor that are offered a vast variety of patterns to meet all requirements; for every taste, from the most conservative to the most sophisticated; for every room; for every purse.

Added to the enormous variety of patterns and designs now are offered new, there is another outstanding reason for the increasing popularity of wallpapers: the subtle colors and fascinating offshades of these colors used in backgrounds and in the designs.

Then too, . . . and we're all interested in this . . . wallpapers now have the added factor of practicality. The durability of papers now on color-fast and many of them are washable. And several excellent methods have been devised for cleaning wallpapers.

You might try papering a certain room which has always been a problem to you, a room which, with plain painted walls, has always looked "unfinished", or a room for which you cannot afford appropriate accessories of furnishing. If you choose for this room an interestingly dramatic (I don't mean blatant) wallpaper, it will give the room a furnished feeling. The patterned walls will be are artistic highlight of the room.

In my judgment, you can, with the wise choice of wallpapers, express yourself, your personality and individuality as charmingly as you can by your smile or our handshake or your voice.

AT THE BELLE

"Hollywood Cavalcade" in Color.

A great human drama of today that will stir all your happiest memories of 1001 thrilling yesterdays is Darryl F. Zanuck's production of "Hollywood Cavalcade", which is now on the Belle screen, starring Alice Fays and Don Ameche and photographed in glorious technicolor.

The romance of Hollywood from bathing beauties to world premieres staged anew, this magnificent picture tells in thrilling and highly entertaining fashion the story of Mike who wanted only to be loved by Mike, a "prop" boy consumed with the desire to make pictures, and Molly, who wanted only to be loved by Mike, but who was young along to greatness on the screen.

Those memorable Mack Sennett bathing beauties stroll again beside Castle Rock or Santa Monica beach, but this time lovely Alice Faye is one of their number. Buster Keaton, Ben Turpin, Chester Conklin and those inimitable Keystone Cops cavort again in slapstick, custard-pie comedy. Al Jolson sings again "Kol Nidre", the song with which he electrified the world in "The Jazz Singer", the first talking picture ever made. And Ameche, as Director Mike, recalls the great directors of a bygone day as he strides about his gigantic sets, in riding togs and puttees, carrying a huge megaphone with his name painted on it, directing a lavish Babylonian feast with hundreds of dress extras.

Alice Faye is more beautiful and attractive than ever in her technicolor debut and also her first straight dramatic role as Molly, and Don Ameche is splendid as Mike who forgot to tell her he loved her—until it was too late.

Others who shine in the supporting cast are J. Edward Bromberg, as a composite of all Hollywood producers; Alan Curtis as the leading man Molly meets when she deserts a setting of winning Mike; Stuart Erwin as Mike's demon cameraman; Jed Prouty as Chief of Police of the Keystone Cops; Buster Keaton as his pie-slinging self; Donald Meek as a pioneer producer; George Givot as the ever-present top-hatted villain, and Eddie Collins as one of the more excitable members of that highly excitable force.

Sunday Midnight Show.

Song and dance, pathos and drama, form the background for the first co-starring appearance of Mickey Rooney and Judy Garland in "Babes in Arms", which will be presented in the Sunday midnight, one performance only.

Based on the Broadway musical success of a couple of seasons ago, the story deals with the era when Mickey and Judy were in vaudeville, the stellar Rooney-Garland team, the same Rooney who, as Hemingway, Guy Gibbee, June Preisser, Grace Hayes, Douglas Fowley, Douglas Phail, Sand Brooks, Leni Lynn, John Sheffield, remembered as "Tarzan, Jr.", in "Tarzan Finds a Son!", and some 200 supporting players. Regular prices will prevail.

AT THE McCARTHY

"WHEN TOMORROW COMES"

Phillip and Helen fall in love at first sight! It happens when Phillip (Irene Dunne) is giving an orchestral pianist in America for a concert, and Helen is a restaurant for dinner. His interest disappears when he gazes at Helen across the room. It is love at first sight.

Helen goes sailing with Phillip but a sudden violent gale forces them to seek refuge in the waterfront home. Momentarily forgetting the steadily increasing fury of the storm, they become enamored of each other, Helen and Phillip discover a mutual love for music.

As the storm grows to hurricane intensity they feel impact of their feelings for each other. Raging waters endanger their lives when Phillip overlooks the fact of his automobile. Death almost claims them as they fight the storm against their car by the force of the hurricane.

Helen and Phillip battle the hurricane to seek refuge. They stumble into the Bellevue Hospital and escaped the force of the wind . . . a church! In the morning they are married by the minister, asleep in each other's arms, in the organ loft where they had been forced by rising waters.

Phillip confesses he is married his wife, a mental invalid. Phillip is faced with the problem of choosing between loyalty to his wife and love for Helen. How shall he decide? Suspense, exciting adventure and the screen's outstanding romance make "When Tomorrow Comes" perfect entertainment!

"The Under-Pup"

A new personality aimed for a debut in "The Under-Pup" is Gloria Dickson, decessor, Deanna Durbin, in "Three Smart Girls," will reach the screen when Gloria Jean appears in the title role of Universal's "The Under-Pup" coming to the McCarthy Theatre next with a preview presentation Sunday midnight.

The eleven-year-old singing actress shares starring honors with Robert Cummings, who is featured in the new film, a Joe Pasternak production boasting a long cast in a strong story.

Impressive Cast

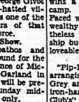
No less than 15 featured "names" are in the lineup of "Under-Pup" players, including Beulah Bondi, Virginia Weidler, Margaret Lindsay, C. Aubrey Smith, Billy Gilbert, Gale Sondergaard, Raymond Walburn, Paul Cavanagh, Frank Jenks, Ernest Truex, Samuel S. Hinds, Dickie Moore, Shirley Mills, Doris Lloyd, Jeanne Kelly, Jeanne Ames, Billy Lenhart and Kenneth Brown, and others.

Gloria plays the title role, that of "Pip-Emma," a poor girl from the East Side of New York who wins a trip to an exclusive girls' camp. There her troubles begin, mixed with the animosity of the wealthy girls, "Pip-Emma" nevertheless wins the loyalty and friendship but their envy through her loveable personality.

Popular Theme

"Pip-Emma" also plays a part in arranging the love match of Billy Grey and Cummings, upsetting the romantic plans of Lois Wilson as Phillip's youthful president.

Richard Wallace, who made "The Yoke Of Gold" and many Billy Bevis, directed "The Under-Pup" from L.A.R. Wyler's good chinese keeping magazine story and Grover Jones' screenplay.



A figure of legend for men of Yale for almost forty years, William Lyon Phelps has written a record of his abundant life in autobiography. With Letters, Professor Phelps's life and friendships, enriched by his bright block of enthusiasm has flashed over the world of letters for so many years. Although he has lived what he has called "a sheltered life," he has had intimate contact by his work, in games, in friendships and in correspondence with the world's most famous men and women. The book is filled with intimate glimpses of famous figures in the world of letters among others Mark Twain, Thomas Hardy, J. M. Barrie, G. K. Chesterton, Joseph Conrad. Interspersed with the material is an account of his travels, fresh-air fiends, how to read on trains, and the younger generation. Phelps's book is the first time when Vincent Benet has said, "Few men almost discover Poe; few have such unflagging zest for life."

In the autumn of 1934 Dwight Long left Seattle in a 32-foot sloop with a crew of one man and a dog, to circle the globe. The story of his adventures is told in the book "Sailing All Seas in the Idle Hour." His narrative is sincere and lacks that exaggeration which characterizes tales of many stunt voyages in small craft. For four years he sailed 35,000 miles before he returned to his home in New York harbor. By a strange irony his boat was later wrecked in the hurricane which struck the New England coast. This tale of a modern Marellus will appeal to navigators, both salt and armchair.

Further reminiscences by the author of "Goose Feathers" are told by George Digby in his latest book, "Down Wind." In his lively style, the author describes his life as a journalist in China, as a hunter in Java, as a whaler-catcher in Australia and New Zealand and as a nurse to a cargo of rams in a trip around Cape Horn to South America. Mr. Digby has many amusing anecdotes and incidents to tell and readers will find his interesting stories after such a variety of experiences.

"Seven Grass Rufa" tells of the seven temporary homes established by Cecils Rubes Malachet in Central and South American jungles, where she went as a bride with her engineer husband. The account of her adventures is humorous, full. The petulant would-be venture hunter would tell this story in a tone which Mrs. Malachet writes of the life and country because she loves it. There is, however, a wealth of incident and many attractive photographs

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Famous Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

Married Young and Now Loves Another

Dear Misses Fairfax:

When I had barely passed my 16th birthday, I married, a year later we had a darling little baby boy, who is now three years old. Up to the present time I felt that my husband meant every thing to me. About two months ago, I became acquainted with a young man, who seems to be the one I really care for. I haven't told anyone, but it seems as though I should go crazy trying to keep it to myself.

This young man has shown in many different ways that he too loves me. My husband tells me he loves me, but doesn't try to keep me happy by taking me out or asking friends in, so that we could have a little social life. It just seems impossible for me to get along without this new-found love. What can I do?

Unhappy

Your "darling little baby boy" is the answer to your problem, my dear. If you do a mother's duty by him, you will not let yourself imagine that you have found somewhere else the love of your life. This so often happens when a girl marries as young as you have and doesn't have a chance to enjoy youth and all the fun and admiration which is youth's due.

The young man knows you are married and have a boy. Don't risk losing home, husband and child for this slight chance of happiness involved in this temporary affair. Courage and common sense, my child, is your answer. Try to recapture the fancy of your husband and him to take you out occasionally. A little co-operation is up to him also.

She Loves to Tease Him

Dear Miss Fairfield

The girl with whom I'm in love is very pretty, intelligent and works hard. She has a father, but does not live with him, and her mother is dead. Therefore, she supports herself and does very well.

She has a habit of opposing everything I want to do. If I suggest going to the movies, or any kind of entertainment, she doesn't want to go. And she always wants to do just the opposite of what I suggest. When I ask her why she treats me in the manner she merely replies that she likes to tease me and see me when I get "mad". Is there always a reason to know some other boys she knows. However, I must be fair and say she claims she doesn't care about any of them, she makes me think she likes me very much, and I'm sure we could both be happy if I could only figure her out.

Martin

These are all very promising symptoms, my dear boy. Don't you known that girls delight in teasing those they love? It's just good old-fashioned coquetry as the part of the young lady—the same brand your grandmother and your grandmother indulged in when they wanted to bring grandpa and great grandpa to terms.

Nothing is lacking in your case except congratulations — and here goes!

She'd Like to Become Better Acquainted

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 19 years old and have a good photographic position in a real estate office. There's a young man in this same office who is learning the business and while he comes in every day, he is out most of the time. I've known him for a couple of years, and happen to know he isn't married. He has always been very pleasant to me, and has even stopped at my desk for a few words. I haven't gone out with many boys, because they're all so fresh, while this boy seems so nice that I'd like to get better acquainted with him, still I'd give anything for a date with him. Can you help me get this much wanted date with him?

Gladys

You say you've known him for a "couple of years"; well why not invite him over? Or perhaps you don't want it to look as if you're interested in him alone. Then the best thing you can do is to invite both people, either for the evening or for Sunday night supper.

DR. DAFOE'S CHAT on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Child's Complaints Abest Hospital Prove Often to be Figments of Imagination

I have found that parents often take a dislike to hospitals because of things their child may have told them about what went on when they were in hospital. Children pass through an age when exaggeration and flights of imagination are as natural as eating. For instance, when little Jimmy comes home from playing in and tell mother and dad how ten great big bears chased him down the street and how he killed them all, they recognize the story as a figment of the imagination. At the very most, they chide him for telling tall tales.

But when that child is lying in the hospital and the parents go to see him there, they don't seem to realize that the stories he tells them are just as apt to be flights of imagination as the story about the bears. So if he tells how the little boy in the next bed cried and cried because the doctor hurt him, or how cross and mean the nurses are to him, don't get too upset about it. A great many children take this method of increasing their importance to their parents. I know that again and again there has been trouble between hospital and parents because of some tale told by a child, which, when investigated, proved to be another tall story.

In my opinion, the truly great disadvantage of a children's hospital is the danger of infection. As you know, it requires a period of from several days to several weeks for various contagious disease to develop, so the child in the cot next to yours may have contracted whooping cough ten days before coming to the institution. If the parents of that child knew about the contact and told the doctor, the disease could be placed in a separate ward, but chances are about a hundred to one that the parents do know or, if they did, they don't bother to tell. So, that child develops whooping cough, it is altogether likely your child will contract it too.

This same example holds true in almost all the communicable diseases. In spite of themselves, hospital authorities sometimes let children into the institution who, in the course of a few days or weeks, will develop some disease they contracted before they were admitted and which may spread to other children near them.

Most parents blame the hospital in such cases because they feel that the hospital is lax in allowing such a thing to occur. Try to see it from the point of view of the hospital. Certainly, it causes them great embarrassment and if they could avoid such outbreaks they certainly would. Fortunately, such occurrences are rare in our modern hospitals.

NEEDS YOUR HELP

Response to this week's campaign for funds to help carry on Victorian Order work has been most gratifying. On the practical interest of the citizens depends the growth of V.O.N activities and the committee's constant aim is to see that all who call for expert nursing can receive skilled attention, whether they can afford the service or not. It is for those in need that community contributions are necessary. If you have not already sent your donation and wish to do so, the personal committee, Mrs. F. S. James, 227 John Street, will receive V.O.N. contributions at any time.

Backache—Kidney Pains

Poison causes pain. When you have pains in the back, you may be sure that the pains you may be suspicious of the Kidneys. They may be slow and sluggish in removing into acid poisons from the blood.

Along with inactivity of the Kidneys you usually find the liver torpid and the whole system poisoned. Then these pains and aches arise. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, the famous and popular medicine has proved its outstanding efficiency as a regulator of these vital organs.

GEN. McNAUGHTON

Where the First Division, to be composed of 16,000 or 20,000 men, is to be trained and when it is to go overseas has not yet been determined. These two questions will be among the first for General McNaughton's attention.

Distinguished Engineer

A distinguished engineer as well as soldier, General McNaughton has won acclaim in Canada, United States and Great Britain, being a member of professional engineering bodies in the three nations. His writings and research work have brought him note also. He was the John Inventor with Lieut.-Col. T. A. Hunt of a Cathode ray direction finder.

He has been intimately connected with the development of aviation in Canada. He was a member of the Imperial Economic Conference Committee on Trans-Atlantic Communication and was chairman of the Inter-Departmental Committee that laid the groundwork for the Trans-Canada Air Service.

Chief of Staff

In addition to handling troops in war and peace—he was chief of the General Staff 1929-35—General Mcaughton organized and administered projects and was chairman of unemployed men that were spread across Canada on various public projects from 1932 to 1935.

Andrew George Latta McNaughton was born at Moosomin, Sask., Feb. 25, 1887. He was graduated from McGill University as a Bachelor of Science in 1910. He began his military career while at McGill University and on the outbreak of the first Great War went on active service with the rank of major.

Major McNaughton was wounded in the second battle of Ypres in April, 1915, and after recovery in England was ordered to command the 11th Artillery Brigade, with rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. He was wounded in 1916 and in 1917 this time after recovery was appointed Chief Counsellor to the Minister and the Canadian Corps heavy artillery. In that post he continued until the war end.

After the war he continued his military career at defence headquarters in Ottawa until he in 1929 he was appointed chief of the General Staff with the rank of Major-General. In that post he continued until 1935 when he became Chief of the Defence Committee Council.

The staying, slightly-built soldier has been known as a family man. In 1918 he was married to Mabie Clara Stuart Weir of Montreal. They have five children. His recreations have been shooting and fishing.

Discuss Strategy

French and British military commanders met yesterday in a long conference, and it was believed they discussed probable German strategy in the light of Hitler's Reichstag speech.

Attending the conference were General Maurice Gamelin, Commander-in-Chief of the Allied Forces; Major General Sir Edmund Ironside, Chief of the British Imperial Defence Staff; Major General Alphonse Joseph Georges, in charge of French operations on the northern flank, and the French and British air chiefs.

Hitler's address was the object of sharp attacks by the French press which declared the speech had not altered the situation. Some commentators said that he would be necessary to try to justify his political and military position in the eyes of the German people.

L'Epoque declared: "In short Hitler wants to tell us he is a sweet lamb that the Polish wolf wished to eat."

May Delay Announcement

Whether Mr. Chamberlain would be able to announce the government's view of the Reichstag speech Monday depended, it was said, largely upon quicky conferences with the Dominions and Canada were consulted.

There was no elaboration on an official comment yesterday which said that the peace proposals are likely to be found acceptable which do not effective the future of Europe the menace of aggression, a reiteration of which war aims previously enunciated by the Prime Minister.

The House of Commons is scheduled to review the entire progress of the government's war effort next week.

On Tuesday Sir Kingsley Wood, air secretary, is expected to describe the activities of the Royal Air Force and give some indication of Britain's growing strength in the air.

War Broadcast Tuesday

On Wednesday, Mr. Chamberlain probably will deliver his sixth "war bulletin" to an account of the British Expeditionary Force in France is expected Thursday.

Parliament, it was indicated, also will give attention to anti-profiteering legislation.

On the home front the Government's intensified its campaign against espionage. Scotland Yard yesterday rounded up 60 Germans, most of whom were said to have entered England shortly before the outbreak of the war.

Text of British Statement On Reichstag Speech by Hitler

London, Oct. 6 (AP)—The, text of the British statement on Adolf Hitler's speech follows:

Herr Hitler's Reichstag speech in its full text was only available in London in the course of the afternoon and it has therefore not been possible to give it more than a preliminary examination.

The speech is divided into two parts. The first, which is mainly a survey of past events, abounds in perversions of the truth which will be readily recognized by the people of this country and indeed of the whole world. Thus the claim that humane methods of warfare have been employed in Poland has been refuted by statements in Parliament and by the report of the United States' ambassador in Warsaw.

The world has already formed its own judgment about the alleged request of the Czechs to be incorporated in the Reich while Herr Hitler's statement that he has never broken his promise only shows that words have for him a meaning totally different from that commonly attached to them.

Herr Hitler says that in the year 1936 an English spoke of the cruelty and moral licentiousness of the Poles and claims that recent events show that the Polish State was lacking in any national, historic, cultural or moral foundation.

This was not Herr Hitler's view when he said in his Reichstag speech on May 21st 1935, "We recognize the Polish State as the home of a great patriotic nation with the understanding and cordial friendship of avowed Nationalists."

In a further passage Herr Hitler complains that "For many years the world has been attributed to the man foreign policy which at best might have been expected from the imagination of a schoolboy."

The disappointment is that he has been it can only be attributed to Herr Hitler's open aspirations for world domination in "mein kampf" to his utterances since he came into power and still more to his acts.

Finally the repeated suggestions that Great BRitiain is responsible for the war have no foundation in fact. On the contrary the efforts of His Majesty's Government to preserve peace during the successive crisis brought about by Germany during the last two years are well-known and recognized by the whole world.

Hotels Crowded

The Home Office, relaxing restrictions which had closed London theatres and moving picture houses in the evening, approved a plan to keep acme west end theatres open till 11 p.m.

The Board of Trade moved to conserve metal and chemicals essential in munitions manufacture, ordering several nickel derivatives and other chemicals from export to European Mediterranean or Black Sea countries.

Appointed Deputy Chief

The War Office announced transfer of Major-General Philip Neame, V.C., from Commandant of the Royal Military Academy to Deputy Chief of the Imperial General Staff. In his new post, General Neame, 50, will work with Sir Edmund Ironside, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

In an Empire broadcast last night Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden said the nation could not "live forever armed to the teeth at the mercy of the threat of robbery or violence." He described such conditions as a reversion to barbarism.

"To preserve freedom for ourselves, to gain it for others, to create out of the present wars an understanding and an enduring peace, is the task wherein we have set our hands" he said.

"A family of peoples united in fait hand purpose, we will not cannot fail."

Complete Scepticism

The outstanding characteristic of newspaper comment on Hitler's statement was a feeling of complete scepticism, said The Daily Telegraph.

"Peaceful negotiation is to be invoked only after acquiesence in Germany has gained already by aggressions, and in the claims which the new pute forward as unconditional, the return of her colonies, the right of Germany to 'lebensraum' at whatever cost to other nations, and the unalienable possession of Poland's independence.

"Evidently there would be nothing left for an international conference to decide except to declare that Germany must have whatever she cared to demand.

"If such a conference failed to agree to those demands, the unforgiven would break up, and the last fate of Europe would be worse than the first. Germany's misled world would come into action again."

Ready for Real War

Under the caption, "After Hitler," The Evening Standard said:—"We are now ready for real war. He (Hitler) can now throw himself against the Maginot Line at the price of fearful slaughter. He can attempt to wheel through Holland and Belgium. Finally he can unleash an air assault on this island; for that we are ready. He hoped to make us cowards by his cunning. He has failed, and he is finished."

The Star wrote:—

"To show any indulgence to him (Hitler) now would be an intolerable betrayal of all the decencies."

Reveal Secret Arms In Europe

The British-French plan to use Soviet Russia as a base of operations in the Persian or Black Sea sources said, failed because of a breakdown in military talks held last August as a result of the concessions Russia demanded — now achieved since Russia joined with Germany in partitioning Poland.

Poland, they reported, had argued that British and French aircraft should not be shipped direct to Polish territory in peacetime lest Germany be provoked.

As an alternative, these sources declared, it was proposed that the airplanes be sent to Odessa, Soviet port of the Black Sea, and from there distributed along Russia's western border.

Russia, they said, wanted a guarantee that she would not have to fight on her own soil, and that she be permitted to send armies into White Russia and the Polish Ukraine, regions of former Poland that before war on the U.S.S.R.

Wanted Baltic Concessions

They said she also wanted concessions in the Baltic which Britain and France were unable to grant.

Now, although the treaty with Germany establishing a frontier in former Poland, and a consolidation of White Russia and the Polish Ukraine, Russia's "non-aggression" treaties with Estonia and Latvia, she has won concessions in the Baltic and has also gained a strategic advantage placing Germany.

Russia was expected to resume talks during the week-end with Lithuania—and Turkey, continuing her policy of spreading the influence in eastern Europe through "neutralization" agreements.

The Lithuanian Foreign Minister, Juozas Urbsys was reported enroute to Moscow by plane.

Diplomats foresaw quick agreement with Lithuania, which, it was said, Russia probably would include in the Soviet sphere, but the North against any possible attack. Transit rights were said to be Russia's principal demand from Turkey.

Turkish Neutrality Demanded.

From Turkey, some diplomats said Russia was demanding neutrality in the war, a mutual assistance pact and assurances that warships larger than those of Russia and Turkey would not be permitted to enter the Black Sea through the Dardanelles.

WARM POLITICAL

Federal Cabinet In

A battle between Quebec's representation in the Federal Cabinet and the three year old Quebec government's policies, was the issue. The Dominion administration was involved immediately when the Union Nationale party charged the central powers with encroachment upon Quebec autonomy. He said he stood against "conscription, assimilation and partitionism," and he accuses the Federal government of neglecting Quebec when heavy war contracts were being planned.

The leaders of the other two groups are also taking action during the week.

Adelard Godbout, the Liberal leader who was premier for a short period between Duplessis' governments was elected, denounced the premier for taking advantage of the present crisis to "create confusion and spread fear."

He appealed for rejection of the "old parties."

Personality Felt

A finger of Canada's wartime censorship regulations touched the campaign, however, when the radio broadcast of speeches delivered at political meetings was banned and the Quebec premier declared that what censors permitted only political addresses passed by the censor and delivered from studios.

The Quebec representatives in the Dominion Parliament entered the picture when Justice Minister Ernest Lapointe addressed he and other French speaking ministers saw the issue clearly drawn, a challenge which they accepted. They saw in Union Nationale victory a setback for the government and its war policy.

Support for the Federal Liberals was promised the Liberal party in Quebec by 1936 but in fact the Union Nationale the reins of provincial administration has held almost 40 years. The Ottawa Liberals will speak at a number of weekend rallies in the local area.

Financial mismanagement became another issue with the start of the campaign by Mr. Godbout, a former Union Nationale minister himself, was Agriculture Minister, when he accused the Duplessis government of having doubled the provincial debt during its term.

Ottawa Intervention

Then Paul Gouin urged the electorate to decide what he described as the opportunity to decide whether or not Quebec was to remain under the domination of financial powers, of "economic dictatorship," he called it.

The A. L. N. is not represented in the Commons which has the extreme assembly when the election was called September 14 and held 71 of 90 seats. Liberals held 11, the Nationals, led by Dr. Philippe Hamel of Quebec, five, and Union Nationale dissidents three.

Conscription is the only question on which all parties agree. All oppose it.

Resigns After Speech

The resignation of Hon. Gilbert Layton, who represented Montreal-St. George, and William Bulloch, U.N. member of the Legislature for Westmount, came after Mr. Duplessis said at Three Rivers:

"A vote for Lapointe is a vote for participation, assimilation and centralisation; a vote for Duplessis is a vote for autonomy against conscription."

When he opened his campaign at Three Rivers, the Premier addressed a record crowd, estimated at 50,000. A record crowd also beat to the Liberal leader swing into action in his home constituency of L'Islet. The attendance included a possible record vote on balloting day. In 1936 more than 540,000 voters went to the polls in a turnout unknown before in Quebec.

BEDLAM IN RING AFTER THE MASK' DEFEATS J. MAICH

Hooded Gent Gains Only Fall in Main Bout Lasting One Hour

DANIELS WINS

Spectators, Participants and Other Wrestlers in Free-for-All After Main Bout

The identity of "The Mask" still remains a mystery and secret, to-some as the Belleville wrestling fans are concerned simply because last night at the Hume Arena the "cehooded gentleman" gained the only fall in the main bout of a thrilling wrestling show that saw Joe Maich, former Canadian amateur champion of Brantford, and "The Mask" wrestle a full 60 minutes only to have the main go terminate in a free-for-all fight, out-break with officials and previous card wrestlers endeavouring to restore peace and tranquility that culminated in bedlam and mob violence.

"The Mask" won the only fall of the hour bout, after roughing Maich badly with the application of punishing arm locks, that took their toll and left the former Canadian champ in no easy shape to be tossed bodily around the ring and subsequently hurled bodily from the squared circle and counted out by Referee Cliff Paul, as Maich became hors-de-combat and unable to rise to the occasion. The fall came after 39 minutes of torrid wrestling.

After a rest Maich returned to the ring to be Pat Fagan accosted early gained a leggroed to vertebily pose. The latter, no stranger to related Maich, who later hurled "The Mask" bodily to the floor, but without results. Maich tried in vain to unmask the hooded one who was by far the aggressor, when the final bell rung to end the struggle that saw "The Mask" win as he gained the only fall in a best two-out-three fall match.

Daniels Tee Rough

Tiger Daniels, of Regina, proved he was too rough and tough for Young Griffins, Niagara Falls, as the Tiger literally pummelled the Griffins into submission in the semi-final bout to set up a grudge fight, Griffins having challenged Daniels to a return bout after having lost last night. Griffins was an early aggressor, but the rough Tiger Daniels proved too much for him despite the fact that Griffins won the initial fall. In the preliminary saw Chief Little Bear win over Alex Myers, Boston, with a press in 25 minutes.

The semi-final bout, however, produced plenty of action as Tiger Daniels roused the ire of Referee Cliff Paul, who punched the Regina rough-house gent in the jaw-mission at one stage of the conflict, Griffins won the first fall by means of tying Daniels's hands behind the back and literally slugging his way to victory and wrestling with a press. Daniels roughed matters too much for Griffins in the second round and lowered his opponent to the application of simplexed knees and elbows to win in 16 minutes with a press. Griffins took the decision on the declensive but missed a barrel roll and was pinned in the third round with a shoulder roll.

After the sixty-minute bout had sounded to terminate the final bout, that saw "The Mask" win over Joe Maich, a free-for-all battle-royal was staged in the ring as "The Mask" pinned Maich in the face with his fist and as the call to the efforts of ring officials and all of the wrestlers previously appearing on the card to restore order. The bedlam ended in a pandemonium of confusion between Tiger Daniels and Young Griffins, who, clothed in civilian clothes, staged a personal feud that saw clothes torn before order was restored by Referee Cliff Paul, who handled the three bouts in a capable manner.

New Westminster Beats St. Kitts

Vancouver, Oct. 7.—(CP)— New Westminster Adanacs won the first game of the Canadian Senior Lacrosse final series last night, defeating the Dominion champions from St. Catharines Athletics, 12-10. The three-of-five series continues Monday in New Westminster.

It was a ding-dong battle from start to finish as the lead see-sawed with Adanacs taking a winning margin only in the final quarter.

Renewing the rivalry that marked the 1938 season, the Blue Coronto last year when St. Catharines entered the final from New Westminster, Athletics took a 3-2 lead in the first quarter, but the Westminster came back strongly and at half-time led 5-4 but the eastern champions held an 8-7 margin at the three-quarter mark.

Before the game Mrs. R. I. Maitland, wife of the British Columbia Conservative Leader, presented Jimmy Douglas of Adanacs with the ahtiland Trophy, awarded him as the most valuable player in the Inter-City League during the regular schedule.

Two Championships Assured Before B.C.I. & V.S. Field Day Halted by Broken Equipment

Gord Farquharson is Senior Champion While Bill Pigden Repeats as Intermediate Titlist

NO RECORDS BROKEN

Although all events were not concluded at the 29th annual Belleville Collegiate Institute and Vocational School track and field day yesterday, two championships were won and declared, while others were conceded, as the meet adjourned from the Belleville Exhibition Park with several events unfinished. Darkening clouds and threatening weather broke in the afternoon to give the B.C.I. and V.S. 1939 field day blind weather conditions.

When the standards, used in the high jump and pole vault were broken during competition late in the afternoon, the remaining events had to be postponed until next week and at which time all school champions, including the records conceded Gordon Farquharson won the senior boys' championship with a total of 17 points, with Gerald Stafford second with 13 points. There is yet the pole vault to be held in this class, but regardless of the remaining events he has sufficient points to win the senior title.

Bill Pigden repeated for the intermiddle distance runners in this part of Canada, went the Intermediate boys' championship with as well as a mile open run. With all events completed Pigden had 18 points and Gordon Theobald second with 15 points.

In the junior group Ken Campbell is leading with ten points, while Jack Boyle is second with five. The pole vault and discus throw are still scheduled in the junior group, however.

No school records were broken at the City Grounds yesterday, despite the fact some 200 student athletes competed, and all of the competitants were considerably in the majority.

In the girls' events Betty Gilbert was found to be leading the Senior girls after winning the Intermediate girls' title last year, Betty Cook was conceded the Intermediate girls' champion while Marion Diamond was leading in the Junior class. Following the completion of the remaining events next week the individual B.C.I. field day champions will be announced.

The meet was conducted by Miss Allison and Mr. Laughlin, who are in charge of the respective sports at the B.C.I. Assisting the officials were George Stobie, Jr. acted as official starter for all events.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

There might not have been any school records broken at yesterday's B.C.I. field day, but a perfectly good sprint standard was used for high jumping and pole-vaulting, was broken off at the base and a new eight-pound shot was completely disappeared and there are no athletes at the Collegiate strong enough to toss an eight-pounder weight out of the Fair Grounds. The missing shot put is the second one to vanquish during a B.C.I. field day in successive years and George Laughlin just doesn't appreciate it. Only two school field day championships were assured. Bill Pigden repeated as Intermediate champion and won the open mile run for good measure, while a new senior champion was declared in Gordon Farquharson, who smells equally as well at track and field events. The junior title has yet to be decided and will be between Ken Campbell and Stan Royle. There were several girls' events which had to be postponed by Miss Allison owing to the broken standard, but Betty Gilbert (senior), Betty Cook (intermediate) and Marion Diamond (junior) today seem to hold a good margin in their respective classes as 1939 lassie champions of old B.C.I.

When the school body is deprived of the opportunity of attending these annual field days it seems to take much of the glamor from the entire piece. After all it's the crowd that makes sporting events and creates the keen and spirited rivalry between the contestants. In recent years it has been the practice of the officials at the Collegiate to only permit actual contestants time off from their studies to vie for school athletic honors. Yesterday the grandstand was as bare and barren as Old Mother Hubbard's well known cupboard." If the study body and their parents would take the annual B.C.I. field day more serious and turn out to encourage the individual contestants we feel assured that much better results would be attained. In other secondary schools championships during the annual field day is a gala event in the school's year and hundreds of spectators attend to vocally assist their favorites. Can it be that they're all out of step except Bellevilles?

Comes the annual time for football selections and prognostications—this week Canadian and Big Four swing into action today, while the senior O.R.F.U. goes to bat on Monday (Thanksgiving). In the latter group a number of local grid fans have signified their intentions of taking in the Montreal Westmount at Peterboro "Orfun" game in the Hilltock City. The "Orfuns" opened the season at home on a holiday this year, which should financially fatten their coffers. At Peterboro we'll call Montreal to beat the Orfuns, while Garnet Chisholm should trounce Balmy Beach in Toronto on Monday. In the senior Intercollegiate we'll call McGill to beat Toronto Varsity and despite the fact Wally Hilton and one other of Western's stars are out of today's game, we'll have to select the Mustangs over the Presbyterians in London. In the Big Four, however, Argos should beat Montreal Royals but we're requested as to the Argo injury-riddled squad. A tidy football game will be seen at Ottawa, where we call the Rough Riders to beat the Manning Trophy kids and don't say we didn't' tell you so.

Again there was lots of fun at the Hume Arena last night. As a matter of fact, there was too much activity for the employed seconds of the wrestling show, when bedlam broke loose and a general free-for-all fight resulted after the main bout, that saw "The Mask" win over Joe Maich. The situation was rather funny because "the Mask" had been at best caught in the Referee Cliff Faux raising both grapplers' hand at the end of the bout, so "the hooded gent" promptly forcefully took a sock at Maich. All of the wrestlers, who had appeared previously on the card, swarmed the ring as potential peacemakers and in the many seconds became bitter ring enemies and then the free-for-all fight we've seen in years concluded the show. In what we are satisfied in knowing is that a mean bonehre of a Mexican is coming to town next week to meet Tiger Daniels, who not only laughed Young Griffins into submission again last night, but also the other individual of practically all of last night's main bout outbreak that really was a riot.

SPORT SPICE—Babe Dahlgren, who replaced Columbia's Lou Gehrig at first for the Yankees, also duplicated Lou's art of pounding out home runs Thursday . . . . Bucky Harris fourth inning homer was the first of the current series and the only individual one. Monte Pearson hurled consistant pitching for the Yankees in the series, but Thursday marked the fourth straight series win for Pearson without having suffered a single loss. . . . Altogether Pearson has appeared in 35 2-3 innings of world series competition and has allowed only 19 hits—he has struck out 28 and walked seven in that time. . . . Today it's Lefty Gomes and Lefty Thompson who carries on his youthful shoulders the Reds' hopes.

We failed to mention the fact that Gerald Spafford was second to Gord Farquharson as senior boys' field day champion and Perry Everett, last year's champ was third. . . .Gord Theobald was the closest rival to champion Bill Pigden in the intermediate boys, with Les Pickering third. . . . Incidentally Pigden bettered two of the seniors' day record by winning the mile run and vaulting over 12 foot with apparent ease.

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 7 —(AP)— Cincinnati Reds, as they go into the third game of the 1939 World Series today, surrounded by the adulation of their own supporters, are a little tired of hearing about the sore-arm and ailing Yankee pitchers.

Red Ruffing held them to four hits in the opening game and beat them, 3-1. He said he had a splitting pain in his right elbow every time he delivered the ball.

Monte Pearson gave the National Leaguers only two blows in the second bout—shut them out 4-0. It was a beautiful performance in every sense of the word but it turns out that Monte, too, had been troubled by a sore arm most of the season, and was pitching on nerve alone.

And now, today, the Reds are up against another casualty—Vernon (Lefty) Gomez—a lefty hasn't hurled a kik in the last two weeks. He has a wrenched muscle in his right side, which makes pitching an agonizing task. But he'll be wear sticking platters over the plate spots.

Never Saw Me Idle

"I'm weary of hearing that stuff," said one of the Reds, "Sure, they've got a few hurlers with bad ears down twice. Maybe they're overworked. But I'm a little disappointed when Ruffing has to hold up his alibi beforehand, and then attach to it after the game that kind of a game. If that guy had a sore arm, I'd congratulate and I never saw the Nile in my life."

Ruffing was also ruffled when he heard this doubt had been expressed. He offered to compare his arm to any man's, in any park against blue area, and said he would bet heavily that he had the sorest salary wing in Christendom.

What the Reds feel, of course, is that the Yankees are rubbing it in. They don't mind being ticked by a Ruffing or Pearson, but they don't appreciate the idea that they are beating to an aggregation of cripples.

Those of us who came here on the train from New York with the Reds had expected the trip to be pretty glum. But we found out that Bill McKechnie's boys would be there or less bored over their set grief, that the engineer would be requested not to blow his whistle except in emergencies for fear the cripples would be the sound of sufferers. Even the Reds' players tramped through the home station.

Will Begin to Hit

It wasn't that way at all. The players stayed up almost as late as the newspapermen. They kept on insisting that, starting today, they would begin to hit.

"Those Yanks are going to be playing in our park for the next three days," said Ernie Lombardi. "Let's see how well they like that. Wait until their fielders start running up those terraces."

The terraces Ernie referred to are a phenomenon peculiar to Crosley Field. About 30 or 40 feet from the fence, the ground begins to rise sharply, and from there on the fielder chasing a fly ball is running uphill.

All are agreed that the Reds must win behind Junior Thompson today if they are to have the ghost of a chance. He is their third, their last capable pitcher. Offhand, it looks like a thin, forlorn hope for the locals, and it would be a shame for such a wild-eyed, adoring band of rooters as there are in this town to have to swallow a four-straight beating from the Yankees.

LEN WADSWORTH STILL CHAMPION

Canadian Middleweight Defeats Ray McIntyre in Torrid Bout

Timmins, Oct. 7.—(CP)—Len Wadsworth of Timmins still middleweight boxing champion today—and a little closer to evening his score with Ray McIntyre of Saint John, N.B.

The pair collided in a 10-round encounter here last night and the 156-pound defender outpointed his opponent. Timmins' knocking the 155-pound Maritimer down 12 times failed to stop the fighting fury for Wadsworth left the count three and two in favor of McIntyre, however.

In previous battles, McIntyre scored a technical knockout at Timmins and Saint John, while Wadsworth punched out a victory in Timmins, retiring the Saint John fighter of the championship at the time.

Wadsworth showed that his man right from the start last night and kept the fight in his corner. McIntyre kept coming back for more and managed to finish the fight although knocked down in the second of the third, fifth and eighth rounds, six times in the fifth and three times in the 10th.

The semi-final match ended in an eight-round decision over Tiger Hicks of Toronto, 147, over Larry Dubeau of Timmins, 149. Scotty Remage of Toronto, 121, was given a 10-round decision over Trey Yellins of Timmins, 119, and it took Stan Bailey of Timmins, 143, four-straight seconds of the first round in the preliminary to knock out Hap Smith of Montreal, 146.

Picton

Two airplanes from Kirkland Lake were busy all day Sunday in Picton carrying passengers. A large number of citizens were among those who had their first airplane ride.

A large number from Picton intending to the start of the O.D.S. enjoyed the bountiful chicken supper served by the ladies of the United Church, Waupoos, in the church basement on Sunday evening. A fine program was given in the church later in the evening.

THRILLING RALLY SAVES BOMBERS FROM A DEFEAT

Winnipeg Wipes Out 14-Point Deficit to Keep Win Record Intact

FORWARDS HELP

Wayne Sheeley Fires 35-Yard Pass and 15-Yard Run Brings Winning Touch

Calgary, Oct. 7 (CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers, staging one of the most thrilling comebacks in Western Interprovincial Football Union history, wiped out a 14-point deficit in the last half last night to defeat Calgary Bronks 18-11.

Wayne Sheley, former Augustana College quarterback, stood in centre field in the dying minutes of the game and fired a 35-yard pass to Captain Art Stevenson who raced fifteen yards for the winning score. Bronks appeared to have the game safely won when they let Winnipeg Bronks Monday, winding up the heavy week-end program.

From a second-half Calgary kick-off last night, Sheley forwarded passed to Marquardt for a 45-yard gain and then lateralled to Jack Nicklin for a major score. Greg Clark, who scored a beautiful field goal in the second quarter, converted to leave Bombers eight points behind.

Forwards Bring Touch.

With less than ten minutes to go, Sheley tossed forwards in a desperate attempt that brought two touchdowns.

The first came after a 30-yard pass was ruled complete because of interference. Then Sheley threw another 15-yard pass to Stevenson to lanky Bud Marquardt that put Winnipeg in possession of Calgary's goal-posts. Andy Bieber went over to make the count 17-14.

Winnipeg gained possession in midfield with less than two minutes to go. Sheley's brilliant pass caught Bronks' defense off guard and Stevenson took the ball about a single Calgary man within fifteen feet of him.

Calgary in Front.

Earlier Calgary moved to the front when Paul Rowe fell on Len Warren's ondds kick behind the Winnipeg goal line. Then Jimmy Gilkes and Warren brought the play to a spot from where Rowe plunged for the second touchdown of the first quarter.

Five more points came in the second after Bieber fumbled on Winnipeg's 20-yard line. The score was made on a Bim Bishing pass to Dave McKinnon over the Winnipeg goal-line.

Winnipeg held an edge in yards gained rushing, 209 against 174, and made 11 first downs to Calgary's 7. They completed five of thirteen forwards for 104 yards, as they compared with a 65-yard gain by Bronks who completed four of seven attempted forwards.

TORONTO STOCKS CLOSE

Toronto, Oct. 7—Toronto stock exchange issues moved in narrow range in light trading during today's abbreviated pre-holiday session and at the close prices were mixed. Volume approximated 126,000 shares compared with 144,000 Saturday's 204,000.

Western oils were somewhat of a market bright spot but trading even in these issues was negligible. Ahead one to four cents were Anglo Canadian, Calmont and Okalta while Home eased six cents. In the senior oils Canadian Oil eased a few points but British American and International Pete firmed fractions.

Industrials and base metals, yesterday's trading features, were neglected today. Consolidated Paper and C.P.R. eased fractionally in fair volume. Abitibi common gained around five cents on a few sales while Western Power preferred dropped a few points. Mitt other changes were confined to small fractions. Reno Credite lost a sort base metal list with a 10-cent drop. Nickel was fractionally ahead and Sudbury Basin gained a few cents. Smelters eased slightly.

Golds were dull but majority of those that appeared showed small advances. Aunor and Slade Malartic were ahead a few cents and Dome gained fractionally.

Eldorado was down seven cents at one time but regained part of the loss.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Oct. 7 (AP)—Leaders backed away in the stock market today, dropping fractions to around two points or more.

After a fairly fast opening dealings lagged. Transfers approximated 600,000 shares.

The war "scare" shares were more or less neglected although most of the group actively won the steels, and these, along with the chemicals, took the early falls.

Losers included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, Du Pont, Union Carbide, Allied Chemical, Westinghouse, Eastman Kodak — Monsanto, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Pullman, Kennecott, American Smelting, American Telephone, Consolidated Oil, Consolidated Edison and Texas Corporation.

FINLAND DEBATES MOSCOW'S INVITATION

Copenhagen, Denmark, Oct. 7—(AP)—Finland today debated an invitation to confer with Soviet Russia whose conferences with other Baltic States have extended Soviet power and influence.

The Foreign Office in Helsingfors acknowledged Russia had suggested to Finland she send a delegate to Moscow to discuss political and economic matters.

It said the Finnish government had not yet acted on the invitation.

Barrack-Room Statesmanship Says Tribune of Hitler's Speech

Incredible That Any Truce Should be Erected on This Foundation Paper States

SPEECH NOT CLEVER

New York, Oct. 7 (CP)—The New York Herald Tribune in an editorial today said that Adolf Hitler's speech was "barrack-room statesmanship", and asserted that it was incredible that any truce should be erected on this foundation.

The New York Times (Independent) spoke of the speech as an "ineffective argument for peace", and characterized it as "a tediously long and manifestly smug glorification of the force of German arms with a blunt noting to-day with regret that Poland, in whose behalf they have gone to war, has now become the "exclusive concern of Germany and Russia."

In general, United States newspapers, in their editorial comment on Hitler's so-called "peace offensive" put little faith in the proposals in view of his broken promises in the past.

The Herald-Tribune, after speaking of the Nazi leader's oratory as "only another Hitler speech", argued that the Fuehrer "has rendered all Christian hopes impossible except those of force. It is he who has sentenced a continent to the judgments of an utterly barren bloodshed."

The New York Times said Hitler's "desire for peace is undoubtedly sincere, but added: "Why should he not wish peace? He has already won his prize in Poland; why risk losing it?"

Hitler's Reichstag speech was not even a clever speech," said the newspaper. "It was not cleverly built-ed. It offered no temptation for the British Government to close or abandon the effort on which they have embarked. It suggested no way in which their premises could be altered if peace were made at once."

Both the Herald Tribune and the Times interpreted the speech as largely designed for home consumption, and the Times said it was probably the first "of what must ultimately be a long series of efforts to stiffen the morale of the German people."

CREW OUTWITS

Crew Becomes Snaick

"We left Shanghai April 7 with a Chinese crew," related Capt. Anderson. "The crew became seaick and the sails were improperly handled by the crew. We changed to run a Norwegian crew and left again April 22. We were attacked by Pirates on the Yangtze River and made for the Japanese coast. Our Chinese motor launch was sent and we were towed to Nagashima.

"We had trouble with the motor but were unsuccessful and set out again with sails. We ran into a terrific storm off the Japanese coast and with the sails blowing, put in to Kochi. From there we decided to Kobe, refueled and replenished and made another start June 1st."

"Forty-eight hours out we ran into a typhoon. Riding this out, we felt fully confident of making a successful trip with five months' provisions and with the first seventeen days of good weather we did not think of conserving food as we expected to make the trip in seventy days.

Could Not Sail by Wind

"Had weather set in and with our junk drawing only 2½ feet of water and without a keel, we could not sail by the wind, only before it.

"We first reduced rations to two meals a day but as time went on the seeming selfishness of the Pacific forced us to reduce meals to one bowl of rice per man. Water shortage also was a big problem as we boiled rice in three-quarters sea water and ate under fresh water, living on that for four days.

"We managed to catch a few minnows, a species of sea eel, for our meat requirements. After another nine days of hardship and starvation we were down to ten meals of rice and 20 pullets of coconut.

Killed Dog and Cat

"I instructed one of the sailors to kill the dog and cat to provide additional food for the morning. morning. Sept. 30, we sighted the Queen Charlotte Islands.

"On October 3 we were picked up by the United States Coast Guard Cutter (Discoverer) which replenished our stock and towed us. But too much strain was on the engines and we cut loose and decided to sail into Juneau. We left in the night and we drifted into Brooks Bay, where, as the wind was blowing in closer and closer to the rocks, the fishing boat Flying Cloud came alongside on October 4 and saved us once again and towed us to Quatsino.

"We expect to leave here in two days by tow for Seattle. Our Chinese junk has a displacement of 50 feet, 43 feet at the waterline and a beam of 11 feet. It draws 3 1-2 feet and carries 1,340 square feet of sail. It is equipped with a Chinese Diesel engine which never worked."

LITHUANIAN MISSION LEAVES FOR MOSCOW

Kaunas, Oct. 7.—(CP—Havas) — A Lithuanian mission headed by Foreign Minister Juozas Urbsys left here by plane for Moscow today to continue negotiations for a accord with the Soviet Government.

It was the second trip to Moscow this week for Foreign Minister Urbsys.

Russia 'Invites' Finland to Send Delegate to Moscow

Helsingfors, Oct. 7 (AP)—The Foreign Ministry announced today the Russian Government had suggested that Finland send a delegate to Moscow to discuss political and economic matters of mutual concern.

The Finnish Government has not yet acted on the invitation. However, Finland's Minister to Moscow, Aarno Yrjoe-Koskinen is at present conferring with Soviet officials concerning a trade agreement.

Commerce between Finland and Russia has been very small since Finland obtained her independence in 1917, but the Finns have talked of a Russian trade agreement for years.

PLOWING MATCH OPENS TUESDAY

Mile of Tents Stretch Around Ontario Hospital Grounds

Brockville, Ont., Oct. 7 (CP)—A mile of tents stretched around the Ontario Hospital grounds in the northeastern outskirts of Brockville today, placed there for the International ploughing match opening next Tuesday. The 26th annual competition will end Friday with Federal Minister of Agriculture J. G. Gardiner addresses a monster banquet.

The tents house Holstein, Ayrshire and Jersey cattle exhibits and the various farm machinery manufacturers and a display by the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission.

Some 600 entries will compete in the various classes and the $6,000 in prizes. Ploughmen will be here from as far west as Saskatchewan and from all sections of eastern Canada for the two-day farm jamboree.

The war has prevented the match from taking on a purely international flavor, James Mowbray, Bangor, County Down, Ireland, and Ted Wright, Peacock Point, Ont., King, champions of the British Isles, have been forced to cancel their entries due to the crossing.

The Governor-General, Lord Tweedsmuir, and Hon. W. M. Dewan, Ontario Minister of Agriculture, are both expected to attend Thursday.

G. Rowe Convicted Under War Act

Convicted under the War Measures Act of 1939 of making defeatist statements likely to cause dissatisfaction to His Majesty the King, Gerald Rowe, Prince Edward County, was committed for sentence by Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., in Trenton police court yesterday. Rowe is the third person to have been convicted in Magistrate Butler's courts since the declaration of war.

In prosecuting the case Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated that Rowe had entered into conversation with soldiers of the Canadian Army and had allegedly intimated they had not joined the forces through patriotism, but rather for monetary reasons. Rowe also was alleged to have said he would not fight for Britain or Canada and that "this country could get along very nicely without a king."

The prosecution also introduced soldier witnesses who testified that Rowe had given the German salute of the upraised right arm and had said "Heil Hitler."

In defence, Rowe stated he had made the "Hi-ya Hitler" and he also denied making other defamatory statements. Magistrate Worship registered a conviction and remanded the accused for sentence.

ENGINEER KILLED IN TRAIN WRECK

C.P.R. Freight Crashes Into Rear of Standing Train During Dense Fog

Chatham, Ont., Oct. 7—(CP)—A collision between two Canadian Pacific Railway freight trains a mile east of here in a dense fog early today brought death to Engineer Harold Brache of London, and injury to three others.

Freight No. 903 driven by Brache ploughed into the rear of No. 918, which was standing taking water outside the city limits about 7.15 a.m. Five cars were wrecked and telegraph poles knocked down.

Injured are:—

J. J. Robinson of London, brakeman, brain concussion and head cuts; Harold French of London, fireman, fractured ribs and bruises.

Air unidentified transient who was riding the rods.

The transient was thrown clear of the wreck. He suffered minor cuts and bruises, according to a woman at a nearby farmhouse where he was being treated.

The woman said the transient told her he was riding the rods, but she had no more information.

A carload of cattle destined for Chatham was in the moving freight train. The impact of the crash set fire to the wreckage. The cars came to rest in fields bordering the track. Traffic was halted.

C.P.R. telegraph and railway communications between London and Chatham were disrupted as a result of the collision.

Harold MacHugh, of London, conductor of the moving freight, was uninjured. The engineer of 918 is James Gordon, of London, and the conductor William R. Cushing, both of London.

It is believed that a signal to the oncoming freight warning of the crash failed. Heavy fog which was noticed in the fog, although an official statement on the cause of the accident was not immediately available.

Toronto, Oct. 7—(CP)—Canadian Pacific Railway officials here said today that cause of the train wreck at Chatham would not be determined until tomorrow at the earliest. A locomotive engineer was killed in the collision between two freight trains and three other men were injured.

Disruption of communication services in the Chatham area is hampering the investigation, officials here said.

Germany May Decide To Invade Belgium

Leeds, England, Oct. 7 (CP) — The military correspondent of the Yorkshire Post wrote today that Germany, having successively lost a series of strategic advantages on the western front, may decide to invade Belgium and the Netherlands.

"If war that is not methodical," he said, "and looks almost casual, is slowly pounded the Germans, and before they had realized that the French infantry was walking into German gun fire in the first old way they had lost covering ground behind a line of their defences.

"All indications lead to the belief that the Belgian plan for the invasion of Belgium has beenswapped

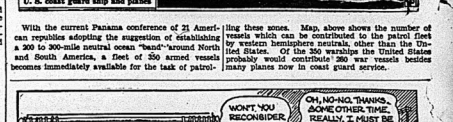
SOVIET OFFICERS REPORTED ON VISIT TO WEST FRONT

London, Oct. 7 —(CP) — The Daily Herald (Labor) today reported that a group of high Soviet officers had visited German fortifications on the western front.

The report assertedly based on information from Berlin, said the mission included members of the Soviet General Staff and officers of the Russian land and air forces. A Soviet naval group is scheduled to inspect the German Pacific coastal defences, the report said.

U. S. destroyers Moffett, McDougal.



U. S. coast guard ship and planes

With the current Panama conference of 21 American republics adopting the suggestion of establishing a 300 to 300-mile neutral ocean "band"-around North and South America, a fleet of 350 armed vessels becomes immediately available for the task of patrolling these zones. Map, above shows the number of vessels which can be contributed to the patrol fleet by western hemisphere neutrals, other than the United States. Of the 350 warships the United States probably would contribute 280 war vessels besides many planes now in coast guard service.

Canada's Scottish Battalions to Wear Kilts Overseas

Ottawa, Oct. 7.—(CP)—Canada's Scottish battalions will wear the kilt in the second Great War and will not be affected by the new regulations relating to a new battle dress for the Canadian active service forces.

Other units of the service will don the new battle dress uniform, consisting of wide trousers with gaiters, instead of puttees and a one-fitting blouse with no buttons.

Whether any alterations will be made in the tunic worn with the kilt will be made to conform to the change made in the general uniform style and relieve the Highlanders of the necessity of pinning brass buttons remains to be seen.

British Ambassador Goes to France

London, Oct. 7—(CP)—Sir Eric Phipps and William Kennard, British Ambassador to Poland, have been transferred next week where the new Polish Government is established, officials said today.

Market Hogs Within Preferred Weight Range

It is quite evident that farmers are paying more attention to marketing their hogs within the range of the preferred weights, which is the first step in the marketing of a premium product.

Farmers who make it their business to market their hogs within the live weight range of 190 pounds to 220 weighed at the farm are not only well paid, but most of the grade returns but are also pleased with the average price that they receive.

If all farmers made an united effort to market their hogs within the preferred weight range, they would at the same time limit the price fluctuations which to some extent are caused by the uneven flow of hogs to market.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the eastern district during the week of October 6, 1939, are as follows:

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By Vera Brown

CHAPTER X

Mike left Handsome with Jimmie while he went into the kitchen. It was when she came back with the ice cream that his sharp eyes saw her ring.

"Cee!" he said pointing.

Mike turned crimson. Handsome laughed delightedly. "You see? I warned you!"

Mike came over with Jimmie's ice cream.

"Darling, will you keep a secret? You're the only one who's going to know for a little while."

The boy's eyes were round: "I knew it was over my fellow! You can't fool me, Mike!"

"But you promise?"

"I promise."

Later Handsome was so kind with Mike's father, that her heart was completely won. He seemed to ignore the shabby room, was quite at home, insisted on wiping the ice cream plates for her mother.

When Mary and Jack came in, they sat at Handsome's feet to worship. Jimmie insisted that they all crowd into his room so he could hear everything. Mike kept the stone of her ring turned around in the palm of her hand and nobody noticed it. It was when the dancing eyes showed he was thrilled at being in on the secret.

Afterwards Mike came to recognize that night as the happiest in her life.

When Handsome had gone, and Mike and her father were in their little bedroom. Mary insisted on talking it all over. And it seemed hours to Mike before Mary fell asleep. When she could hear the younger girl's regular breathing, Mike got out of her bed and tucked her lovely ring under the pile of handkerchiefs in her dresser drawer.

Back in bed again, sleep was a long time coming. Now that she was alone in the dark, she was desperately afraid of what she had done.

"I can never hold him." She could not suppress that and thought.

Although Handsome was two years older than she, he seemed younger for he had been working since she was 15. The last two years at the Eureka Hotel had taught her a lot about life, and little of that was reassuring. Not that Mike had an inferiority complex. She didn't. She knew quite well she was a pretty girl, and intelligent.

But she also knew there were thousands of pretty girls in New York, girls with lovely clothes, girls who were glamorous because they spent their whole life trying to look and be glamorous. They were amusing and entertaining.

"I never look quite right. There's neve. time for smough manicures at home. And mine money enough, either. But Handsome believed in her. That was her greatest asset.

"I'll never fail him." She promised that from the bottom of her heart.

Next morning when Mike opened her eyes the sunshine streamed in the narrow window and the events of the night before seemed absurd. Mary was gone. Jack jumped out of bed and was in the shower. She took out her ring and looked at it.

"I can't believe it is all mine." She kissed it, put it away carefully again. But she could not leave its beauty-hidden. Its fire. She had to look at it once more before she started for her dancer. She'd be late. She flew into her clothes.

At the corner, Mike bought a paper. She settled back to read the account of her and Jim to the diner. She took out her ring and looked at it.

"I can't believe it is all mine." She kissed it, put it away carefully again. But she could not leave its beauty-hidden. Its fire. She had to look at it once more before she started for her dancer. She'd be late. She flew into her clothes.

At the corner, Mike bought a paper. She settled back to read the account of her and Jim to the diner. She took out her ring and looked at it.

"My offer still stands. I'll lend you the money any time you want to go to school. I know I can get you a job afterward."

Mike's eyes were dark as she answered: "You've always been kind, Mr. Jenkins. But I'm afraid now that's not what I want."

She did not explain how her life had changed. She'd hoped, if Jim Mike improved, to do what Mr. Jenkins suggested. But now things were different. By winter she'd be married to Handsome. But she could not explain that today, although she'd have liked to confide in Mr. Jenkins.

Into the midst of their conversation, Mr. Downey burst with: "Get your hat on, Mike, quick! He was puffing in his excitement. "Wish just called me from the Stadium: Handsome's pitching today against Detroit. He wants you out there."

"But how can I leave here?"

"That's all right, I'll manage. I caught Roy before he got off for the game. Wish will take care of him. Hurry up. You haven't much time. Wish will be waiting for you at the press gate."

Mike stood silent for a moment: "Must I go Alone?" She was in a sudden panic. She'd only been to the Stadium once in her life. What knowledge she had of baseball was gleaned from sand lot games in which Jack played, and from the newspapers.

"You take her, Mr. Jenkins," Downey suggested. "Wish wants me to come, but we've got a meeting here this afternoon with the trust company receiver, I can't leave."

"I'll do it. Come on, Mike. Step lively."

Mike ran toward the clock room. "Take the subway, it's quicker," Downey called. "You've got time enough if you go right away. I'll go and phone Wish."

He disappeared toward his office on the run. In the dressing room Mike fumbled with her old hat. It would not go on right, and she gave up in despair.

Suppose Handsome lost today? What would it do to him? She wished desperately she'd done her best frock.

"Forget black!" she said aloud as she looked at herself impatiently in the mirror. Then she came back to Mr. Jenkins.

"I'm ready. Let's go."

They made a dash for the Eighth Avenue line down the block. By good luck, they caught the incoming express which was already packed. She was glad the rear of the subway made conversation difficult. As the train plowed at intervening stations, Mike could hear snatches in the somewhat cryptic jargon of baseball. Jenkins reached over and patted her hand. "You're going to be swell. Don't worry. The kid's all right."

"Of course," Mike assented, but her lips trembled. It was stifling in the train. When they came to change to the local for the stadium, Jenkins grabbed Mike and made a flying wedge of his big frame as they forced their way through the crowds on the platform. Her scant five feet one left her smothered in the mob. But Jenkins got them into that local train somehow. They were squeezed into a corner.

Mike's hat was over one ear. She felt thoroughly miserable. At the stadium stop, the crowds swept the man and the girl along on a rising tide. Everybody broke into a run.

"It's almost game time. We've got to go around on the other side," Jenkins shouted into her ear. The line-up at the press gate appalled them, but Wish saw them before they saw Wish.

"Get them through." Wish ordered the gate man, and in a moment, Mike and Jenkins were on the concrete ramp inside the park.

Wish managed to introduce Jenkins to Wish. There wasn't any time for conversation, for Wish hurried them along into the grandstand. He did not bother with an usher, but piloted them straight to the railing by the New York dugout.

Mike did not know they were sitting in Ace Barnes' box, nor that the stunning girl sitting in front of them with ashes over her arm was Mrs. Barnes.

CHAPTER XI

Men were smoothing off the diamond.

We're just in time." Wish slumped into his seat, pulled his hat over his eyes. He waved at Harper, standing up in front of the dugout, but Mike did not see that.

The boys were trotting out to take their positions for play. Mike sat rigid, her hands clenched in her lap.

Handsome came last. Over in the bleachers there was a roar.

"They like him," Wish murmured.

It was the first time Mike had ever seen Handsome in uniform. It was plain why, from the first, the sports writer had found the proper nickname for Larry. He wore baseball uniform with an air. It had been tailored deftly to his tall, broad shouldered figure.

Handsome stepped onto the pitching mound. The hot afternoon sunshine poured over the green of the diamond. The grandstands were a blot of black shadow with yards of blurred white faces. Ace went out and spoke to his new pitcher. Handsome glanced Duffy way. "Can he see us?"

"Sure. He can see your red hair. Couldn't miss!" Wish mumbled, intent on the scene before them.

The game was on. The first ball Handsome pitched was a strike. The batter missed. Mike relaxed a little. Wish sat motionless.

The first inning! When it was over, Mike's forehead was damp and she took off her gloves and wiped her hands on her handkerchief.

"I can't stand it!" she moaned. Wish did not even turn his head. Handsome had got through the first inning of that inning finally. No score. But the tension had been great. He was uncertain, nervous. He kept getting into difficulties that seemed impossible of solution. But he squeezed through with luck and some fine fielding.

The batting order seemed were roaring, so relieved were they to get that half inning finished without disaster. As the boys came back to the dugout Ace walked beside Handsome, talking to him.

Handsome looked up, saw Mike just before he stepped down into the dugout. He waved at her, and she felt terribly elated.

Mr. Jenkins was polishing his glasses vigorously. Then they all ment the tension was gone.

"A dangerous team, Detroit! They're our only worry. We've got to lick them." Wish said, "that is if we're going to stay in the pennant race. Dusty's been the only boy who could do it."

Detroit was out in the field. Ace led off the batting for New York. The gasp from the west was not any too settled today. Their pitcher was a veteran, tired, struggling. But he was smart. At the end of the first inning, the score stood, nothing to nothing.

Wish took out a cigar and lighted it. Handsome, as he walked out onto the field, looked composed and unruffled. The second inning was beginning.

The first ball Handsome pitched was hit for a brisk single. Mike closed her eyes. The second man got on first base.

"Oh, oh Wish!" She held his arm tight.

"Now, wait a minute. Don't give up hope yet."

Jenkins groaned: "If he'll just settle down!"

Welsh Gunner, With His Plane in Flames, Shoots Down Enemy

London, Oct. 6 (CP Cable)—An eye-witness writing from "Somewhere in France" today told how a Welsh gunner escaped from a bullet-ridden airplane, his clothing afire, after bringing down an enemy machine.

The account, released by the Ministry of Information, told how the gunner took to his parachute over Germany and was sniped at by the Germans as he floated to a landing between the lines.

Both German and French Algerian soldiers raced toward him but the French got there first and carried him to safety.

The gunner told his story from a bed in a medical receiving station. "It's all in a day's work in the R.A.F.," he said.

The Germans lost four machines when a British squadron, making a reconnaissance flight over the Westwall was attacked by three formations of six each of German Messerschmidts. The R.A.F. planes were outnumbered "by more than three to one."

The Welsh gunner was quoted as saying one German plane "absorbed a lot" of his machine" and a "terrific dust" began.

"I looked around and saw the observer in a crumpled heap in his seat. He had been shot through the head."

Started to Catch Fire

The gunner said his plane started to catch fire and "just as my clothing began to smoulder" he shot down a German plane which offered a "lovely target."

"If I hadn't been on fire I could have easily shot down two more," he added.

Besides the one he hit, the gunner said, "My pals accounted for three."

The gunner dazedly pulled the string of his parachute in diving sling from the cockpit and was pulled out of the plane.

The gunner said he fainted after hitting the tail of the plane, then recovered to see soldiers shielding about him.

Above German Lines

"I was above the German lines and they were shooting at me," he said.

He landed unhit in no man's land and saw the Germans leave their trenches and come toward him, the gunner related. Then French Algerian soldiers appeared from the other side and began to fire at the Germans.

"One man (an Algerian) came running straight toward me as hard as he could go. He picked me up, slung me over his shoulder and staggered with me into the woods. I was safe but it was a near thing."

WELLAND WOMAN BURNS TO DEATH

Imprisoned in Car When Vehicle Strikes Guard Rail and Turns Over

Welland, Oct. 6—Imprisoned in her automobile when it overturned and caught fire, Mrs. Ivan McCoombs, 25, was burned to death today.

Police said the car struck the side railing of a wooden bridge at Beaverdams near here, careened back on the road, turned over and burst into flame. Part of the bridge railing was jammed against the car door preventing the escape of Mrs. McCoombe.

Surviving are her husband, Ivan McCoombs, a six-year-old daughter, Dorothy; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Dills of Fonthill, and a brother and sister.

MRS. A. VINCENT BRIGHTON, KILLED

Woman in Car Struck by C.N.R. Freight Train and Carried 100 Feet

Cobourg, Ont., Oct. 6—(CP)—An inquest was ordered today on the death of Mrs. A. Vincent, 80, of nearby Brighton, whose motorcar was struck by the locomotive of a Canadian National Railways freight train last night and carried 100 feet.

Mrs. Vincent was alone in her car at the time. It is believed that a train stopped on the siding prevented her from seeing the north bound freight. Two brothers and a sister survive her.

War Supply Board Canadian Agent for British Mission

Ottawa, Oct. 6—(CP)—Canada's War Supply Board has been made Canadian agent for the British Government's purchasing mission, now here for the placing of munitions and war supply contracts, the Dominion Government announced today.

Under the authority of an Order in Council, the Board will place orders in Canada for supplies required by the British Ministries of Supply and Defence.

In making the announcement, the government stated that the possibility of the war supply acting as agent for the British Government had been anticipated in setting the board up. The necessary authority had now been provided.

The request that the War Supply Board be empowered to act as purchasing agent in Canada for the British Government was made by the British purchasing mission in a letter to Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

CANADA ATTACKED!

Back from Europe, Father Maurice Sheehy, head of the department of religious education at Washington's Catholic University, says that "before this war is over" Hitler will attack Canada.

This, to many, may sound fantastic. But what we have to remember is that this is a fantastic war made by fantastic people in a fantastic world.

Two years ago, we remember, Mr. J. L. Garvin, one of the ablest of British publicists, wrote in the London Sunday Observer that it was "fantastic" to imagine Hitler overrunning Czechoslovakia and Poland, threatening Rumania. So impressed was the Journal with Mr. Garvin's reasoning, which assumed that Hitler could not be entirely a madman, it reproduced his article.

So there is little sense in saying that an attack on Canada by Hitler would be made, fantastic. The answer, simply, is that Hitler is mad; fantastic.

And one thing is certain. It is that Hitler, victorious over England and France, would attack Canada. With England and France at his feet, he would dominate the earth; attempt to rule the earth. Can anybody imagine that Hitler with this power, with the two great democracies smashed, would permit Canada to return to her old peace-time position? That our resources wouldn't be demanded as tribute be at his mercy?

Let us not delude ourselves.—Ottawa Journal.

TWIN CALLS BROTHER "FISH-FACE", FIGHT STARTS 50 BOYS ARRESTED

SURRENDER NOTHING

Will irance and all other nations who will march forward in defence of freedom, we fear nothing. We surrender nothing. We fight for the liberty of mankind. No allies ever went into battle for a finer or more splendid cause. Our resolution and strength are limitless. Again and the nations have tried their might against us. Again and again we have brought them to the dust before our feet. And Britain is British yet.—London Sunday Express.

South Africa Does Not Enter Scheme Preferring to Train Its Pilots at Home — Canada Well Equipped for Task

By J. F. SANDERSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 10 (CP)—Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air, announced in the House of Commons today that Canada will be used as an advance training centre for pilots and airmen of all parts of the British Empire.

Outlining the achievements and objects of the Royal Air Force since the outbreak of war, the air minister explained the new set-up which will make Canada the air capital of the Empire.

The governments of Britain, Australia, New Zealand and Canada have agreed to set up preliminary training schools in their own countries. Graduates of these schools will be sent to Canada for advanced technical training.

No Accurate Estimate.

The scheme will mean that many thousands of pilots and airmen will be trained in Canada, but no accurate estimate of the total could be obtained. It was thought likely the number would exceed 25,000 annually.

Canada on War Footing In Less Than a Month After Entering Struggle

(By Frank Flaherty)

Ottawa, Oct. 10.— (CP)— One month after entering the struggle against Nazi Germany Canadian economy is on a war footing, Canadian Federal politics has assumed a war-time aspect and the armed forces of the sea, land and air speed preparations for combat.

The first month of Canadian participation has brought no clash between Canadian and enemy forces but it saw upwards of 60,000 today that Canada will be used as an advance training centre for pilots and airmen of all parts of the British Empire.

Sentiment Spreads to Alter Neutrality Act

Washington, Oct. 10 (AP)—Widespread sentiment has developed among United States Senate members for amendment of the administration neutrality Act legislation to permit American ships to carry on normal trade with British and French possessions in the Pacific and Indian Oceans and the China Sea.

Both on and off the floor several Senators expressed belief the legislation could be amended so as to allow American lines to continue such commerce without the risk of involving the United States in war.

Shipping experts who conferred with Senators Pittman, (Dem., Nev.), Downey, (Dem., Cal.), Borah (Rep., Idaho) and others said that the diversion of one-half of the $500,000,000 in goods annually exchanged between the United States and the possessions of the European belligerents in the Pacific by their vessels were carried in American bottoms.

Even in wartime, the neutrality bill would prohibit American ships from carrying any goods to ports of warring nations.

FRENCH REPULSE MANY ATTACKS WITH RIFLE FIRE

Germans Try to Dislodge French South of City of Saarbruecken

DALADIER TO SPEAK

Paris, Oct. 10—(AP)—French troops were reported today to have turned back German infantry assaults south of the strategic city of Saarbruecken with hand grenades and rifle fire.

The Nazi thrusts, these reports indicated, apparently were aimed at breaking French lines tightening on the Siegfried defences and German raiding parties also sought to take prisoners.

In both objectives, French dispatches said, the Germans failed.

The Germans were said to have fought desperately before retiring under a lashing fire. Saarbruecken, German industrial city around which the operations centred, is near the middle of the western front.

A heavy artillery battle, launched by the Germans Sunday and answered by French batteries in a 90-mile section from the Luxembourg border to Lauterbourg, provided a background.

Terse reports of the fighting were contained in a communique issued this morning by the French General Staff, which said that "enemy patrols are still very active, notably east and west of the Saar." The communique noted "reciprocal artillery action in the same regions."

While reports from the front indicated the Germans were gradually employing larger units in assaults in the Saarbruecken sector, French observers said it was impossible to say whether the increased Nazi activity was a prelude to a major offensive.

There was no indication the French planned an attempt to push their lines further into German territory before winter sets in.

From the general tone of the press it appeared French military leaders would be content to hold gains they already have made and let winter and the British naval blockade take their courses.

New Drug May Aid Medical Science In the Conquering of Influenza

By STEPHEN McDONOUGH
Associated Press Science Writer

Washington, Oct. 10.—(AP)—The possibility that medical science at last has found a method of conquering influenza was disclosed today by the Public Health Service.

The new drug called Sulfapyridine, already widely used in treating pneumonia, may prove to be used as a preventive of the flu, according to Miss Margaret Pittman, acting acute bacteriologist at the National Institute of Health.

Miss Pittman told a baby gave the clue to the Sulfapyridine method of controlling the cause, said Miss Pittman in her report. The baby developed inflammation in the eyes and ears and pneumonia. In addition to pneumonia germs, the baby showed evidence of influ enza in his lungs, throat, ears and eyes.

Dr. J. H. McLeod of Washington, Director of the Health Institute, administered Sulfapyridine immediately.

"Within 24 hours the child showed marked improvement, followed by a rapid and complete recovery," Miss Pittman said.

Experiments Summarized

Such success led Institute scientists to begin immediate experiments on mice. Their results were summarized in these statements:—

1. "Sulfapyridine was effective in protecting mice against experimental infections of non-type-specific pneumococcus, type III pneumococcus which causes influenza.

2. "Sulfapyridine was effective in protecting mice against experimental infections of non-type-specific pneumococcus, type III pneumococcus which causes influenza.

3. "Sulfapyridine did not prevent the bacteria from entering the blood stream, but it apparently retarded their increase and thereby gave the natural defence forces could overcome the germs.

"Two groups of mice were infected with the bacteria that cause pneumonia," Miss Pittman said. "One group received Sulfapyridine. The other received varying amounts of whole blood from animals that had promptly, and some of the treated mice accumulated. In the treated group the number which lived was directly proportional to the amount of the drug administered, Miss Pittman said.

None of those which received only one milligram of the drug survived the experiment. In other experiments in the series, 100 per cent of the mice which were given as much as eight milligrams some through alive. They apparently were not affected by doses of the germs 10 times greater than the minimum ordinarily needed to kill them.

"The influence of Sulfapyridine on the survival of mice parallels the rapid recovery of the baby following treatment with the drug, Miss Pittman said.

WAR TO CONTINUE UNTIL PEACE IS CERTAIN-DALADIER

Taken Up Arms Against Aggression Says Premier in Radio Address

A JUST CAUSE

Paris, Oct. 10.—(AP via radio)—Premier Daladier tonight declared France had "taken up arms against aggression" and would not lay them down "until the world has certain peace."

"Under the circumstances," he added, "we once more call upon the French people to make efforts to surmount their common dangers."

The speech was described in advance as an answer to Adolf Hitler's peace proposals.

"The French," Daladier said were "willing to make sacrifices for the safety of western civilization.

"Neither France nor Great Britain has embarked on any war of conquest. They accepted that war because others refused to impose domination of Europe.

"Austria was one of the first victims of this domination. . . . x x x The peace that Germany offers now is the fruit of ruse and violence. There will, however, be a real peace in the future.

Against Aggression

"We have taken up arms against aggression and we will not lay them down again until the world has certain peace."

"Alone Austria, Hitler said he had no more territorial demands. After that came Czecho-Slovakia, and Chancellor Hitler announced he had no more territorial demands. And then came Poland.

"Every six months Germany makes new territorial demands and then says she is satisfied.

"Far from bringing about a lasting peace we must fight against the abuses of force.

"A security of nations can come about only by mutual understanding devoid of all surprises.

"The time has arrived when a territorial conquest brings happiness to people.

Refuse Bread Cards

"Wars bring about bread cards and food cards, and our eating is limited. But one holds in horror such servitude.

"I affirm again solemnly that we are fighting for the right and to fight until we obtain a guarantee of peace.

"If we demobilize now, again in six months we might have to face another aggression.

"If we called for peace now and then in six months sent our men back to the lines under the bombardment of German planes no Frenchman would pardon us.

"The German soldiers in the trenches must be saying to themselves perhaps our Government opposed Versailles. Our Government has also taken Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Poland.

"The cause which the French soldier is defending is a just cause and one of honor."

The French Government will show itself worthy of the confidence extended to it by all of its sons."

Freak Trout Has 2 Mouths, 1 Throat

Meaford, Oct. 10 — (CP) — George Washbrook of Toronto tells this fish story, but he's got the alleged fish to prove it.

Fishing yesterday, he caught a seven-pound trout in Meaford bay with two mouths and two sets of teeth. The oddity had but one pair of eyes and the two mouths led into one throat and stomach.

CHAMBERLAIN TO MAKE REPLY ON THURSDAY

Entire Siegfried Line Photographed by British Airmen

PLANES SIGHT SUBS

Some of 34 Attacks on Enemy Submarines 'Undoubtedly Successful'

London, Oct. 10 (CP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain today postponed from Wednesday until Thursday the House of Commons speech in which he is expected to reply to Adolf Hitler's peace overtures.

Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, told the House of Commons the postponement had been decided upon in order to allow fuller consultation with the Dominion governments.

Immediately following Sir John's announcement, Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air, in a report on activities of the Royal Air Force declared that complete photographic map of the Siegfried Line" had been made.

During the first four weeks of the war he said submarines were sighted by aircraft on 72 occasions and 34 attacks were delivered, some of which were "undoubtedly successful."

GERMANY USES PRINTING PRESS TO FINANCE WAR

German Currency Circulation Shows Huge Increase in Past Year and in August

EXPERTS GUARDED

Ottawa, Oct. 10 (CP)—Huge increases in German currency circulation within the last year, and particularly last August attracted the attention of financial experts here today and gave rise to a belief Germany is freely using the printing press to meet its war needs.

According to the League of Nations monthly bulletin of Statistics German Reichsbank notes in circulation at the end of August totalled 37,307,000,000 marks, compared with 8,589,000,000 at the end of August, 1938, and 24,707,000,000 at August 1938.

This in one month of August, this year, the note circulation increased 1,918,000,000 Reichmarks while bank deposits increased by 1,458,000,000.

The value of the Reichsmark is approximately 40 cents Canadian. This equivalent of $767,000,000 has been injected into German currency in August.

This increase is considered entirely out of line with what might be expected owing to increased need for currency due to larger Government payrolls and the increased industrial activity consequent upon war effort. The figure inevitably leads to the conclusion Germany is attempting to finance the war by inflation.

Experts Guarded

Some financial experts here were guarded in their comments, however, and stated factors about which no solider opinion on the knowledge might contribute to the increase and mitigate its inflationary character. One such factor would be hoarding.

It was thought people are hoarding money the increase due to hoarding would not be inflationary. Money hoarded is taken out of circulation and does not contribute to the rise in prices which is the inevitable consequence of inflation.

Inflationary methods of financing, in the opinion of authorities, may be used sometimes for short periods with great success, but then they might have been started in Germany in the belief the war would be of short duration and would end with the conquest of Poland.

Had that been the case it might have been possible for German economy to recover speedily from the large injection of new currency it received in the last 12 months.

'FIGHT IT OUT' IF OFFER REFUSED SAYS HITLER

Hitler Declares Decision of Peace or War Rests With Others

Berlin, Oct. 10 (AP)—Adolf Hitler declared today that if Germany's "readiness for peace" was declined Germany was determined "to take up the fight and fight it out one way or the other."

"In a few weeks the state which thought it could threaten German interests most insolently (Poland) has been demolished—thanks to our soldiers and our military strategy," Hitler declared.

"What the future may bring we do not know. But of this we are certain: no power on earth ever again will be able to force Germany to her knees.

"They will not defeat us militarily, economically or physically."

Opens Winter Relief Campaign.

Cheering greeted this declaration, delivered in a speech in Berlin's huge sports palast opening the annual Nazi winter relief campaign.

"Before us stands the eternal life of our people," he said. "Nothing can shake us. Nothing can bring us to despair. On the contrary whatever fate the world may choose, that it will get.

"The way Adolf Hitler can not be more different than that behind us. In pursuing this way we are strengthened by the fact that we have achieved a community of spirit in our nation."

Referring to his Reichstag speech of last Friday, Hitler said he had given "expression to our readiness for peace".

Berlin Excited Over Erroneous Armistice Rumor

Berlin, Oct. 10 (AP)—Rumors that the Allies had asked for an Armistice, that "the Generalissimo (Churchill) Government" in Britain had resigned and King George had abdicated caused excitement in Berlin for an hour this morning until they were denied by DNB, the German News Agency.

DNB said the rumors were spread by certain "Secret Service agents." One persistent report was that a German radio station had broadcast news of an Armistice—to be in effect until Oct. 18—but the broadcasting station denied it.

The rumors caused numerous telephone inquiries to the Associated Press Office, including one from the Austrian Legation. But no Grown Prince of Germany, others from Japanese and Italian correspondents, officials of the Chamber of Commerce bankers and attorneys.

Any Precipitate Offer to Mediate Not Welcome Says U. S. Press

New York, Oct. 10—(AP)—A cross-section of editorial opinion in United States newspapers indicated today that any precipitate offer by President Roosevelt to act as mediator between warring nations would not be welcomed.

The Detroit Free Press (Independent) said "Many symptoms show that Europe is recoiling from war."

The Kansas City Star (Independent) said acceptance by Mr. Roosevelt of the role of mediator would "put the United States in the political affairs with which it is not equipped to cope."

"Once in those affairs, this country would be expected to play a role to guarantee the settlement and police Europe, but that is what public sentiment is not prepared to undertake."

The Detroit Free Press (Independent) said that "Mr. Roosevelt is most likely to have an opportunity to try his hand at peace-making if he maintains an attitude of passive neutral receptivity until London, Paris and Berlin intimate that they feel ready to have him arbitrate their quarrel."

Sees Europe Recoiling

The St. Louis Post-Dispatch (Independent) said "Many symptoms show that Europe is recoiling from war."

"Hitler even said he was willing to disarm to abandon the implements of force. Can some way be found to make that more than an empty phrase? Cannot the allies make counter-proposals? They would at least gain time in which some solution might be found. Perhaps the Pope or the monarchs of Scandinavia could take the initiative in the formulation of a peace plan acceptable to neutral countries of Europe."

9 Lifeless Bodies And Car Wreckage Strewn Over Track

Believed Driver of Car Failed to Notice Approaching Fast Passenger Train

KILLED INSTANTLY

Woman Motorist Accompanied by Friend Taking Children to Nearby School

Toronto, Oct. 10 (CP)—Nine persons, including seven school children, were killed today when a motor car collided with a Canadian Pacific Railway passenger train at a level crossing near here.

The crash occurred at a crossing on Brown's line, in Etobicoke Township immediately west of Toronto when the northbound car ran into the locomotive of the westbound train. The dead:

MRS. GORDON BROWN, driver of the car, and her daughter, MARION, 7.

MISS MILDRED TAYLOR, twin sister of Mrs. Brown.

MARGUERITE TIBANDO, 11.

ANDREW TIBANDO, 7.

LUCY TIBANDO, 5.

GLADYS DAVIS, 11.

VERNA DAVIS, 9.

JOYCE BOYLE, 10.

Driver Unhurt in Accident

Miss Taylor lived in Toronto while families of the other victims live just north of the new Toronto-Hamilton fourlane middle road highway.

Police said Mrs. Brown apparently had stopped her car while an eastbound train passed and started up again unaware of the approaching westbound train. The eastbound train is believed to have obscured her view.

Mrs. Brown was driving the children to the Swamp School near the Dixon Farm at Islington. The car was demolished by the train. Brown's Line when the crash occurred, strewing the bodies of its occupants along the right of way for a quarter of a mile.

There was a tenth victim, a pet dog.

Sickening Sight

Robb Webb of Toronto, a passenger on the TRAIN, said the scene following the crash was a "terrible sight."

"I saw about four or five bodies lying around as I got off the train and it sickened me so I climbed right back into the coach," Webb said.

"The train stopped quickly with a terrific grinding noise following the impact.

Webb said he was on a train several weeks ago when it was involved in another crossing accident in which a man was killed.

Tony Miles, garage operator at Islington, said the automobile's body was littered for a quarter-of-a-mile.

Thomas Stanford, helper on the farm of Gideon Silverthorne, was ploughing close to the crossing when the crash occurred. But he said he did not hear any noise because there was an accident and did not know it had happened until a few minutes later.

Scarcity of Food Held Cause of Soviet Desire for Peace

Moscow, Oct. 10—(CP Havas)—Lengthening breadlines' in Russian cities are among the Kremlin's real but unofficial reasons for urging immediate peace, foreign observers believe.

Prolongation of the war would mean continued mobilization of men, trucks and horses and further confusion of the transportation system, said foreign observers reading between the lines of today's call for peace published by the Government newspaper Isvestia.

With the year's crops far below those of 1938, the peasants fear soldiers may not be released for harvesting. Bread and meat are increasingly difficult to procure here.

Under these circumstances, and since the Soviet Union believes she has every reason to expect to hold the gains war has brought her, the Isvestia's appeal for an end to hostilities was considered hardly surprising.

"War or peace—that is the question," the newspaper said. "Champions of war slogan, 'war to final victory,' also be backing further war: others are in favor of war and against peace.

"But for whose benefit is this war waged for domination of the world? In any case, not for the benefit of the working class. The working class can only suffer from the war."

The 63-year-old Federal Minister who has represented Quebec constituencies in the House of Commons for 35 years, charged that Premier Maurice Duplessis is taking the Quebec electorate to a verdict against the Dominion Government, "a hostile and clinical vote of want of confidence."

Christian Science Thanksgiving Service Is Observed

A Thanksgiving Day service was held by Christian Science Society of Belleville in Cobbledown Temple at eleven o'clock on the morning of Thanksgiving Day.

The service opened with the congregation singing the hymn "In mercy, in goodness and love" "Love Our King," No. 150 in the Christian Science Hymnal.

The Thanksgiving Proclamation by the Governor General of Canada was then read by the First Reader.

The Scriptural selections were from Psalms 86:1-6, and Jo. 15: 1-8; and 16. They were read by the First Reader.

After the Scriptural selections, the congregation united in silent prayer which was followed by the recognition of the Lord's Prayer, with its spiritual interpretation from the Christian Science text book, Science and Health with key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy.

Hymn No. 342, "This is the day the Lord hath made, be glad, give thanks, rejoice", was then sung by the congregation.

The lesson-sermon for Thanksgiving Day given by the Christian Science Quarterly and read in all Christian Science churches in Canada and many other parts of the world followed the second hymn.

The subject of this lesson-sermon was "Thanksgiving", and had for the Golden Text: "Rejoice evermore. Pray without ceasing. In everything give thanks: for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you." I Thessalonians 5: 16-18.

After the responsive reading of Bible passages the Second Reader read the citations chosen from the Bible, while the First Reader, read the co-relative passages from Science and Health. After the lesson-sermon had been concluded a solo was sung.

Testimonies appropriate to the occasion were then given by Christian Scientists in the congregation. This period was completely filled by expressions of gratitude for healings and other help received during the year.

The closing hymn was No. 199, "Now thank we all our God, with grateful hearts and voices," and was followed by the Scientific Statement of Being from the Christian Science text book, and the co-relative passage from 1 John 3: 1-3 by the First Reader.

The meeting was concluded with the Benediction.

DON DALRYMPLE MOVES TO SARNIA

Assistant Manager Presented With Smoking Set Before Departure

Don. Dalrymple, assistant manager of Zellers Ltd., in this city, has received a well merited promotion being moved to Sarnia as assistant manager, assuming his new post today. Don is a local boy, who has made good and his many friends in the city will wish him success in his new position. He entered the employ of Zellers a couple of years ago as stock keeper and graduated to assistant manager. He was well liked by his employers and a large clientle of the store. On Saturday evening the staff gathered at the back of the store and presented Don with a beautiful smoking set before his departure to Sarnia. Morley Weyman, manager of the store, spoke in glowing terms of Don's ability.

Mr. B. H. Lewis, member of the Halifax store, took over the position of assistant manager in the Belleville store today.

Police Blotter

The apprehension of several inebriates kept the city police busied over the week end. Two such men were taken into custody as the result of their failure to pay for a taxi bill, which they had incurred. Not only was the taxi bill paid at the police station, but charges of breach of the Liquor Control Act were imposed.

Another man found himself in a similar position after refusing to pay for food received at a local restaurant late last night. Besides having to pay for the meal a charge of intoxication will be preferred against this person, who gave Picton as his address.

Three members of the Royal Canadian Air Force and two local citizens were escorted to the police station by P. C. Wright last night following altercations and a near fight near the City Hall late last night. The "soldier boys" had taken some exception to remarks made by the civilians, following some actions of the Airmen, police stated. All concerned were warned to keep the peace and be of good behaviour before being given their liberty.

"Motor traffic was not as heavy as we expected for a holiday week end," Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine revealed today as he stated there had not been a single major motor accident in the Belleville area over Thanksgiving. There was also a marked decrease in the number of transients seeking shelter in Belleville during the same-week end period.

Air and Sea Patrols Stand Guard Against Any Surprise Manoeuvre Of German Fleet Now Bottled Up

Every Precaution Taken to Prevent Germans from Turning Raiders Loose to Prey Upon Shipping

REPULSE ATTACK

Squadron of German Fleet Attempted Sally Into North Sea but Before Engaged Darkness Enables Enemy to Escape

London, Oct. 10.—(CP) —The threat of German naval activity in the North Sea, broadened by clashes between British warships and Nazi bombing planes, spurred the Royal Navy to new vigilance today.

Air and sea patrols stood guard against any surprise manoeuvre by the German fleet, now bottled up in the Kiel Canal and the Baltic.

The British Press said the fleet was taking every precaution to prevent the Germans from turning raiders loose in the Atlantic to prey upon shipping.

Despite German claims to the contrary, British naval experts said all enemy attempts to navade the North Sea patrol from the air had failed.

Anti-aircraft guns, the Admiralty said in a communique last night, were successful again yesterday in turning back German bombers which made repeated attacks on British warships.

Raiders Shot Down

The communique did not say whether any of the air raiders had been shot down.

(Dispatches from Esbjerg, Denmark, said two German warplanes had made forced landings yesterday off the coast. The crews were interned. One of the crews was said to have set fire to its plane before abandoning it.

Gleports from Bergen, Norway, said that sounds resembling heavy cannonading from the North Sea were heard twice yesterday by inhabitants of Algrov Island, 46 miles south of Bergen.)

The Admiralty also said that a German naval squadron which had closed strength had attempted a sally into the North Sea Tuesday. The squadron was spotted by British patrol planes, the communique said, off the southwest coast of Norway, not far from the scene of the famous Great War battle of Jutland.

Darkness Assists.

"Our forces endeavored to engage it but darkness enabled the enemy to escape," the Admiralty said.

(A French success in sea warfare was reported last night in a communique from Paris, which said a French boat had attacked "an enemy submarine with success".)

In the House of Commons yesterday Mr. Chamberlain said France and Britain's war purposes "have more than once been stated by both governments", and added: "No doubt as time goes on, both governments will consider whether their war aims should be stated in more specific form."

The French and British governments were reported in close consultation on the subject of a reply to Hitler's peace overture. Chamberlain was expected to voice his reply when he gives parliament his sixth weekly war report tomorrow.

FRUIT-A-TIVES The Liver Tablet

David Lloyd Gorge summoned his council for peace and reconstruction to a private meeting Thursday. This was described by the Daily Mail as a move to "test the support for a national peace campaign".

Advocates Conference.

Lloyd George, voicing fears that war would prove long and costly with Germany tapping Soviet Russia's supplies of war materials, has advocated a conference "of all the great powers" to settle European issues.

The government announced it was purchasing the whole supply of staple crops grown in Britain for next year's harvest at prices to be fixed "in the light of prevailing circumstances".

The press discussed editorially Russia's moves in Northern Europe.

The Times in an editorial on Soviet pressure on the Baltic States said that Finland's site and geographical position gave her an advantage not enjoyed by Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania, on the south shore of the Baltic.

"She belongs indeed to the Scandinavian rather than to the Baltic group," the Times said. "In recent years particularly close ties have been drawn close between Finland and Sweden, strengthened by the historical and cultural connections of one as of the other are with western Europe."

More Apparent

The Manchester Guardian said: "It would seem that in the arrangements between Germany and Russia, while Finland is assigned to Russia as in her sphere of influence, Sweden is assigned to Germany, so that any attempt on the part of Sweden to help Finland against the Russians would develope "into a real menace."

The Daily Herald said that Fuehrer Hitler's "anxiety for an Armistice on his own terms became more than ever apparent and the world waits to discover the reason."

"It is not that Hitler has been converted overnight into a pacifist. It is not that his pact of friendlance with Russia warms his heart. For, in fact, the westward advance of Russia is a definite menacing to Germany every day. Hitler's real motive is the knowledge that he cannot fight Britain and France successfully until he has had a little more time to expand his land forces and to develop his sources of raw materials in the east. For Britain has broken the Nazi submarine attacks in an astonishingly short time, a fact which that has also doubtlessly noted."

The Basel correspondent of The Daily Mail reported that the Rhine is rising rapidly and threatening to inundate parts of the German Westwall.

The correspondent said the German General Staff is concerned over the sudden rise of the river, which followed eight days of almost continuous rain.

LAPOINTE STAKES

"I have stated that I would abide by the decision of the Province and I am determined to abide by it." he said. "I will not remain there (in the Cabinet) against your will; my colleagues from Quebec in the Cabinet will not continue in office against your will."

(The other three Quebec Cabinet Ministers in the Dominion Government are Postmaster General Power, Works Minister Cardin and Hon. Raoul Dandurand, Government leader in the Senate.)

Sows Seeds of Conflict

Mr. Lapointe charged the election campaign in Quebec "already has sown the seeds of conflict and division which may have irreparable consequences. Elsewhere, all spiritual values have been put at the service of the state. In Quebec, an election takes the state to task.

"At a time when the public must be reassured, Mr. Duplessis strives to frighten them. This election adventure is an act of national sabotage."

Mr. Lapointe compared Mr. Duplessis' action in calling an election in protest against the Government's war measures when all other provincer have accepted them and promised their co-operation and loyalty. "The people of Ontario, Mr. Hepburn, has come forward generously extending his hand to the Prime Minister of Canada and placing at the disposal of the Dominion Government all the resources of Ontario. By contrast, Mr. Duplessis chooses to call an election."

The true reason for the election is the unfortunate financial situation in which the Quebec Government finds itself, Mr. Lapointe said. "They have spent provincial funds like drunken sailors. It is revealed by the official figures supplied by them to the United States' authorities, in connection with their recent $30,000,000 loan, that the funded debt of the province, which stood at $149,746,000 in June, 1936, had reached about $285,000,576 on March 31, 1939."

He said he challenged Mr. Duplessis to give the country a true picture of the present situation. "I ask him to state, among other things, how many million dollars in unpaid warrants are in the hands of contractors for provincial works who have not yet been paid in cash. I ask him to state what amount he will actually require to meet his commitments between now and the end of the current year."

He reiterated his opposition to Conscription and said he is as opposed to Conscription now as he was in 1917.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King has stated that the present Government would never resort to Conscription, he recalled, and added:

"My colleagues and I have the respect of our fellow-members from the other provinces and I feel justified in saying that I enjoy the confidence and the considerations of my English-speaking fellow citizens from every part of Canada. I believe I have succeeded in persuading them.

"Above all we did persuade them that Canadian unity demands that we refrain from compulsory service overseas."

Mr. Lapointe charged that "the methods of gangsters" are in use already in the Quebec election and said that a few days ago men disguised as Royal Canadian Mounted Police visited homes in order to frighten people and "indispose them against us."

BABY BORN IN IRON LUNG

Medical history was made at the Mount Sinai hospital in Chicago when 22-year-old Mrs. Gertrude Epstein, sudden victim of infantile paralysis, successfully gave birth to a daughter while encased in an iron lung. The new-born baby is shown here in the arms of a nurse. Mrs. Epstein died a few hours after the birth of the baby.

ANDREW G. DAVIE LAID TO REST

Simple Impressive Service Held in City With Interment at Brockville

From the flower-banked chapel of the Bellevile Burial Company on Campbell Street, the late Andrew Grey Davie, senior member of the staff of the Ontario Intelligencer, columnist and one of the most highly respected newspapermen in this part of Ontario, was borne to his last resting place in Brockville Cemetery on Saturday afternoon.

There overlooking the St. Lawrence River, in the town where he spent his boyhood and young manhood, the silvery-haired member of the fourth estate, who was stricken suddenly at his desk on Thursday was laid to his final rest.

In the quiet simplicity of the funeral home chapel, banked with floral tributes, that were mute colorful testimony of the high esteem in which he was held in all walks of life, the simple but impressive funeral service was held with the Rev. G. G. Wright, rector of Christ Church officiating. The clergyman was assisted by the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church.

There were no eulogies. Excerpts from the Bible were read, and prayers offered by the officiating ministers. In the chapel proper friends of the late Mr. Davie congregated to pay a last tribute to a beloved friend. Members of the Belleville Rotary Club, that included President Howard Clarke, the staff of the Ontario Intelligencer and representatives of practically all walks of life, heard the last rites held for a highly esteemed fellow-clubman, colleague and friend.

Following the ceremony, the cortege left for Brockville where the simple graveside service was conducted by the Rev. J. Grant Spalding, rector of St. Peter's Church.

Pallbearers included: Messrs. W. F. Morton, Gerald A. Morton, C. McBride, E. F. Dickens, Charles Dolan, and William Doyle.

Airmen Being Trained

An undisclosed number of trained airmen are being prepared for overseas service and the Royal Canadian Air Force, with the naval units, and land forces, stands ready to protect Canadian coasts.

The Canadian navy is already active in aiding the British navy in the convoy of ships across the Atlantic, Canadian destroyers share in the convoy protection for a certain distance out to sea, and maintain a coastal patrol of the coastlines.

In the economic sphere boards and control bodies function to prevent profiteering and hoarding, to direct agricultural production, to ensure adequate supplies of essential commodities for civilian and military use, to control the movement of Canadian ships and to protect the Canadian financial structure.

The latter organization is the Foreign Exchange Control Board clothed with powers to take over all Foreign Exchange and Securities owned by residents of Canada or to limit their transfer, its purpose is declared to prevent a flight of capital from the country and conse-

British Mine Sweepers Have Dangerous Task of Clearing the Sea of Hidden Mines

British minesweepers are the busiest craft these days of European war. Working in coveys, LEFT, the vessels take up positions around an area suspected of having mines hidden below the surface. Then the paravanes are put to work cutting the cables which hold the mines in position and causing the deadly weapons to emerge on the surface. Sharpshooters promptly cause the mines to destroy themselves on the water. Then a buoy is put over the spot of the sweeper, RIGHT, to inform sea commerce that the shipping lane is free of mines.

IN POLAND OR IN GERMANY

When Adolf Hitler passed through Poland he saw what to the great majority of men would have been scenes the sight of which they would regret having witnessed for the rest of their lives. Any man would contemplate with horror the thought that such desolation might befall his own land. He would be shocked that a government should have gone to the extreme of overrunning a country on a mere pretext of ill-treatment of minorities as the Nazis accused the Poles.

Now Hitler would separate the war in front of his Siegfried fortifications from the war in Poland, which he calls a "fait accompli", or an "accomplished fact." He says that Poland is gone and there exists no reason for bloodshed between the Western democracies and Germany. He says that in war there cannot be two victors and often there are two losers. He sees war in the West as ruination and desolation and an endless graveyard along the French-German frontier. He does not see a ruined Poland, divided between two powerful nations. He would convince the Western Democracies in effect that Poland having fallen the pledges given that land need no longer be regarded. This can readily be understood by looking at the fate of those who accepted the Nazi pledges.

Adolf Hitler who proffers peace on his own terms and against his own Nazi government's background and record made no mention in his Reichstag address of the fate of the population left abandoned by Germany to other nations, such as Poland, Czecho-Slovakia and Austria. His words of a general conference of peace sounded strange coming from his lips. He suggested disarmament, and talked of resettlement of "splinters of German nationality in various countries", in which no doubt Germany would be the deciding factor, though these splinters represent some large masses of Germans in European countries such as Switzerland, Hungary, Rumania and so on. He claims his interests are purely economic not military.

He would leave the Polish question settled by Germany and Russia, shoving the rest of Europe off the scene and giving the broken fragments of the Polish State little or nothing to say as to their future. This the Western Democracies he supposes will accept.

But over all the fact is that Hitler remains. Britain and France last week declared the end of Hitlerism as the goal of their effort.

They know that by the action of the Democracies Germany met Britain and France before she wanted to meet them, though she was told she would have to face them if she invaded Poland. It is no wonder he wants peace.

No one has seen yet any new principle at stake in Hitler's plan, it is the same Hitler who is offering peace (as he wants it) as the Hitler who has been upsetting Europe and the man would by Britain and France as responsible for the cause of the war.

He spoke of his anxiety to save Germany, his own people, from a war in the West, but said no word of sorrow for the Poles driven from their own country, and did not terrorize German minorities as Hitler claimed. In the west to Hitler of course the war is abnormal, nothing like that in Poland. But the Allies say it is the same war.

A LESSON TO GERMANY

LATE REV. E. N. BAKER, D. D.

In the fulness of years Rev. E. N. Baker, D. D., who served the church and society for more than six decades, has passed to his reward. He was his influence felt upon thousands of people in various charges which he occupied during his long ministry, and after a long record in the pulpit he became principal of Albert College and later the head of the movement for a modern college with buildings and equipment to meet the demands of the church and society in this modern age. This was his vision and he worked so successfully that the new Albert College would soon was opened for its work among the youth of the Dominion. Then when the great task of seeing the new college built was realized he became principal emeritus and from that day until the time of his death his guiding motive was the furtherance of the cause which this college meant to the youth of Canada.

His career has been one of the most outstanding in the ministry for it has touched the people at so many points of life. A brilliant student, he carried this brilliance and energy into his adult life in his service in the church and among the communities in which he served. His great tasks he bore with great sincerity and he was honored on many occasions by the Methodist Church in which he had grown up and into whose ministry he had ordained. He was particularly associated with Belleville, his college days were spent at the old Albert College, he spent a pastorate at Bridge Street Methodist Church and his later associations with the old and new Albert Colleges were important in the life of the college and city.

Dr. Baker had social qualities which made him popular, he possessed a keen mind and a fine sense of humor and was the optimist by nature of his friends. He was a particularly fine speaker and had remarkable gifts in organization and fine executive capacity. His pulpit gifts were marked.

For the past twenty-six years he had lived in Belleville and he became one of the most familiar figures in the city's life.

His life was an open book of faith and that faith was such that death did not daunt him for through death he saw as he had preached so effectively all his life, the joys of the life beyond, which was the great reality. He has left his influence on many men and women, on boys and girls through his ministry, his love of mankind and through the special opportunities he had and which he made through his association from boyhood to old age with his beloved Albert College and Belleville.

HOW TO DISTINGUISH OFFICERS

The first thing you will learn to do when you join the army is to salute the commissioned officers. And one of the difficulties that will face you after you have donned the khaki for the first time is to distinguish on officers from the "compy-sergt-major" and the quarter-bloke.

That difficulty will be overcome in short time, but after you have learned the difference in the uniform of a "one-pipper" and a imperial highness of the regimental sergeant major, not to mention the various "W. O's", there arises the question of distinguishing the difference between a brigadier, and the cheery "skipper."

The latter gentleman, being of the general officer class, has the privilege of having the guard "called out" for him but the colonel, one rank below gets the ordinary salute given officers, unless he is the C. O. making his morning rounds.

But there is a lot to learn after this information has been absorbed by your soldierly head. And in all probability you will find yourself in a nice mental fog, in attempting to distinguish between an army captain, a naval lieutenant and a air-force flight-lieutenant should perchance see them together.

In any event, the uniforms of the air-force will give you a few minutes headscratching, trying to distinguish between the ordinary airman and a group-commander. The navy is not as tough if you can count the rings of gold braid about the cuffs of the commissioned Jack Tars.

However, it will be very confusing to the new recruit and perhaps the following list of commensurate ranks of the three services will help out —

Navy	Army	Air Force
Midshipman or Warrant Officer	Second Lieutenant	Pilot Officer
Sub-Lieutenant	Lieutenant	Flying Officer
Lieutenant	Captain	Flight Lieutenant
Lieutenant-Commander	Major	Squadron Leader
Commander	Lieutenant-Colonel	Wing Commander
Captain	Colonel	Group Captain
Commodore	Brigadier	Air Commodore
Rear-Admiral	Major-General	Air Vice-Marshal
Vice-Admiral	Lieutenant-General	Air Marshal
Admiral	General	Chief Marshal
Admiral of the Fleet.
	Field Marshal	Marshal

PATHS TO MOSCOW

For many months representatives of other states made a path to Berlin, now they are making paths to Moscow at the "invitation" of Soviet Russia. The axis powers have changed. Italy stands more on the side lines, Soviet Russia has used her diplomacy to gain advantages, while Hitler and his armies have had to do the fighting.

On the other hand there is a real axis to the Allies—London and Paris — with that just balance which spells perfect collaboration of military forces and the spirits of the two races.

LATE REV. E. N. BAKER, D. D.

Woodstock Sentinel Review says "The devastation that has been wrought in Warsaw by the shelling and the bombing may indicate even to the Germans, what might happen to their own cities were this to be made a general practice in the war. It may cause them to appreciate before they start such practices against those who have the power to retaliate.

"Another lesson is contained in the proof that the killing of civilians does not destroy the morale of a people at war with them.

"It shows that war on a civilian population is not accompanied by military advantage. The shells are actually wasted."

Russian timber is likely to be exported to Britain. The report goes that Russia may use neutral ships for this purpose. Germany has however declared timber and lumber contraband.

What this means from the standpoint of the Soviet Union and what Germany will think of it are questions to be revealed.

The conference of Empire and Dominion cabinet ministers to meet in London and then to return and report to their various governments is one of the signs of the unity of effort for the Empire's defence, so that each Dominion may play its part to play in the total effect sought in the war to crush the German Nazis.

The Old Germany Lives No More

The Old Germany, known and loved by travelers and transplanted into this country, in part, by immigrants from almost our earliest history was justly famed for its cooking. The average German ate simply, was all lightly on the stomach. Upon many occasions—though not with perhaps as many as the cartoonists of a generation or so ago — would have had to believe they had the burden of increasing obesity. Beer helped. It was not to be said that Germans at any time restricted their drinking to beer. Many a Germans of the golden age ever live exclusively upon sausage, though it is ten to one that what sausage will call either the thought of Bologna or the Frankfurter as their favorite kind of German sausage.

Yet it is a sad change in it is a melancholy time that the Nazi Government has now ordered that the infinite variety of German sausages be abolished as a "consolidated sausage." There can be no romance in a consolidated sausage. The very concept is hostile to the believers of good eating. It abolishes choice, the gourmet's occupations is gone. A whole area of romantic sausages disappears under the iron heel, or is perhaps chopped up in the sausage of the Nazi ideology.

No more Sunday afternoons with the Saxon burgher and his mug thumping on the shade-dappled tables. No more united family parties with the children and the good sleigh. Not enough to eat, any more, and not enough sausage to eat.

These deprivations are part of the price paid for what used to be called a place in the sun, for what is sometimes disparagingly called the lire! Once the Germans seemed to have a way of coming to live but also the art of living. What have they now, what can they buy, that is worth the price? Only what they call their Fuehrer has taken from them? —New York Times.

Popeye, Spinach Crusader

Some people can see propaganda in everything. That may be the reason for the story that Popeye, the cartoon character, is a sort of public relations officer for the spinach growers. But whether the idol of the children has any interests in acre or not, the fact remains that it isn't hard to make the youngsters eat their spinach as it used to be.

Maybe, too, there is something in Popeye's faith in spinach. Science has been proved that this vegetable does contain iron. Enough is not added for all people, generally speaking, spinach has high nutritive values.

The Health League of Canada reminds us that spinach is a new discovery and in the old days there was no spinach. Then Columbus started for many things, though their theories are no longer held, in the light of scientific knowledge. Columbus imported into Europe at the time of the Crusades, spinach was already well known during the Renaissance. In the 18th century it was regularly hawked in the streets of London. In those days, the plant was prepared by chopping it up, boiling it and making it into balls, the liquid being squeezed out with the hands. Then it was mixed with butter, oil or vinegar, and thus prepared, considered a delicacy. Today the usual method of home preparation is boiling it whole in a little water, much of the water as feasible so as to retain the vitamins, pepper and salt. Most canned spinach. of course, is chopped up.

In the eleventh century, Arabian doctors prescribed spinach for many complaints especially of the bowels and the chest. Two centuries later, the Spanish adopted a period of great favor as a laxative and intestinal cleanser. Today it is known spinach has a high iron content. It also contains small quantities of organic salts of potash and lime and is relatively rich in sugar. Its nutritive value, superior to that of most green vegetables, makes it important in anemia. This iron in property is increased by its richness in chlorophyll, the green coloring matter of vegetables which is a powerful agent in the treatment of blood poverty. Increasing the bulk of the products of digestion; it is laxative.

While spinach, therefore is healthful food for most people, it is not advised for arthritic, gouty rheumatics or those with gravel, kidney or liver disease.—Brockville Recorder and Times.

BRIGADE'S PEACE

Having produced a version of the loot, Germany and Russia solidly propagandist, the outcome of the war is in the interest of all nations. Presumably they are speaking of the interest of nations that have not yet been pillaged but soon will be, of nations that have been destroyed and of nations that, no matter what happens, cannot be much suffer. So brigands who have pulled their plunder from the hapless traveler might send word to the police that it is in the interest of police in act to restore the loot to its matter.

When this joint declaration was being prepared, Estonia was reluctantly signing a pact with Russia hemmed over its waters, its land and its military forces. Estonia's only rifles were a patrolling off its coast, Russian airplanes were over its head. Estonia's only defense at its frontier. Vassalage or conquest were its alternatives. It accepted vassalage. It saved the form of sovereignty but lost the substance. Thus escaped the sufferings of Poland.—New York Sun.

AFRICAN GERMAN

Public opinion generally should take note of the fact that there is a much larger body of German opinion than is commonly supposed, both in Southwest Africa and in that part of Tanganyika which is also formerly German, which is strongly pro-Nazi, yesterday either territory to Nazi Germany. The German interest is not always vocal. Herr Africa, through its chairman Martin Maier, recently issued a formal protest against the so-called "German African party consists of German Africans in Germany" and stated as British subjects and are British Empire in loyalty and in freedom and honorable men. They are "committed to carry out loyally each of allegiance to the country in which they now reside, and for that purpose they are interned in detained. In spite of Nazi terror, our members have remained amazingly stronger."—Johannesburg Times.

MODERN TOWER

Announcers with Oxford accents are broadcasting German propaganda in English from Berlin. The British Broadcasting Company is using announcers who speak perfect English, French, Spanish, Italian, Serbian and Bulgarian, while in Italian, Hitler's voice has the actual tech talks in English by "an American-sounding announcer." The modern Tower of Babel is an accurate Windsor Star.

STRANGE TWISTS

In this tapestry world in which we are now living, there are some strange twists. Hitler has created a larger political and military trusts. Mussolini has created a Fascist organization, Stalin has created a Communist Party, but Chamberlain has created a National Government. Hitler has created a Nazi party, but Chamberlain finally made his way back to his native Germany after the last war, and Stalin, in his quite political changes in that country has created a Communist Party. Hitler was an avowed Communist.

While the republic existed, Thealmann got political training, but after the presidency of the republic. In the campaign of 1925 Hitler supported Hindenburg for president and Hitler came into the Reds.

Chamberlain did not like Hitler, neither did Hitler like Thealmann. Hitler threw because of agreement, but Thealmann sent to jail on no particular charge. There he remained until the Soviets.

Now Germany is officially a pal of Russia, and Hitler has forgotten all sins of Thealmann are forgotten. Thealmann is now the martyr, prison as an emblem of German-Russian friendship.— Bloomington Pantagraph.

MINING LIGHTITE

Immediate activity in connection with the development of the Canadian deposits of lignite in Southern Ontario is outlined by Col. Maclaren, Minister of Mines for Ontario and N.O. Railway commission, who is quoted as saying:

"We'll be stripping the field directly after the breakup and spring and we'll be in a settled liquid in Cochrane, Timmins, Kirkland Lake and Porcupine. Today it is known that industry, which has engaged attention in Northern Ontario for the past two years, is ready.

Large beds of lignite have been found in Southern Ontario and experimental work has been carried on in the Toronto district and Europe to find the best method of utilizing the lignite. Success, indeed, been some skepticism as to the practicability of using it, but the results obtained conclusively indicate that the difficulties are not insurmountable."—Mail and Empire.

THE ARMS MAKERS

The British Ministry of Mines stated in the House of Commons that Canada would not be looked to as one of the sources of supply for British arms. Nor was Sea was cut off or the business interfered with in the event of a general European war. In reporting bills to the department of trade and commerce on August 16, August 16, G. R. Johnson, Canadian trade commissioner at Glasgow, further states that "if war were to come it is practically certain that the government would assume control of the business and avoid the difficulties which arose during the Great War was in progress. Supplies would be drawn largely from Canada and New-foundland.—Sir Thomas Times-Journal.

Canada's Highest Army Post

From Ottawa comes a report that Major-General A. G. L. McNaughton will command the first Canadian division to be sent overseas. It is not officially confirmed, but General McNaughton's name has been mentioned from the first and appointment would be entirely satisfactorily received by militiamen and especially by all who served in the Great War.

Although he rose to the highest post in the Canadian defence forces 10 years ago, and for five years has been chairman of the Canadian Research Council, he is but 52 years of age. The circumstance that he achieved such a noteworthy military career before attaining middle age is accounted for mainly, of course, by the Great War, but primarily by the fact that he began soldiering while still a student at McGill. He chose the artillery and qualified for a commission in the British Army, but fortunately for Canada chose the militia. On the outbreak of war he organized a battery, which went overseas as part of the 2nd Brigade, C. F. A. With that brigade he helped turn back the enemy after the poison gas attack at Ypres, and was wounded so severely that he spent six months in hospital.

In action to duly he commanded the 21st Howitzer Battery of the Canadian Corps artillery and after the 11th Brigade, 3rd Division, which he helped to form, took part in the battles of the Somme and until February, 1917, when it was recognized that he became entitled to battery staff officer of the Canadian Corps and Director of Artillery, Canadian Corps Heavy Artillery. In this capacity he was mentioned General McNaughton was made a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George, awarded the Distinguished Service Order, and three times was mentioned in dispatches.

An engineer and scientist by training, he turned his education and gifts to great advantage in the part of work assigned him in the latter half of the war. It is not too much to say that great numbers of Canadians who served on the western front in those days owe their lives to General McNaughton's counter-battery work. It receives considerable attention in one of the volumes of the historical work Canada in the Great War from which the following passages are quoted:

"Probably the most remarkable feature of the Canadian Corps Heavy Artillery was the counter-battery work. In no corps of the British Army was this feature so fully developed ... The credit must go to Brig.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, who organized and developed the counter-battery office at Canadian Corps Headquarters. No other corps had such effective machinery for employing its heavy artillery in robbing the enemy of the effectiveness of his artillery, and all this machinery was created by General McNaughton. For each enemy battery a crime sheet was prepared, which gave its position, the targets which it generally shelled, the number of rounds it fired, a description of the battery of every its various offences, the time of each offence and the date. These documents meted out to it."

The means used to locate the enemy batteries were many and varied; airplanes and photographs were employed, but were always infallible. Sound-ranging instruments could be brought into use under favorable conditions and were extraordinarily accurate. The "flash" method of flashes was of much value, and sometimes a battery was located by the sound it made "on the ground."

Few would we know of the present war, a brilliant gunner such as General McNaughton would seem to be an ideal commander for a Canadian division, and perhaps for the Canadian Corps.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

Man in the Mud Still a Factor

In spite of the tremendous advances of recent years in the realms of mechanical warfare and the development of superior weapons, the foot soldier with his rifle and bayonet will still be the deciding factor in the present war, according to Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha, War Lord of the Admiralty.

"All European armies have developed highly mechanized forces", he states. "A mechanized division consists of hundreds of vehicles for carrying troops, all designed primarily with speed in mind. Armored divisions consisting of fighting machines and artillery for actually fire from the tractor, instead of being dragged behind it, have become a permanent feature. It is, however, quite clear that mechanized forces will supplement and not supplant the infantry and battle the advance of the latter. In spite of the fact that many of these armored divisions are mainly composed."

Pointing out that improvements in invention do not always produce the results expected, Hore-Belisha cites the case of the machine gun. Winston Churchill continues:

"In the American Civil War it was remarked that the soldiers who had to load their pieces from the muzzle, and reload the charge each time, were very carefully to take aim, and that consequently their fire was deadly; but when breech-loading rifles came into use the difficulty was to stop the soldiers firing from the sheer joy of their ammunition. Nowadays every rifle is a magazine rifle, firing five or six shots and many machine guns are provided with belts containing hundreds of rounds. From this we have gone forward to many variants of the machine gun, and of such machine gun worked by two men, which can pour out a stream of bullets.

"But this facility may defeat itself. The modern fighter airplane can fire away all its ammunition in a few seconds, how will it get any more? These conditions reproduce the difficulty is no longer rapidity of fire but the supply of ammunition along the fighting lines. This is the new limiting factor in modern warfare. Behind the machine guns and magazine rifles. Therefore we hear that there is a machine gun that can fire 600 rounds a minute, and that every battalion has to have a score of them. We need not suppose that these weapons are the last word. Their were fired in the battles of twenty years ago.

"And so, Mr. Churchill states, it will still be man in the mud who will settle the issue.

"The brave, intelligent foot soldier will be the decisive factor as he has always been. It is still the master of his country's fate. It says in conclusion: "These mechanical devices have spoken their piece. They have contributed a fierce mest, eager for hand-to-hand fighting in small parties by night and by day. Finally the high courage of their cause, will still be capable of breaking the resistance and of sustaining the honor of mankind in the long struggle."—Canadian Corps Magazine.

New Use for Rooting Pigs

The wild boar for bristles for the leather industry, the rabbit for gloves; the Guinea pig for experimental work and now the pig for rooting out woody everyday hog to assist the French soldier.

The French soldiers are reported taking pigs up to the fighting lines and letting them root their way through no man's land. The pig, rooting like all pigs root when put to it, finds all sorts of good grubs, succulent roots or whatever it is they root for, thereby equalizing to a great extent the German mine.

He doesn't get the grub or the succulent root in the burst of thunder which sends him skywards, beckoning his friends, and if there is any pork chops left they are passed back to the commissariat.

So there you are. Pigs are pigs, but in this instance they have been promoted to soldier and their civilized onward career to the ultimate bullet or bayonet is indefinitely stayed. Their rooting probably saves many lives of French soldiers. And Gilbert is a bad joke on the pig.—Oshawa Times.

MODERN BIDER

One of our energetic Calgary scouts enjoyed a summer vacation at Jasper Park this year, and returned to submit an incident which she regards as a high light of the season.

A winsome six-year-old lassie was being given her first horseback ride. A staid sedate steed was led by an escort on foot, and the child was cautioned against any frisky high kick out of the experience. Suddenly the animal broke into a sharp shrill scream from the small equestrian. Startled, the escort looked at her sharp.

"Hey, stop!" cried the little girl, "it's my turn to use the pedal!"—Maclean's Magazine.

BE A LEADER

The boss drives his men: the leader coaches them.

The boss depends on authority: the leader on good will.

The boss inspires fear; the leader inspires enthusiasm.

The boss says "I"; the leader says "we."

The boss says "get here on time"; the leader gets there ahead of time.

The boss fixes the blame for the breakdown; the leader fixes the breakdown.

The leader-makes work a pleasure.

The boss says "Go!" The leader says "Let's Go!"

'BUSINESS AS USUAL'

That phrase "business as usual" has both its merit and demerit. If it means that J. Smith, Esq., is to go on attending to his private business in spite of the war, it is a selfish, shortsighted, callous slogan. If it means that J. Smith, Esq., is carrying on his business as usual because of the war, that eminent citizen is doing his duty, whether he knows it or not, his employes and accounted to the country for it. Mr. Smith might do sentry-duty in front of that Government building known as the Spadina armory.

The fact is that interferes with the mundane affairs of life in Canada, the better for Canada — never more important if we don't win this time it would have been better if we had lost last time. Life under the Nazis would not have been better than life under Hitler. —Printed Word.

BRIGHTER PICTURE

When we remember that in the last war Germany had Turkey on her side; had Bulgaria, Russia to her knees by 1915, had all of Rumania, held Czechoslovakia as she does now and had Austria-Hungary and Italy fighting on French soil in the west, and that the Allies finally emerged the war after years of semi-stalemate, the picture in this case, the picture is far from dark for Allies.—Ottawa Journal.

TRIBUTE IS PAID LATE DR. BAKER

Dr. James Semple, Members of Bay of Quinte Conference and Principal of Albert College Speak Highly of Beloved Man

BURIED IN TORONTO

Dignitaries of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada, in beautiful eulogy and impressive service, before a large representative gathering of all walks of life, paid final tribute to a beloved member and minister, at Bridge Street United Church Monday morning when the last earthly rites were observed for the late Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, M.A., D.D., Principal Emeritus of Albert College.

In the solemn hush of the auditorium, with the soft tones of a muted organ, playing a last requiem, the body of the late churchman lay in floral splendor of state. Prior to the service large numbers of people filed slowly by the bier to pay for the last time a beloved friend and minister.

The Rev. T. L. Jull, minister of Brooklin United Church and President of the Bay of Quinte Conference officiated at the service. He was assisted by the Rev. H. H. Merrington, Thomasburg, Chairman of the Belleville Presbytery, Conference Secretary, the Rev. W. R. Howard of Stirling, the Rev. Dr. James Semple, minister of Bridge Street United Church, and the Rev. Dr. Bert Howard, principal of Albert College.

Immediately following the service, the funeral cortege left for Mount Pleasant Funeral Home Hearse for Toronto, where services were held in the Metropolitan United Church at three o'clock in the afternoon. Interment was made in Mount Pleasant Cemetery.

"We should grieve at times like these," the Rev. Mr. Jull said in simple, effective words that departed "but praise God for the labors of such men as Dr. Baker, and the results they achieve in building the church and its great organizations. On behalf of the Bay of Quinte Conference, we thank God for such a life and heritage. In the words of the Salvation Army friends, our brother has been promoted Glory. It is fitting, that we worship God in our hour of grief and loneliness. We thank God for Dr. Baker's magnificent contributions to the church in this and other communities," Mr. Jull said.

Dr. Howard's Tribute

The Rev. Dr. Howard, in a beautiful tribute to the late Dr. Baker, spoke of the three periods of life painted by the late president-emeritus, and which will be forever imprinted on the minds of faculty and student body alike of Albert College.

"There was Dr. Baker, the Christian," he said, unique in himself. He had the happy faculty of entering your personal body of holiness, and leaving not a feeling of resentment but a lesson learned. You were His friends, and you had talked with God."

"His humanitarian interests were always evident in Dr. Baker, The Man", Dr. Howard said, "in the college the student body always recognized him as such. They knew Dr. Baker for the man he was, and as such, loved him."

"Dr. Baker, the Scholar, was not the average type of purely academic minds. He had a high sense of the value of education to boys and girls and was possessed of the brilliant faculty of being able to impart it. Many students of the college became worthy ones because of their affiliation with Dr. Baker, the scholar, man and Christian", Dr. Howard said.

"No more will the college halls be blessed with his physical presence. No more will we catch the sparkling gleam of his merry eye as he passes to and fro among the halls will be more sacred and dear to us. His master because God gave us Dr. Baker."

Rev. Dr. Jas. Semple Pays Tribute

"He was a good scholar, a faithful minister and an excellent minister because he served Jesus Christ." That is my tribute to Dr. Baker, is one of his successors in this pulpit", the Rev. Dr. Semple said in eulogy, "He was highly honored for great calling, and was one of the outstanding churchmen of his time.

"He gave willingly of his time and talents to the furtherance of the church. He was a member of Conference, and a champion of temperance causes. It takes great courage to do this." Dr. Semple pointed out, stressing the stand the late Dr. Baker took in his crusades against intemperance and gambling.

"He was a great scholar and a great evangelist", he continued, "and an outstanding example to every minister in that he was able to speak God's word in his own manner. This congregation thanks God for Dr. Baker."

At the Metropolitan Church.

Distinguished leaders in the United Church, ministers and laymen, friends of the late Rev. Dr. Baker, who had known the many of his activities as pastor on many a circuit and as one of the leaders in the councels of the church, and as the able and genial representative of Albert College, gathered in the Metropolitan Church, Queen street, Toronto, on Monday, at 2 in the afternoon to say the last farewell. His long career in the pulpit, and his varied life had brought him into touch with so many people in all parts of the province that the service in the stately edifice was a fitting stamp of appreciation of his many honors. Members on the life of one who had labored so long on behalf of the church and humanity. A large number had gathered in the church by the time the funeral cortege from Belleville arrived at the church. Dr. Pricker, organist of the church, presided at the organ, and as the funeral procession entered a funeral march was played. The ministers in the chancel were Rt. Rev. Peter Bryce, pastor of the church and former Moderator; Rev. Dr. Laird, Rev. Dr. Moore, Rev. Dr. Burns, Rev. Dr. James Semple, Rev. E. E. Beckett and Rev. Principal Bert Howard, D.D.

Appreciation of Dr. Baker's Life.

Rev. Dr. Peter Bryce, former moderator of the United Church of Canada and present minister of the Metropolitan Church, delivered the funeral address. "Rev. Dr. Baker we think of as pastor and preacher. He was devoted to his people and he carried them in his heart," said Dr. Bryce. "In the person one by one, he understood their lives, he understood their sorrows and their troubles. His preaching was characterized by evangelistic endeavor for this was the spirit of his ministry. He taught his people from the cradle. In late years Dr. Baker found his greatest joy in talking about those whom he had led to Jesus Christ. That was his greatest joy. He spoke of these people as his children of faith.

"Dr. Baker was a great churchman. He was deeply interested in the church as a whole. Again and again during my term as Moderator he talked to me of the church. He felt greatly for the church. He felt that under God he owed everything to the Christian church. He was devoted to missions, supported them with his generous gifts, knew the missionaries who served in China, Japan and India. The heart of Rev. Dr. Baker was touched by the thought of his brethren serving in the missions in the west and he gave his money generously to their support."

His Work With College.

Rev. Dr. Bryce paid a tribute to Dr. Baker's life at Albert College. "He was called to the work there at a critical time in the history of Albert College. It is quite fair to say that Dr. Baker poured out his life at Albert College. It became his desire, he loved the institution. There came to him a vision of what Albert College might become—a teaching centre, an evangelistic centre, where young men might be trained for the ministry and for life. He went to the back concessions in the far north seeking money for Albert College and finding boys everywhere who needed Albert College.

"Albert College is Dr. Baker's monument. His spirit is there. It was his great work. He lived for it and I trust that his complete vision for Albert College may be realized. I believe that it will be as for his spirit is there, and it will live there.

"Then, too, Dr. Baker was a loyal friend. My life has been enriched by this friendship. It has been a very dear friend. As the years pass friendship's life's most precious possession. Dr. Baker will live in us. His life was well spent,"it was warm and universal, a life of great usefulness. The memory of the just is blessed. Well done, good and faithful servant."

Rev. Dr. Burns read the lesson, Rev. Dr. Laird read the prayer and Rev. Dr. Moore delivered the benediction.

Honorary pall bearers were Rev. Dr. Graham, Rev. Dr. C. T. Scott, a former pastor of Bridge Street Church, Rev. Dr. Farnsworth, Rev. L. S. Wight, and Rev. Dr. Heinman, A. B. Pinhey and C. B. McGuire. The active bearers were Dr. Herbert Baker, of Woodstock, Dr. Baker of Brantford, and Charles Baker, sons of the late Dr. Baker; Charles Baker and Herbert Baker, grandsons, and Gordon Baker, a nephew.

All the graves in Mount Pleasant Cemetery Rev. Dr. James Semple of Bridge Street Church, Belleville, took the committal service, assisted by Rev. Dr. Howard, principal of Albert College and Rev. H. H. Bryce.

Rev. C. O. Bishop, former principal of Albert College who succeeded Dr. Baker as the president of the institution opened, attended the last rites at the Metropolitan Church.

SPECIAL SERVICE ON THANKSGIVING

Rev. C. T. Olmstead Speaks on the "Attitude of Gratitude".

Large congregations attended the special Thanksgiving services at Bridge Street Baptist Church on Sunday where the lavish hand of God was exemplified in a beautiful display of the fruits of the fields.

Speaking on his theme, "The Attitude of Gratitude" the Rev. C. T. Olmstead pointed out that one of the oldest, most widespread and persistent religious ideas connected with Thanksgiving is that moral rightness and religious correctness always bring material prosperity; and the converse, that wrongdoing and irreligion inevitably bring suffering, sickness and poverty. Therefore, when one is prospered by God he owes his material prosperity he may be only congratulating himself and saying "God has seen my righteousness and is rewarding me with health and prosperity." And looking down on the poor and suffering he thinks: "God has seen the sinfulness of their great wickedness." And the self-righteous man eases his conscience by giving the poor family a basket and thanking God that, "Unlike a few days, and then forgets them the rest of the year. "The obvious thing when with the belief is that whatever it is, it is not gratitude."

Rev. Mr. Olmstead declared. "Bones would be inclined to call it self-inflation, self congratulation, moral vanity."

Cross Sign of Sacrifice

"The grateful soul will be thankful and humble when he thinks of the untold sacrifice of members of the human race that have gone before him. The cross is the sign of sacrifice, and sacrifice has been the great, important factors in the progress of civilization. Some of the innumerable numbers who have laid down their lives in the wars of the world. Yet, many of us are not willing to count the cost of war or to try to stop that sacrifice. None can measure the cost represented by the Cross of Calvary, but it is the measure of God's love for His children. The grateful soul will try to take account of all these great sacrifices made in the past which enable him to live more securely and worthily.

"We cannot thank those who have contributed these things to us. Even when the land says any more than we could thank the sun for its light or the atmosphere for the oxygen that we breathe. We cannot thank our great-grandfathers nor the patriots who died a hundred years ago. The grateful soul recognizes that he is a part of God's all pervading purpose, and turns a thankful heart towards the source of all. How can we be grateful in this larger sense? First, in keeping in fellowship with the Eternal Spirit. As Jesus did it, let us remember that we are sons of the Father in Heaven.

The Crucial Test

"The grateful soul will recognize his obligation to society and its gifts and sacrifices for him by sharing and giving himself in the world task. Here is the crucial test of a man's gratitude. The world needs people who feel an obligation. The unthinking crowd accepts the free gift of God and goes on its way. The obligation of gratitude will be for many of this generation to work hard, suffer in an imperfect industrialized society and not see the reward of their labor, but the brave soul who is grateful to those who suffered in the past may bear his burden cheerfully, who is struggling for justice, that a generation yet unborn may benefit. This is the way of the cross. He is the fulfilling of the law, and love alone fulfills the debt of gratitude."

Special Thanksgiving music was rendered very effectively by the choir under the direction of Mr. John Deacon.

Carries Same Watch For Fifty-Seven Years

For 57 years Alderman Thomas Cushing has daily wound the same watch and with one exception, when the main spring broke, the timepiece has kept perfect time.

It purchased a 20 karat, 7 jewelled silver-cased watch in 1882 and it is still as fine working order, stated Alderman Cushing as he displayed the watch, which is of the old key-winding type.

"After I purchased that watch it only cost me $2.00 for repairs since 1882 and it keeps perfect time. I used it all through my years of employment on the railway," added Mr. Cushing, who was employed as dispatcher for the old Grand Trunk and later the Canadian National Railway. Mr. Cushing is grateful to those who suffered in the past may bear his burden cheerfully, who is struggling for justice, that a generation yet unborn may benefit. This is 'the way of the cross. He is the fulfilling of the law, and love alone fulfills the debt of gratitude."

Little Evening Successes

By Prunella Wood

IF YOU'RE one of those women who never has occasion to dress elegantly but who do enjoy a long skirt for cocktails and dinner, look for such fashions as today's for service the winter through.

The tailored left, is in black crepe, gold-clipped at the deep V decolletage and split down the bodice in back. Its accompanying jacket is gold-threaded and not too clip in front.

The one-piece dress, right, is designed in sizes up to 44 and is every bit as slenderizing as it seems in the sketch. Crepe and satin are alternated for the back, which is full-skirted to contrast with a straight, all-crepe front. The bodice is also split and, like the other dress, has its own jewelled clip.

CHILDREN'S Frequent COLDS

For relieving distressing Colds in spite of chest colds and night coughs, rub VapoRub on throat, chest, and back at bedtime. VapoRub's poultice-vapor action relieves congestion all night as you sleep—ease soreness of throat and chest tissues—helps the youngster relax into healing sleep.

For coughing and irritated throat caused by colds, put VapoRub on the child's tongue to relieve irritation. Use for massage VapoRub on throat and chest.

For "sniffles" and misery of head colds, melt VapoRub in a bowl of boiling water. Have the child breathe in the steaming vapors. This loosens phlegm, clears air passages, makes breathing easier. Also massage VapoRub on throat and chest. Millions of families use these three time-tested ways of treatments.

THANKSGIVING DAY OF PRAYER

(By The Canadian Press)

For the first time in more than two decades Khaki will not mark Canada's soldiers on active service between the fruitful toil of their worshippers as a nation at war prayed for peace on Thanksgiving Day.

The Harvest Festival this year held a double significance as a day of thankfulness for bountiful crops, and worshippers gathered in cathedral and mission church across the Dominion yesterday to sound the day's more solemn note. They prayed that peace as well as prosperity might soon return to the Dominion.

This was Canada's first wartime Thanksgiving Day since 1918. As in the days of the first Great War, the religious aspect of the day was stressed. From 1918 until 1930 the day was linked with Armistice Day, Nov. 11, but the latter date was then set aside as Remembrance Day and Thanksgiving reverted to a Monday in October.

A Free Afternoon

Some 60,000 enlisted men were given a holiday on Ottawa orders, although leaves were at the discretion of commanding officers. At Toronto, morning drills were shortened and the recruits had the afternoon free.

Thousands took advantage of the last outdoor holiday of the season to attend football games and other sports events. Many points reported golfers giving their clubs a last workout. Baseball finals drew large crowds where the game was played, particularly in the Maritimes and British Columbia.

Fine weather, districts received scattered showers, Quebec weather was clear and the Maritimes generally, but Western Canada was generally fair and cold.

One of the worst accidents in New Brunswick's history occurred near Newcastle when a truck carrying men to a lumber camp crashed a bridge abutment. Six were killed, five seriously injured. Accidents took 12 lives during the holiday week-end in Ontario and six in British Columbia.

PRESENTATION

On Thursday evening, Oct. 5th about thirty young people held a surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Donaldson, second concession of Thurlow, to spend a social evening and say farewell to their daughter Edyth who is soon to enter the General Hospital at Kingston, as a nurse-in-training.

A pleasant time was spent in music and games. Fine prizes given for bingo created much fun.

The following address was read by Miss Vonda Perry:

Dear Edyth:

As your friends of the second line, have gathered here tonight to spend a few social hours with you before you leave us to enter training as a nurse.

Tonight we have a two fold purpose in mind. First, we wish you to know how sorry we are much that you are leaving us. Secondly, we wish to congratulate on your decision to another step in life's ladder, and we wish you continued health and success in your chosen profession.

We will miss you greatly Edyth as you have always taken a deep interest in all community activities.

We shall long remember when the skating and soft-ball seasons come again. Your cheerful smiling face will live in our memories as we smilingly recall the old saying "Over the fence is out."

As a token of our esteem and best wishes we have asked you to accept these lamps.

Among your new friends and associates may the light they shed forth ever remind you of your friends in Thurlow.

May we leave with you the thought expressed by Kingsley in his poem:

A FAREWELL

My fairest child, I have no song to give you;
No lark could pipe to skies so dull and grey;
Yet, ere we part, one lesson I can leave you
For every day.

Be good, sweet maid, and let who can be clever;
Do noble things,not dream them all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast forever
One grand sweet song.

Signed on behalf of your friends of the second line ball team — Vera Gray, Reg Terry, Helen J. Thompson.

Mr. Reg. Terry then presented Edyth with a dressing table lamp and bed lamp.

Although taken completely by surprise, Edyth thanked them all in a few words showing her heartappreciation for their kindness and good wishes for her success.

A tasty lunch was served and enjoyed by all.

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By Vera Brown

Handsome struck out the third man, held the first two men where they were. When the fourth man came up, Handsome took his time. He felt the pocket of his uniform, stalled a little. Then came the pitches: ball, strike, ball, strike, ball ... Wish had thrown his cigar away.

The fourth man got a scratch hit and the bases were now loaded with but one out. Ace came out and talked to Handsome in the centre of the diamond.

"Now listen," he told him, Wish's voice was a squeak. Mike could not watch. She sat, her eyes shut tight. A ball: a strike, ball, a strike, a ball, a strike; three and two!

Then suddenly the last pitch! It was a breaking curve. The batter missed it. He was out and no runs had scored yet.

The bleachers let loose with a mighty roar again. The grandstand crowds cheered and clapped.

"One more!" Wish said. "And we're OK."

A heavy hitter was coming up. The men on bases were taking long leads.

Handsome pitched two balls in succession. A groan went up from the crowds. The next was a strike. The crowds yelled again. But the next was a ball.

"He's behind the batter every time," Jenkins said in quiet despair.

Ace left his place and went out to talk to Handsome again. It was a brief conference. Handsome stretched, a graceful sight to see as his arm came up in a flash in the bright afternoon sun. Against the green of the diamond, he looked as luminous as a fine statue. Tingling 'em through."

"Only a man can get him out of this mess," a fan sitting in the next box cried.

It was Strike Two. Fast and hard...the batter did not even attempt to swing on it. Mike closed her eyes again.

There was a deep silence over the great crowd. In the tenseness, Mike could hear the crowds in the visualize Handsome, ready to pitch again. But she could not bear to look. It seemed years. The last pitch came in. It was a strike! curves. But Mike did not know. Not until 30,000 fans rose screaming from their seats. Not until "Yes, Handsome!"

Wish was pressing Mike's hand. Jenkins was jumping up and down like a school kid. Handsome was Ace run forward to Handsome.

When Handsome finally came back to the dugout he was surrounded at Mike.

So ended the game through the long afternoon. At the seventh inning when everyone stood up to stretch, Mike could not have got out of her seat if Wish had not pulled her up.

"Oh, Wish! Nine more men. Just nine more men for me!" she cried.

"Yes." Wish looked down at Mike's pinched face.

"I can't stand it, Wish! It's awful! I didn't realize!"

"It's an exciting game, isn't it?" he grinned. "Listen, child. I've been doing this for thirty-five years and I'm still sitting. Take it easy. He's all right."

It was a good inning for Handsome, and he turned in a workmanlike job. Mike was beaming.

Tom Marvin was first up to bat in the last of the seventh. He got to first base. The man following him was out, but Marvin got to second. Nick Russell got a long hit so far out to right that it advanced Marvin to third.

Then it was Handsome's turn at bat.

"Here's a chance for him to win his own game," Jenkins said to Mike.

Mike closed her eyes again. Handsome had not hit safely yet.

Handsome had come up during the The Detroit boys didn't realize Handsome could hit. There might be a chance. Like a veteran, Handsome refused to be fooled. He waited. Then the Detroit pitcher threw him a good ball. Mike could hear the bat hit the ball she opened her eyes wide. It was a nice clean hit—not long, but it brought Tom Marvin home, for the first score of the day.

You should have heard the crowds. Mike's eyes were so blurred with tears she could not see clearly. Wish was chuckling.

"Guess that will teach 'em!" He squeezed Mike's arm. I told you he boy had it!"

CHAPTER XII

"Six more men. Six more men!" Mike kept saying under her breath. Handsome was the right inning it was the same struggle.

"He gets in so bad. Why does he let himself in for this trouble?" Jenkins cried again and again. But Wish only grinned. Mike could see easier.

"He seems to enjoy getting himself in a hole and then fighting his way out," Jenkins said.

"He's nervous," Wish replied. He was hearing. Wish had found Mike's hand and was talking about Handsome. And so had Ace.

It was at the end of the eighth inning that Mrs. Barnes turned around and spoke to Wish and he introduced Mike to her.

Mrs. Barnes smiled on the red haired girl. "I hope you like baseball, Miss Shannon."

"I am plain Mrs. Barnes understood the situation. But Mike did not even think of that. She kept repeating in herself: "Three more men! Three more men for me!"

The fans greeted Handsome with a great ovation when he stepped up on the mound for the opening of the ninth inning. Such cheers. "They're like that, even if all the team doesn't."

"They're nuts about him! Look at him. He's a natural showman."

Handsome had great time in lengthening shadows, a slim giant, his arms relaxed at his sides, watching Ace. He kept repeating to

Sarnia Imperials Held to 6-6 Tie With Balmy Beach in Turkey Day Game at Toronto

Eddie Thompson Kicks Tieing Point Seconds Before End of Game

ARGOS BEAT ROYALS

Queens Fail to Hold Lead and Mustangs Gallop to 32-17 Win

By JACK CALDER

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Already the drums are being beaten for a new aspirant to the ranks of Eastern Canada's forever ballhacks, a little fellow who can scarcely miss a sectional rating if he holds together through the bruising Ontario rugby football union schedule.

He's Eddie Thompson of Toronto Balmy Beach, who began to get himself talked about last season and who has been about twice as good so far this year. In two exhibitions and the official schedule opening, he has been the Beach's moving force—a burning dynamo who apparently can do everything well.

His teammates elected Thompson captain yesterday and he immediately justified their confidence by turning in a sparkling performance in a 6-6 tie with Sarnia's Imperials in the annual Thanksgiving Day meeting of the clubs at Toronto. With just 35 seconds to play he kicked the point that brought the Balmes a deadlock.

Thompson Exhibits Speed

Although the hitting team made 13 first downs to three for the Imperials, Sarnia's 1939 championship might have walked away with the game handily but for Thompson's running.

As it was, Eddie created one of the only two close things in the senior teams' inaugural week-end in the East. In the other half of the O.R.F.U. program yesterday, Montreal Westmounts showed their expected strength in a crushing 22-1 success over the Orfuns at Peterborough.

The Dominion champion Toronto Argonauts, starting their big four campaign, agreed through in the other hair-raiser with a 7-2 victory over Montreal Royals at Varsity Stadium Saturday. Ottawa Rough Riders, favored in many quarters to depose the Argos, mopped up a 32-4 triumph over Hamilton Tigers at the nation's capital.

Come From Behind

Though they had to come from behind to do it, University of Western Ontario Mustangs got away successfully Saturday by defeating Queen's University of Kingston 32-17 at London. University of Toronto, minus some top-flight stars through injuries, had enough to hammer McGill 19-6 at Montreal in the only Intercollegiate union curtain-raiser.

Stars of other days, like Hugh Stirling of Sarnia and Ab Box of Balmy Beach, were missing from the Toronto Turkey Day bill. Sometimes the teams, lacking smoothness, were pretty dull. But for excitement they matched anything in the long Sarnia-Beach rivalry.

Thompson kicked two single points and Glen Salter forced a safety touch to give Toronto a 2-0 advantage in the first half.

The Sarnians then held on Balmy Beach's one-yard line after a field-long succession of latera passes, but a penalty on the latter's next kick Bernie Moran snatched Mike Hedgecock's forward pass to score a touchdown standing up. He converted to give Sarnia a 6-4 advantage.

After two field-goal attempts had failed in the fourth, Balmy Beach scored through a kick by Jack Pridden, and the game died young Bus Young tried to pass the Beach into the lead, but when the home club had to be content with a draw on Thompson's kick.

Fans Jostle Referee

Tommy Burns, Jimmy Riddell and Doug Bassett scored Montreal's touchdowns at Peterborough and Moon Mullins kicked a field goal. It was 10-0 for Westmounts at halftime and about the only thing the fans could make a noise about was the work of the officials. They got so incensed at Referee Hedley Foster of Montreal that he had to be escorted from the field at the finish, after being jostled and knocked down by the crowd.

The Royals became the first team since 1927 to hold the Argonauts without a touchdown on the Argos' scoring was done by Earl Selkirk, who kicked two field goals from placement and a single point. Centre Bissonnette kicked two singles as the Royals thrilled the week-end's largest crowd—12,000 persons—by coming along with a rush in the last quarter, but their final chance faded when Pete Jotkus threw a wild lateral pass which ended distance of the Argo goal-line.

Ottawa Swarms Over Tigers

Orville Burke, a home-town product, threw three touchdown passes as the Rough Riders swarmed over Hamilton. For a while the kicking of Bob Isbister and George Wright kept the Tigers in the ball game but it was all over when Burke started hurling long ones in the second half.

At one time in the second quarter, largely because of Western

WHIZZER BACK HOME

Most Canadian sport fans are familiar with the name Whizzer White—the young man who scooned to stardom on U. S. college gridirons for the University of Colorado in 1937, and then played one season of pro football with Pittsburgh Pirate—for $15,000 — before journeying to Oxford with a Rhodes scholarship. The Whizzer is back in the States now, his Oxford career terminated by the war, and he is seen here on his way to the first class at the Yale law school, current scene of his krazinnic activities. "No more football," says Whizzer, despite numerous pro offers.

fumbled, Queen's had a 16-5 lead at Hamilton. Forward passes, with Bill Wong and Roy Kent on the receiving end most of the time, helped the way for Western's rush from behind. Joe King smashed over for two touchdowns.

In the first minute against McGill, Jack Plaunt showed up to his reputation as the University of Toronto's best newcomer by heaving a 25-yard pass that Lou Scarso carried another 25 for a touchdown. From that point on, Plaunt's passing and Bee Rowland's kicking kept Toronto almost constantly on the offensive and McGill scored only when Art Bradnest dropped up a fumble to run 55 yards for a touch late in the first half.

BLUE BOMBERS SUFFER DEFEAT FOR FIRST TIME

Edmonton Eskimos Crack Undefeated Season's Record With 30-11 Win

REGINA NOW SECOND

Edmonton and Calgary Tied at Three Games Apiece for Third

Winnipeg, Oct. 10. — (CP) — Winnipeg Blue Bombers' Rampage through Western Interprovincial Football Union opposition has been stopped and Edmonton Eskimos, who ended the Winnipeg winning streak at eight games, are established as "Big League" timber.

Eskimos yesterday cracked Winnipeg's unbeaten record at Edmonton, 30-11. Regina Roughriders invaded Calgary last night to defeat Stampeders 8-7 and take undisputed possession of second place behind Winnipeg with four victories. Edmonton and Calgary are tied with three wins.

Results of Bob Pritz' coaching at Edmonton became definitely noticeable as Eskimos beat Regina, 3-0 at Edmonton Saturday. Pritz, who led Winnipeg to the west's only national senior cup title in 1935, went to Edmonton last year and failed to win a game in the Exks' first season in the Union. Now his painstaking efforts are paying dividends.

Ahead at Half-Time

At half-time yesterday bombers were leading 11-2 on the strength of seven completed passes for 11 second-quarter tries. Wayne Shelley threw a 13-yard touchdown pass to Bud Marquhardt and Art Stevenson fired 20 yards forward to Jeff Nicholson for another major score. Greg Kabat converting. Eskimos had counted only two singles.

Winnipeg fumbles in the third quarter cost them the game, Pritz Hanson made the first and, after Eskimos recovered, Pritz plunged for a touchdown from the five-yard line. Then Shelley fumbled nine yards out and

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not ne-glect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or pain(ful) condition due to nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. R. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid Suppositories. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, irritated spots. Hemroid is a physician's prescription and is highly recom-mended. It is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for any-one to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reason-able cost.

TWELVE KILLED IN ONTARIO OVER HOLIDAY WEEKEND

Automobile Accidents Bring Death to Five Persons—Two Shot in Hunting Accidents

ENGINEER KILLED

By The Canadian Press

Automobile accidents brought death to five persons and drown-ings to three as Ontario's death toll reached 12 for the long holi-day weekend marking Thanksgiv-ing Day. Two men were shot acci-dentally in hunting accidents, an engi-neer was killed in a collision of two freight trains and a road construc-tion employee died of injuries suffered in a gasoline explosion.

A double drowning occurred in Twin Lake, near Timagami in Northern Ontario, when a canoe capsized Sunday, John Bloomsmith 26, Smith Falls, and Wilfrid Mc-Farlane, 27, Kirkland Lake, drown-ed. Provincial constable Miller Church of Cobalt reached shore safely.

Double Fatality

In another double fatality, Mrs. Mary Downie, 52, and Arthur Dafoe, 22, both of Sidney Township were killed Saturday when a car driven by Dafoe overturned on a truck near Fort Erie.

Charles Alfred Miniely, 56 Forest, drowned in Lake Huron Saturday while fishing. He appar-ently fell from the vessel. Two-year-old Frederick Holland, 20, St. Columban, near Renfrew, was killed on the highway in a critical condition. He told police before he died that the driver of the car that struck him Monday did not stop.

George Box, 30, of Centre Line, Mich., died in Tillsonburg hospital Sunday of injuries received the pre-vious day when his car driven by a cousin got out of control on the brow of a hill seven miles west of Tillsonburg. Martin Pickel, 36, of Parnham, Que., was killed and five others injured when two cars collided a few miles west of Hawkes-bury late Saturday night.

Gun Accidentally Discharged

George Alexander, 44, of Detroit, was killed hunting near Embro late Saturday. He was found dead by body when they organized a search after he failed to return to camp. Stanley Weedmark, 16, was wound-ed on a hunting expedition four miles west of Brantford Monday, day when a gun carried by a com-panion, Ralph Stoddard accidentally discharged, was killed Wednesday.

Engineer Harol Brasha at London Ont., was killed when his freight train ploughed into the rear of an-other train taking water near Chatham in a dense fog early Saturday.

Joseph Poole 24 of Barrie died in Orillia hospital Saturday from burns suffered last Wednesday. He was pouring gasoline into a tank from a can in a gravel pit near Orillia, when a spark ignited some of the gas exploded. It was believed the spark came from a blow-torch another employee was using.

TANSLEY WINS INT. "C" TITLE BEATING WOOLER

Ninth - Inning Rally Nearly Wins for Northumberland Squad

LOOSELY PLAYED

Austin and Redcliffe Homer for Wooler Nine

Trenton, Oct. 10 (Special) — A smart team of Nelson Township ball hawkers won the intermediate "C" softball championship here Satur-day by defeating a well balanced aggregation from Wooler by the narrow margin of 8-7. Wooler had vanished all comers to represent Eastern Ontario in the finals for the provincial title. The Nelson bata-men excelled in the second and third innings to establish a five run lead that stunned their rivals before the match was well under way. But the Wooler kids rallied to easily and retaliated with a fourth stanza ave-rage and a ninth inning rally that almost turned the tables on them from the west. G. Cullom was the winning pitcher yielding fourteen hits and two walks while Stacey who started for Wooler was blasted from the mound in the fourth inning and the western wallopers crashed his delivery for ten hits including a long circuit smash by Nixon. Mc-Coll relief replaced Stacey in the fourth fold the westerners to three hits and gave up a walk in the sixth. When the game had ended the score board read like this:

Nelson	032 002 000—8
Wooler	001 400 011—7

Home runs for Wooler came in the third and fourth innings as Austin and Redcliffe were credited with the roundtrippers.

Nelson—Collins c, Cartwright 2b, Wood 1f, Hall ss, Tansley p, Eaton 3b, Nixon as, Fear lb, Cullom p.

Wooler—Austin 1b, Ruttan 3b, McColl cf, Redcliffe 2, Stacey p, Ad-ams lf, Bryant 2b, Richards as, Stirling rf. McColl replaced Stacey in fourth.

Umpires—Galbraith, Nelson; Car-swell, Trenton.

Cincinnati Reds, Despite Humiliating Defeat Again Ready

BY JOHN FRYE

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Cincinnati, O., Oct. 10 (AP)—A foot-ball city election is coming up, the foot-ball season is here and due, and if the sun will ever give us a break, the local nine will win the pennant.

But this is a baseball city and the populace's verdict is what means most right now.

The coroner, much to his aston-ishment, found that the Reds were bloodshed, the Cincinnati Reds were still what and false to a man, and the Yanks may have pounded the daylights out of them to the tune of 22 to 4 but when it came to the unlucky spirit heals, the team ought to be back into a ball room.

While Manager Bill McKechnie by-no-doubt is thinking of improve-ments, and of the fact that past Yankee victims have had a time getting started against the Bombers prestige, this much may be said.

Despite the injuries or one of those mysterious things which can happen to a team over night, the Reds, with the present lineup, should be able to walk out next spring, and play a ball game that's really ex-pected.

Almost all the mainstays are at or near—on either side of the line-their primes, as far as age goes. Most have had a taste of it for a season and few have showed the Yanks anything. All have had the ex-soning that goes with a typical Nat-ional League dog fight and Bill Mc-Kechnie is still the base. Until 1940, in fact.

Sure it lacks a balanced, mature team. But the front office, which signed everybody for 1939 almost be-fore the 1938 season was over, hasn't begun diplomatic conversations yet. The whole picture could be differ-ent comes spring.

Partridge Hunters Get Full Quota

Guns blazed on widely separated fronts over the holiday week-end as hunters of the city and district took advantage of the final weather condi-tions to indulge in their favorite sport.

In the cool greyness of early dawn with a "southern wind and a cloudy sky" Thursday left the city yesterday morning for the northern haunts of the partridge. The first day's re-port on that opened yesterday and will close on the 14th of October will be followed by a similar period of time next month.

Hunters returning from the vic-inity of Millbridge reported a plen-itude of birds and good shooting. It is reported that several of the hunters brought back trophies of the chase four city residents, Arthur John Baker, George McIntosh, Guy Harris and "Sandy" Lamont, rode triumphantly into the city late last night with the full quota of birds, five for each hunter, dangling from their respective rears.

"There were plenty of birds in that particular district," one of the hunters said, "but there appeared to be a trifle wilder than usual. We were a bit lucky to get our full quota."

THE PITCHER WITH THE "SORE ARM"

Taking a treatment under the world series and Red was a very lamp is Red Ruffing, New York "doubtful quantity." He proceeded Yankee pitcher with the "sore arm". to hang up a four-hit shutout, his This was no duty-bout most of fifth world series win, and many the regular season and poor old Red rookie pitching their pitchers' arms could only amass 20 victories for the out of joint before the 1940 season year's straight year. Came got under way.

ARMS EMBARGO FOES TALK IT OVER

Though they bitterly took opposite sides of the fence in opening the battle for the repeal of the Senate, Senators Key Pittman, LEFT, of Nevada, and William E. Borah, RIGHT, of Idaho, amiably got together at the close of the session and discuss what transpired. Pitt-man, chief author of the embargo measure, led off in favor of the administration's revision of the Neutrality Act. He claimed that the present arms embargo is a handicap to line neutrality urged rigid cash-and-carry laws. Borah opposed a change by stating that the present law in spite of the embargo comes not from Americans but from European "war hounds."

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 10 (AP) — The stock market got back on the climbing path today with leaders making up fractions to more than two points.

There was a brief buying burst after a quiet opening, then a profit taking reason. Fresh support came in later, but the pace again slackened near the fourth hour and rate prices slipped from the best.

Prominent stocks on the early push were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Eastern Airlines, American Smelting, Nickel Dodge, Santa Fe, Great Northern, Pullman, American Can, Westinghouse, Allied Chemical and Du Pont.

Fractionally off in the Canadian group were Distillers International Nickel and Lake Shore. Some issues were under moderate pressure in the bond market.

The dividend-paying golds held the main interest. Dome firmed 3-4 to 28 1-2. Macassa gained 2 cents to 2.90 and higher prices were established by Hyrnaylo, Wrights Hargreaves, O'Brien, Little Long Lac and others. Moderate gains were shown by the Base Metals. Nickel traded in fair volume at 47. Western Oils showed little change with the action bulking in home and Calgary-Edmonton.

Food, Steel, Utility and Aircraft shares led the Industrials in a moderate advance.

SCANDINAVIANS WATCH RUSSIA

Northern Neutrals Interested in Showdown of Finland and Soviet

By LYNN HEINZERLING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Stockholm, Oct. 10 (AP)—Neutral nations of northern Europe anxiously watched the approaching showdown between Soviet Russia and Finland today for a further sign of the new order in the Baltic region.

Confronted by Russia's quest for supremacy in that part of Europe, the northern countries which had not already signed on the Soviet dotted line wondered how Finland would make out.

Finland, Sweden, Denmark and Norway were drawn together at Helsingfors in a discussion of how to sidestep the war and carry on their vital commerce in the Baltic and North Seas.

Sweden, aside from Finland the most immediately concerned by the expansion of Soviet power, strengthened her defenses and had hastened construction of air raid shelters.

Air Defence Practice.

Finland herself practised air defence while a delegation headed by Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Minister to Stockholm, entrained last night for Moscow in response to Premier Ilia's invitation—as Finnish officials put it—to exchange views about political and economic problems. The problems are highly complicated.

The Finnish party was expected to reach Moscow tomorrow morning.

The delineation of the Finn-Russian railway trip was contrasted with the speed of adjustments followed by representatives of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania in carrying out their negotiations for mutual assistance pacts which resulted in broad military, naval and air bases for occupation by the U.S.S.R.

Never Bow to "Tyrant"

"Never shall our land bow before the foreign tyrant," sang the crowd at Helsingfors after last night as the delegation set out. It was part of the National Defence to put a people ruled by Russia until 1917.

Patriotic shouting on the night's platform, bit his lip to control his emotion. It was he who led the nation in neutrality and Finland was establishing her independence from Russia, in 1917-1920.

The premier told foreign newspapermen he hoped people in other countries "will realize what happens and judge results according to circumstances and facts."

Backed by the presence of additional reservists called to the colors for "extraordinary service to strengthen the national neutrality," Finland was also improving her border defence fortifications and engaged in widespread blackout tests of air raid defences.

The Swedish government started construction of the first bomb-proof shelters in Stockholm yesterday and ordered soldiers called to leave service Oct. 15 they would have to remain at their posts.

Marmora Man Held on Charge Of Vagrancy

Marmora, Oct. 10 (Special)—Hugh Young of this village was arrested on a nominal charge of vagrancy following the discovery of a fiery explosive in Young's home on the property of Alex Quinn early Monday night.

Mystery surrounds the burning of the five foot cross that was discovered by Mr. Quinn when he observed a red glow shining through the kitchen window. The police were notified of the incident and Chief Percy Cray investigated.

With the assistance of several bystanders the fiery cross was torn down and the flames extinguished. No damage resulted. The cross had been erected by Young, it was alleged, however, only small portions of the wooden structure being saved for identification.

The cross was constructed of planks nailed together and had been wrapped, it seems, in oil-soaked rags which were ignited. The blaze attracted hundreds of persons almost ere before it was extinguished, however. Police investigations are continuing, while Young was lodged in the Belleville jail awaiting further probing. He was merely charged with vagrancy, Chief Cray stated.

Civilian Finns Urged to Leave Helsingfors

Helsingfors, Finland, Oct. 10—(AP)—All civilians who can go were urged, in a new warning, to preparations to leave the environs of Helsingfors and Viipuri in a broadcast tonight by the Ministry of the Interior, Urho Kekkonen. He said the measure was "purely precautionary but the sooner carried out the better."

The warning was given as a Finnish mission was on its way to Moscow at the invitation of the Soviet Government to discuss unspecified economic and political problems. Russia has gained sweeping concessions from Finns similar missions from smallest Baltic states.

The Finnish mission is expected to reach the Soviet capital by morrow.

Viipuri is a port on the Gulf of Finland, almost directly north of Leningrad. Helsingfors perhaps were reported concentrated today at Kronstadt, naval base near Leningrad, and Russia has massed in the frontiers of the Baltic states.)

'FIGHT IT OUT'

Hitler said the winter relief work would be devoted chiefly to the Red Cross, which would practically be merged with it.

Sacrifices at Home

"Let no one at home think of the greatness of his sacrifice, but of the sacrifices of those who gave their all," he said. "Compared to their sacrifices those at home make sacrifices.

"This year's relief must exceed everything hitherto achieved. We want to show peoples abroad that silly attempts to find evidence of a lack of unanimity among us are vain . . . we want to make them respect our constitution.

"We want to bring evidence of what we can endure and accomplish.

"It is to be hoped that others can do as well . . .

Declares Lies with Others'

"The decision of peace or war lies with others. We simply have a firm determination to fight.

"The day must come when Germany, without being interfered with by others, can within its living space, which is ours, distribute and partake of the goods of the world to which it has a right.

"In this spirit, I open the winter relief work of 1939-1940."

Hitler Puts on Uniform

Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy for party affairs, and Dr. Paul Goebbels Minister Joseph Goebbels, who opened the meeting with a long report extolling the party's previous work, accompanied Hitler.

Hitler, without being interfered with by others, can within its living space, which is ours, distribute and partake of the goods of the world to which it has a right.

"In this spirit, I open the winter relief work of 1939-1940."

Hitler Puts on Uniform

Rudolf Hess, Hitler's deputy for party affairs, and Dr. Paul Goebbels Minister Joseph Goebbels, who opened the meeting with a long report extolling the party's previous work, accompanied Hitler.

Sacrifices of Soldiers

Referring to the fight on the Eastern (Polish) front, he said he had been deeply moved when he experienced much more than the German soldiers as a people.

Goebbels asserted that "figures of things actually achieved speak more clearly than all our opponents, especially in the warring democracies."

He said a total of 535,5000,000 marks (214,000,000 dollars) this year and that the total for six years of Nazi administration for winter relief work was 2,500,000,000 marks (about $1,000,000,000).

Goebbels declared he had been used for the rebuilding of the Saarland, Austria, the Sudetenland, Moravian protectorate, Hitler youth building, Red Cross and national welfare generally.

Goebbels asserted that 1,186,146 Germans had died in the World War without remuneration to this gigantic sacrifice.

New Classes Called

Two new classes of army reserves were called to the colors. The German repatriation schems meanwhile was said to be speeding up, with 2,000,000 persons outside the Reich. Germans in Bessarabia and Bukovina people wanted to leave homes of long standing to come into the greater Reich, soldiers declared on visages.

The reservists—classes of 1911 and 1912—were ordered to report for service immediately through the board posted which there would be no "public notification".

Posters announced yesterday that all members of the reserve (erstatz reserve aswell) were obliged to report not later than October 15 for possible service in the Wehrmacht. These men are unarmed and are over the usual military age.

Repatriation Issue

The repatriation question, which in some cases involved German families which have been in foreign lands for as long as a century or centuries, was called by European observers the greatest racial resettlement project ever conceived with any serious intention of realization.

Chief international attention today than the war, which the same observers said, presaged perhaps the reaction of western powers to Hitler's "peace" offer. Germans were told there would be no war on the Western front.

While Germany proposed to start with the re-settlement of Germans from the Baltic States, it was announced that the consolidation of the plan to southeastern Europe, where German minorities were more widely concentrated, was under consideration.

The German population of Latvia was given as about 60,000, Estonia at 20,000 and Lithuania at about 40,000. The proposal was that in agreement with governments concerned, these populations would be moved into territories wrested from Poland last month.

Personal Option

What degree of personal option would be given the German minorities to be transported, or conditions of citizenship and the problem of what to do about property of departing Jews were unsettled today.

Informed sources said the governments concerned were approaching these problems with good will that the difficulties would be overcome.

(Dispatches from Riga Latvia, said that Germans already were being loaded on German ships in Latvian ports. Libau and Estonian harbors, Ten vessels were reported at Riga, four at Leipaja (Libau) and Ventspils (Windau).

JOHN APPLETON DIES

Toronto, Oct. 10—(CP)— John Appleton, former newspaperman and for seven years Secretary-Treasurer of the Dominion Mortgage Investors Association and the Canadian Life Insurance Officers Association, died here today. He was 72.

9 LIFELESS BODIES

Police were on the scene almost as soon as he got down to the crossing, Stanford said.

Car Lying on Embankment

"Part of the back end of the car was lying on the embankment to the north, about 150 feet west of the crossing. The headlights were still lighted at the crossing. The whole part of the car was carried along the track for a quarter mile west to the semaphore and was wrapped around the semaphore pole."

Visibility at the crossing is good, the driver having an unobscured view of the tracks in both directions for several hundred yards. There is no wig-wag signal at the crossing.

While police were clearing away the wreckage, a small boy made repeated efforts to claim the body of his dog. He was Bill Brown, whose mother was killed. His dog was named Trix.

Neighbors of Mrs. Brown said children of the neighborhood were in the habit of gathering at the Brown home to await a ride to school.

Each of Mrs. Brown's children escaped due to the fact they rode to school on their bicycles this morning.

Inquest is Ordered

Ross Tibando, father of three of the victims, is a market gardener. His wife became hysterical when she learned of her loss and was given to hospital for observation. There are seven other children in the family.

T. H. Davis, father of Verna and Gladys, is a fruit and vegetable dealer. Mrs. Davis said the girls, a baby girl three months ago. Concern in the office for the safety of the shock she suffered today.

Alfred Black, father of a girl recently came to the neighborhood from Dundas, Ont. An employee of the Malleable Works, he has just acquired a service station. Mrs. Brown's husband is a market gardener.

An inquest has been called for Monday night at Islington Town Hall. Dr. Kinsley Lawson, Chief Coroner of Ontario, will preside assisted by Dr. Emerson Bull, District Coroner.

Dr. Bull said it was the worst accident he had had in his experience. Dr. Bull said he and Dr. Lawson would discuss measures to prevent a recurrence of the tragedy. He said construction of a subway at the intersection was a sure way to avert future crashes there.

MILK THIEVES QUITE ACTIVE

Hundreds of pounds of milk were reported stolen from surrounding districts reported by farmers during week-end the can containing the milk being taken along with the product. Large quantities of gasoline were stolen in the vicinity from which the milk was taken, it is believed which prompted investigating Provincial Police to draw the natural conclusion that the thieves were travelling presumably in a motor truck. Cases have been in the vicinity of Redneresville and on the 3rd concession of Thurlow were reported during the week-end and Monday night, respectively.

Chas. Hoffman, Ameliasburg Township, one hundred and sixty pounds of milk left for cheese factory delivery, was stolen, 60 pounds respectively from the milk stands of Lorne Bonter and Mr. Clark, Bridgeman. Robert Dempsey, Redneresville, reported that the theft of between 40 and 50 gallons of gasoline taken from his gas pumps. No unusual disturbance was heard during the night, Provincial Police Wm. Lynch, in charge of the investigation.

The following night two cans of milk, weighing 160 pounds each, and containing about 20 gallons were stolen from the farm of John Juby, 3rd concession Thurlow, when an attempt was made an attempt to break-in into Stewart's service station was unsuccessful. This was an effort to obtain gasoline at Hopkins' garage at Foxboro. Provincial Constable Constable McBrien revealed today.

Police are investigating and establishing a market for stolen milk in this section of the province is the mystery that is confronting the Provincial Police who are seeking information from the general population of the night marauders. In all cases the cans containing the milk were found empty, with the produce, which proved a more serious financial loss to the victimized farmer than did the actual loss of the milk.

Fire Department Undertakes General Inspection of Buildings This Week

Inspection is Made in Conjunction With Fire Prevention Week

OCT. 9th. to 14th.

In conjunction with other cities and towns of the Dominion, Belleville will observe Fire Prevention Week starting from Monday last until Saturday of this week.

Observances of the local Fire Department will consist of inspection of buildings, cellars and factories, while the importance of fire drills and prevention and elimination of hazards will be stressed among the schools of the city.

Today four members of the Fire Department were detailed to thoroughly inspect shops, stores, factories and other buildings in the industrial and business centres of the city while Assistant Fire Chief Harold Vance will conduct a personal inspection of churches. He will request the distribution of pamphlets containing instructions with regard to fire prevention, while drills will be conducted by the students in schools.

In a statement given to the press the importance of fire prevention was stressed by Fire Chief William Lynch. He urged the public to inspect and clean pipes, flues and chimneys before lighting fires when cold weather sets in. "It is only a matter of a few minutes work," he said "and by this co-operation entrained and are over the usual property loss will be avoided."

Generally speaking, the chief pointed out, the public of this city has always given the fire department the best of co-operation, and maintenance of these efforts is again asked by the department.

SURVEY PARTY CAMPS NEAR LAZIER'S DAM

Preparatory to the inauguration of survey work on a new power project that will extend from Trenton to Kingston, hydro engineers from Toronto were under canvas near Lazier's Dam over the week-end.

Large marquee tents sprang up practically overnight, while other equipment arrived for a lengthy stay were made. While-it was unable to ascertain the exact number of employees and engineers, it is understood that a large number have been sent here to obtain data. Valentine at Hopkins' garage at Foxboro. Provincial Constable McBrien revealed today.

Construction work on the new project will start immediately following the conclusion of the survey, it was learned today.

Erich Raeder, German Admiral Held at Post

London, Oct. 10—(CP) — The Daily Sketch today reported that Grand Admiral Erich Raeder, Commander-in-Chief of the German Navy, tried unsuccessfully to resign his post as a result of Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's "Baltic blunder."

The newspaper said that Raeder protested that there was nothing in common, enabling Russia to grasp all strategic points and islands in the Eastern Baltic. Result—the new German Navy in the east while the British Fleet bottled it up in the west.

"We understand that Raeder warned the Foreign Office before von Ribbentrop's first visit to Moscow against any attempt to secure anything that would jeopardize naval action in the Baltic in the event of a dispute with the Soviets.

"Von Ribbentrop has now both army and navy chiefs against him. As a result of Raeder's unaccepted resignation and his antagonism of the navy to further Soviet engagements, the Nazis are to do all in their power to prevent Stalin from getting important naval points from Finland."

Ex-Members of Air Forces Asked to Offer Services As Mechanics

Ex-members of the British Empire Air Forces, the R.A.F., R.N.V.R. and R.N.A.S. are asked to offer their services to the government with the capacity of tradesmen, mechanics, etc., according to a communication received today from the Department of Labor by the local office of the Government Employment Service.

Those who have had any service with the air forces of the Empire, who with employment in aircraft construction maintenance, are asked to communicate with the nearest Employment Office immediately, the communication which originated in the Department of National Defence, indicated.

ANY PRECIPITATE

The Washington Post (Independent) said that "until British and French define their war aims in reasonably precise form and until at least a general idea of the settlement sought becomes apparent, Fuehrer Hitler will have an unnecessary advantage."

"At the appropriate moment which must be immediately, a specific elaboration of their war aims should open the Fuehrer's and the British governments. Some definition of peace terms will, it is assumed, weaken German resistance and by that advance the peace so universally desired."

Civilian Hatred of Enemy Absent.

The Baltimore Sun suggested that the apparent absence so far of passionate civilian hatred of the enemy augurs "that all peoples are saner than ever intelligently aware that modern war does not ensure a settlement of the problems which caused it.

"The stubborn reluctance even now to put aside all hope for peace is significant," the paper said. "It is certainly a challenge to the judgment and realism of the leaders of all countries and one which they must meet fairly and soon."

The Cleveland Plain Dealer (Independent-Democrat) observed that "unless Hitler and his Reich will not be moved either by kinds of terrorism or political plans to forget about Poland. For many well-proven reasons the British do not trust Hitler's word.

"The spectacle of Brother Stalin, who liquidates his opponents by wholesale assassination, preaching sweetness and light to Britain and France, will fool neither London cockneys nor French peasants."

The Chicago Tribune (Independent) did not comment on peace sentiment but said of Hitler's speech:

"It is not for us in America to say whether the allies should accept Hitler's offer, submit counter proposals, or reject it out of hand. It is Europe's war, not ours."

ADVANCED

In addition Canadian production of bombers and fighters will be speeded, up and finished aircraft flown across the Atlantic for delivery in the theatres of war.

Each Dominion will retain its separate air force which will work in co-operation with the R.A.F. under allied command.

Great Magnitude.

"The undertaking is one of great magnitude," Sir Kingsley declared. "Its development will result in a very great and rapid increase in the number of training schools, already large, and achieve increased output of first-line pilots, observers and air gunners which, combined with our home effort, will ensure that the greatly increased requirements in trained personnel are fully met.

"The aim, in short, is to achieve by co-operative effort air forces of overwhelming strength."

"It will be seen that this undertaking involves the concentration of advanced air training, largely in Canada," Sir Kingsley said. "With the facilities which Canada possesses this co-operative effort will, in the opinion of the government of the United Kingdom, be one of the most essential and decisive character.

Aided By Staff.

"The mission from this country headed by Lord Riverdale, who will be aided by a specially selected technical staff, already is on its way to Canada to meet there corresponding missions from Australia and New Zealand.

"These missions will discuss with the Canadian authorities all the necessary steps that are to be taken for rapid execution of the undertaking including the provision of necessary aircraft instructors, ground personnel and airdromes."

South Africa, Sir Kingsley declared, had not entered the scheme, preferring to train its pilots at home. But, he added, "I am authorized to say the Union authorities intend to make their training as complete as possible and to expand their air forces to the fullest extent of their resources."

Sir Kingsley described the scheme as a "notable illustration of the manner in which the free and equal members of the British Commonwealth can, by discussion and collaboration, bring to bear in common the full weight and might of their individual resources to secure the achievement of a common purpose and the success of a common cause."

The minister's announcement of the air training scheme was part of a review of the activities of the R.A.F. since the war began.

All Sleghried Line Photographed.

He told the House the air force had made a "complete photographic map of the Siegfried Line", which forms Germany's westwall fortifications.

He said submarines were sighted by aircraft on 72 occasions during the first four weeks of war and 34 attacks were made, some of which were "undoubtedly successful".

Sir Kingsley said the latest British fighting planes were "definitely better than German counterparts".

In the first two weeks of war 10,000 men were accepted for air force duty, he said. More than 100 naval convoys were escorted by air force planes in the first four weeks.

Sir Kingsley mentioned "almost daily" clashes between German and British planes and said a German Messerschmidt fighter had fallen into French hands, permitting the British authorities to "test our conviction" that British fighters were better.

British Planes Covered Germany.

As evidence of British air power he told of British planes covering the whole length of Germany, from the Saar to the North Sea, all without serious interruption on a scouting flight.

The planes landed safely in England, he said, and photographs taken on the flight went into mags.

The air minister referred ironically of German comment on a British night flight over Berlin. He quoted a German official as saying Berlin citizens "slept quietly during the progress".

Our airmen, on their return, spoke of the firing and the searchlights that they encountered, so we can only conjecture that the people of Berlin must be very heavy sleepers."

Sir Kingsley added that he hoped Berliners were wakeful enough the next day to read British propaganda leaflets which "Hitler described as these 'wretched leaflets'."

Ottawa, Oct. 10 (CP)—Canada will be the centre for training the fighting airmen of the British Empire, according to a plan announced by Prime Minister Mackenzie King here today.

Mr. Mackenzie King's statement was released almost simultaneously with a similar announcement concerning empire pilots made in the British House of Commons by Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary for Air.

The Canadian Prime Minister said the governments of the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada had agreed on a co-operative scheme for training and expanding the air forces of the empire and that the plan involved concentration of intermediate and advanced training for pilots, observers and air gunners in Canada.

Mr. Mackenzie King described the development as highly important and designed to provide air forces of overwhelming strength.

Expand Production

Combined with the air training scheme is a plan for expanded production of aircraft about which Mr. Mackenzie King gave no details. Steps have already been taken, however, looking to the manufacture of aircraft and parts in Canada on an expanded scale.

The chief object of the plan is to utilize to the full extent the natural advantages and the facilities existing in the Dominions for training airmen and producing them free from the danger of enemy interference.

Both Australia and New Zealand will set up training schools but the facilities for advanced training exist now largely existing in the United Kingdom, will be concentrated in Canada.

Consequently after learning the elementary features of military flying, fighting airmen from Australia, New Zealand and the United Kingdom will come to Canada to be taught the fine points and acquire finished skill along with Canadian airmen.

Following completion of the training in Canada, the men trained will join the air force units maintained by the Governments in the theatre of war or the United Kingdom Royal Air Force until the necessity for the development will involve a rapid increase in the training facilities of air training schools in Canada.

Plans Simple to Meet

Within the next few weeks missions from the United Kingdom, Australia and New Zealand will meet in Canada to arrange for the co-ordination of the plan in consultation with Canadian authorities. The Canadian mission, headed by Lord Riverdale, is already on the way to Canada.

The plan represents the most comprehensive move towards empire co-operation to defence yet taken. The air services of the Dominions and the United Kingdom function under their several governments independently of one another and this will be the first attempt, through governmental co-operation, to pool work and material.

Proposals for the training of British pilots in Canada have been under discussion for nearly two years. The matter reached the stage of debate in the Canadian Parliament at the 1938 session and shortly after the end of the session, in July, 1938, Mr. Mackenzie King announced the Canadian Government had offered the British Government the facilities of the Royal Canadian Air Force for training Royal Air Force pilots.

Facilities Investigated

During the summer of 1938 the British Air Ministry sent Group Captain J. M. Robb to Canada to investigate training facilities here and the first detailed plan was disclosed by Hon. Norman Mackenzie, former Minister of National Defence, speaking in the House of Commons last April.

He said arrangements were being made for Royal Air Force pilots to obtain intermediate and advanced training at the Royal Canadian Air Force stations at Camp Borden and Trenton, respectively.

At that time it was not expected the number of British pilots trained would exceed 50 in any one year. That, of course, was peacetime and war conditions call for action do put that estimate far in the shade.

It was then understood some, if not all, of the R.A.F. pilots trained in Canada would be Canadians enlisting for service with the R.A.F. through the machinery and organization the R.A.F. maintains in Canada.

One advantage of training pilots in Canada as compared with the United Kingdom are the distance from the scene of hostilities and consequent freedom from attack on hangars, planes and personnel.

Another advantage of equal or greater importance is the wide spaces removed from cities and centres of population to be found in Canada.

"Y" CAMPAIGN OPENS WEDNESDAY

Men From All Walks in Life Enlist Services for Drive

With men from all walks of life throwing their forces and efforts into the drive, the annual Y.M.C.A. financial campaign guns opened fire in Belleville today.

Service club members, business men, industrial men and other outstanding citizens have joined the "Y" forces in an effort to raise in the neighbourhood of something like $5,000.00 to meet the current expenses of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. for the current year.

"In service we made Association privileges available to nearly 500 in our all year programme at less than cost rate last year," revealed General Secretary J. E. Sherrit.

"The "Y" conducted a softball league for boys aged 10 years at no expense to the players, over 200 participating, while in our Ki-Y hockey league over 180 boys participated in the various group schedules," added Mr. Sherrit as he stated a get-together banquet for all citizens, who are taking part in the Y.M.C.A. financial drive would be held at the "Y" this evening at which time the year's activities will be reviewed and the various campaign officers named.

The Y.M.C.A. in Belleville has become an institution in the civic life of Belleville with its motto of "Better building better boys for Belleville." The work of the "Y" among the teen-aged of the city is acclaimed as one of the most influential in the decrease of juvenile delinquency in the community, which makes their annual financial campaign most appealing to the general public in the assurance of the continuance of the activities of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. in its work among the youth of this city.

The appeal for financial assistance has been made and the canvassers will launch their drive Wednesday in anticipation of the usual spontaneous response, that has met this most worthy cause in past years.

Russia's Drive to Gain Baltic Power Enjoyed In Czars' Heyday Starts

(By The Canadian Press)

Soviet Russia, by her expansion in Poland and her diplomatic manoeuvres along the Baltics and the Dardanelles, shows signs of resuming the forward march to territory and influence that was interrupted under the czars.

For the first time since defeat by Japan in the war of 1904-5 reversed her 1,000-year record of growth, the Russian empire is reaching out again.

Almost bloodlessly she has recovered much of the Polish territory that was lost in the last war, the Bolshevist revolution and the defeat of Imperial Germany.

Swiftly she has moved to regain the dominance of the North Baltic. Slowly she is working toward an understanding with Turkey on control of the Dardanelles.

Many Story of Growth.

From the ninth century until the early years of the twentieth century the history of Russia was mostly a story of growth, a steady reaching out in all directions.

Even during the Mongol invasions of the thirteenth century, the Russian princes managed by perseverance and shrewdness to solidify their position.

Down through the years of battles with the Ottoman Turks, the annexation of Ukrainia, wars against Sweden, the division of Poland, the reconquest of lands from Lithuania, strengthening of the empire under Peter the Great—the march gained impetus.

PILOT LOCATES LOST HUNTERS

Couple Spotted Beside Campfire on Shore of Lake Wahnapitae

Sudbury, Ont., Oct. 11 (CP)—An airplane pilot today located and rescued Lawrence Brennahan, 60, and Kathleen Enright, two young partridge hunters who had been lost in the bush since Thanksgiving Day.

Phil Sauve, veteran northland flier, set out early this morning and spotted the couple beside a campfire on the shore of Lake Wahnapitae.

Sauve settled on the lake with his plane, picked them up and flew them here. At the city, where he learned that an aunt of Miss Enright had posted a reward of $500 for her safe return.

Brennahan, office worker in the Paignton Mines, Nickel District, and Miss Enright had passed two days in the bush but suffered little. The temperature last night dropped to 40 degrees Fahrenheit and they were not cold, but rather wise unharmed.

Airplane flights were made over the district yesterday and 15 huge bonfires were lighted at night to guide them, but they were of no avail. Hundreds took part in the search.

COMMUNISM WILL DESTROY HITLER SAYS COL. DREW

Prediction Made in Address Before Canadian Club at London

A VILE DOCTRINE

London, Ont., Oct. 11 (CP)—The hatred of Communism which rejected Hitler to power will, in the turn, destroy him, Col. C. A. Drew, Ontario Conservative leader, predicted in an address before the London Canadian Club today.

What that hope of an early peace with Germany may depend upon the extent to which the people convince the leading officers of the German Army that they will have more to gain by turning to do with Communism. There was no doubt, he added, that officers of the old Imperial Army fear the revival of Communism in Germany today.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

With the approach of winter weather, military operations on the Western Front assume a new interest, although they continue to pursue a slow and cautious course.

After more than a month of small local advances the outposts of the French army are now established on German soil along almost the whole of the land frontier between France and Germany, the line having stretched from the Rhine to Luxembourg.

Within the last few days the French have eased up on their forward pushes and the Germans have assumed somewhat the same sort of limited offensive which carried the French into German territory.

If French strategy is to hold the present line for the winter and give Germany a few months to taste the effects of the Allied blockade the new German military activity may indicate either a desire to bring on a major battle before bad weather sets in or merely to improve their position by recovering a few of the key points captured by the French.

It is scarcely likely the German High Command can entertain serious hope of a decisive result from an offensive in that area in the limited time available. But if they could drive the French back across the border and perhaps penetrate a modest distance into French territory it might have a good effect on the morale of the army and the population.

They would then have something to talk about when the Polish conquest becomes stale and the effects of the blockade are more increasing degrees.

All this is apart from the possibility Germany may seek a speedy victory by a lightning war rush through Belgium or Holland.

GET ON WITH WAR GROWING DESIRE OF BRITISH PRESS

Public Opinion Generally Insistent on Flat Rejection of Hitler's Peace

Daladier Praised for Stand Taken While Air Plan Highly Regarded

London, Oct. 11—(CP) — Detectives tried to track down sources of "defeatist propaganda" on the home front today while press comment indicated a growing desire to "get on with the war."

Scotland Yard submitted to the Home Office a report on pamphlets, attributed to pacifist, Fascist and Communist elements, urging Britain to "make peace with Hitler."

Legal experts who have received complaints that such literature has been distributed from door to door and through the mails, studied means of combatting this form of propaganda.

Public opinion in general remained insistent on flat reject-ion of proposals from Adolf Hitler for peace at his own price—the partition of Poland.

Typical reaction of the London men in the street was the assertion that "if we don't do the job now we'll have a worse time six months from now."

Interior Minister Kekkonen Tells Nation by Radio There Is No Immediate Danger at Present

Helsingfors, Finland, Oct. 11—(AP)—A civilian exodus from Helsingfors, the capital, and Viipuri, chief city of East Finland, was in full swing today as the Finns anxiously awaited developments in Moscow, where a delegation headed by former Premier Juho Passikivi arrived for "political and economic" talks with Soviet leaders.

This followed increased military activity by Finland and an ever-augmental blackout of this capital city last night.

Responsible Finnish sources said a firm refusal would be the nation's answer to any Soviet request for military and economic concessions such as Russia obtained recently from Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

"With many women and children leaving already left the city, in response to a radio appeal yesterday by Interior Minister Urho Kekkonen, approximately 125,000 persons have signified their readiness to leave. Of these, 64,000 are children under 16, with governesses or guardians, and adult invalids.

Bus Rides Free

Railway and bus stations were crowded with persons leaving the city, chiefly for the country. Long lines of women and children stood at ticket windows. All schools were closed.

In order to facilitate the exodus, the government lifted the ban against private automobiles, and gasoline was placed on sale. The city council of Helsingfors placed half of Helsingfors' fleet of buses at the disposal of those leaving the city.

Emphasized Solidarity

Foreign Minister Eljas Erkko, in a newspaper article, emphasized the solidarity of the Scandinavian bloc, to which Finland is closely bound, and saw signs of unrest in western nations aroused by the "menace" from the east. He suggested the possibility of a radical change in the development of the war within the next few days.

FINLAND PREPARES

Allies Must Consider Possibility Germans Plan Long War—Romier

Lucien Romier, Director of Figaro, Says Germany Is Preparing for Long War and Is a Well Known War Historian

(Copyright, 1939, by The Havas News Agency.

Paris, Oct. 11 (Havas)—One possibility which Great Britain and France must take into serious consideration is that the German general staff may be planning for a long war, instead of a short war on which its tactics have hitherto been principally based.

Until Russian supplies can be set flowing toward the Reich, the Germans would confine themselves to attempting to exhaust the military, moral and economic resources of the allies and harass their supplies by sea.

The thesis that the Nazis are doing everything possible to avoid a long war and is still being developed in neutral dispatches emanating from Berlin, which would be astonishing, however, if the Germans—who make plans for everything—haven't at least one plan for a long war.

The preferences or arrangements at the beginning of a war do not necessarily command its subsequent development. This was demonstrated in 1914, when a military rebellion—which should have ended quickly—developed into a civil war and that war, which should have been a swift one, became very slow.

Use Of Great Resources

The Germans need at least a year to exploit the economic part of the resources they hope to find in Russia. Russia could be by a large number of Soviet methods of production, overhauling of equipment and an overhauling of transport system for direct or in transit deliveries.

The main fault with such a plan is that it would require extreme docility on the part of the Red Army, but that they can work quietly in Russia.

Such docility has already been revealed by the abandonment of Vilna and the Baltic States to the Soviets.

However, the Germans cannot let a free hand to the Scandinavian states, for these nations constitute a vital zone for Germany's raw materials and food supplies.

Paris, Oct. 11 (AP)—Bad weather hampered operations on the western front today as the French reported staff honoured fresh attacks by "strong enemy patrols" had been beaten back east of Saarbrucken and Primasens during the night.

The attacks apparently were a continuation of thrusts which the German launched Sunday on a 25 mile front east of the Moselle River.

Reference to fighting in the region of Primasens, 55 miles east of the Maginot Line, was taken as an indication of the increasing scope of the German activities.

The German attacks, French sources said, were led by "suicide squads" and had grenade throwers supported by companies employing automatic arms.

Vancouver, Oct. 11 (CP)—Second Lieut. Ernest B. Saxon, object of a widespread aerial search in Washington State after he and Private W. E. Shane disappeared on a flight from Seattle to Boeing Field, safely arrived here today, safe after he and his companion jumped from their disabled plane.

But Saxon said he does not know what happened to Shane after the two parachuted to earth Monday afternoon in the Cascade, B.C., hills northeast of Vancouver and 70 miles north of the Canada-United States border.

Stiff, sore and unshaven after 26 hours in the British Columbia wilderness, Saxon picked slivers from his hands as he related how he lost Shane in the jump when the plane's gasoline ran low. A moment later the plane crashed from 1,000 feet and landed in a tree.

His story of the crash.

"I did not see Shane again after he jumped," said Saxon, member of the Washington National Guard at Spokane.

Was in Fellow River.

"I was flying south when we jumped and I told him to follow a river, which turned out to be the Douglas river, and we were to meet. Then he never showed up and I thought the best thing to do would be to get to civilization and organize a search party.

"The 22-year-old flyer then told how stumped along the river bank, following it downstream. On Monday night he made a fire with one of three matches he had.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Insects and weather! Insects are numerous, or few, depending on their food plants, their enemies, and the weather, or a combination of these. Weather is perhaps the most important. The cold in the spring may occur after the eggs are hatched, starving the young and robbing all leaf-eaters, by killing the vegetation on which they feed. Heavy rains cause destruction of great numbers of insects by washing the very young from trees and herbs. Cool, dry weather, by delaying the growth of all vegetation, also reduces the number of insects; high temperatures and light rainfall favor their development. Man, limits the numbers of some, and others he entirely exterminates.

G.B.S. Advocates Bombing of Berlin Or Else Hold a Peace Conference

London, Oct. 11 (CP) — George Bernard Shaw says it's up to Prime Minister Chamberlain to declare whether he is willing to peace war by bombing Berlin and if not the sooner a peace conference is held the better.

"Our pledge to Poland was explicit," Shaw wrote in a letter to the Manchester Guardian. "We have come to her aid With all our resources, which meant that when the first German soldier crossed the Polish frontier, the R.A.F. would bomb Berlin; for in no other way could we help Poland, being unable to put a British soldier into Poland . . . The British ship into the Baltic before Poland was conquered.

"On the strength of that pledge, Poland put up a desperate resistance. Now bombing Berlin meant the beginning of a series of retaliations in which our cities and German cities would be changed into heaps of heaps. And when it came to this point Mr. Chamberlain found simply that he could not bring himself to do it. Now this was only one instance of what is happening all around.

"The Rome-Berlin axis was to have annihilated us, but when Signor Mussolini realized what he was letting Italy in for at the hands of the French and British (air) ace and the Mediterranean fleet, he backed out. The anti-comintern pact was to have rallied all capitalist Europe against the U.S.S.R., with the Fuehrer and Il Duce as saviours of the world from Communism: but what actually happened was that when all capitalist Europe, with

"Y" Campaign for $5,000 Set in Motion at Banquet
Six Teams Chosen to Sell the Advantages of This Institution
5-DAY DRIVE
On the eve of the 115th anniversary of the celebration of Founder's Day of the Y.M.C.A. over sixty energetic business, industrial and professional men of Belleville launched the annual Belleville Y.M.C.A. financial campaign at a banquet held in the building last evening following a luncheon. The General Chairman, J. B. Boyce divided the campaign workers into six divisions of ten members each taken care of through the general funds of the Association. It is the duty of each campaign worker to bring before the general public the work which it is actually doing in our community and the public is acquainted with this effort as will be assured we will be given their whole-hearted support," urged Rev. Dr. Wilfred Bowman. Nelson McEwen, National Boys' Work Secretary of the Y.M.C.A. at principal speaker.
A Public Service.
"The Y.M.C.A. is a lay organization and has its lay participation in the community and this is because you the Y.M.C.A. is a public service to our community. No later than this afternoon two young lads came into the "Y" here after getting off a freight train, and, as they behaved and the other from Montreal. They were asking employment and we considered a shower bath. We provided them with soap and a towel while they had a fortnight of the shower baths at no expense to themselves as they could not afford it. They got cleaned up. It is small business like this that the Y.M.C.A. stands for and it is up to you workers to acquaint the public with these facts.
"The Y.M.C.A. is an essential service to a community and therefore must look to the public for support. Did you ever realize that it takes $2.00 a year to keep a young man in reformatory or in the penitentiary?" said Mr. McEwen as he pointed out to the workers that all that Belleville Y.M.C.A. asked was equivalent to the upkeep of seven such persons for a year. He pointed out the duties of the "Y" open to help a helping hand to the youth of the community.
"You workers must interpret the "Y" and tell it to the public," urged Frank "I think it is a good thing that a Y.M.C.A. has a speed contestant in Canada, simply because then the association has to give a periodic accounting for its past activities and prove to the public that it is a worthwhile institution," said Mr. McEwen with much sincerity.
Mayor Bone personally congratulated the campaign workers present. He felt Y.M.C.A. is very essential in the life of any growing and thriving community," asserted His Worship. Entertainment was provided by James Bangjer and Leo Riggs while Nerden Tiffenson acted as song leader during the luncheon hour.
Outlines Campaign.
In outlining the campaign General Secretary J. E. Shortt pointed out that during the last year the Belleville Y.M.C.A. had provided hockey games for 260 boys at no cost and also softball games under the same arrangements for over 300 boys. During the season the "Y" entertained the 500 children at the annual Y's Men's Hallowe'en Frolic, while 81 different organizations had used the facilities of the "Y" for 184 meetings. Thirty-six new members had been taught to swim during the year and upwards of 500 passed swimming tests or took life saving examinations with success. Mr. Shortt stressed the fact that the "Y" workers as lammyer free service, information and counsel to transients, to help young men and boys seeking knowledge in various phases of life and in sporting activities.
Besides Mr. Shortt, Chairman Boyce and Mr. McEwen, W. B. Deacon, H. W. Ackerman, Mayor Bone, C. A. Cameron, M.P., and Rev. Newman were at the speakers' table.
The team captains and officials of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. campaign drive include:
Team 1, Automobiles, Capt. Leo Riggs; Team 2 Bankers, Capt. Irvine Mercer; Team 3 Rotary, Capt. Howard Clarke; Team 4 Business Men, Capt. Joe Imlah; Team 5 Kiwanis, Capt. F. C. MacLarkin; Team 6 Ya Men, Capt. N. E. Edwards; Special Workers, Capt. H. W. Ackerman.
Major A. Fred Douglas, teams 1, 2, 3; Major B. Lorne McDougall, teams 4, 5, 6.

POLICE COURT

The conventional post-holiday toll was taken, several appearances in today's city police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., when five drunks contributed the customary "ten and costs" and a sixth plaintiff was charged and his case was enlarged for a week.
"You understand that all right," remarked Crown Attorney Farnham, K.C., to the five Chop-ocs', a Hungarian transient who appeared today on a charge of vagrancy after being apprehended by C.N.R. property men yesterday.
When charged with vagrancy Chopocs shrugged his shoulders and stated, "No understand."
After Mr. Donman had learned that Chopocs had no previous record and suggested the case be dismissed with His Worship giving same day service and ordering that last Wednesday, Chopocs remarked "Thank you" and hailed J. Hall in courtroom with Mr. Donman making his previous remark.
In a written plea of guilty, Roy Blakely, Belleville, was convicted of a charge of failing to return to the scene of an accident and fined $10 and costs.
A charge of demanding money from John Bell with menaces contrary to Section 452 of the Criminal Code, was withdrawn against Cecil Moore of Belleville, on which he has been hanging fire for months and it would be his turn, "all cleared up," suggested Court Clerk Chief Kidd, which prompted the withdrawal.
"I suggest we continue this case as a test case and submit written arguments," requested R. D. Arnott, Toronto, M.P., who was appearing on behalf of several Front Street merchants who were charged with unlawfully displaying goods on the public sidewalks in front of their respective places of business, contrary to city ordinances. Both City Solicitor A. B. Cullin, K.C., and His Worship agreed to Arnott's suggestion and written legal arguments will be submitted to Magistrate Butler in a subsequent court.

CHILDREN FOUND TIRED BUT HAPPY

Campbellford Boy Missing 15 Hours Rescued by Kindly Motorists

Allen's Mills, Ont.— (Special)— Missing for approximately fifteen hours, on Monday, after confessing to a trail of imaginary "Indians" in the Hendry Woods, east of Campbellford, Donald Campbell, Jr., (Don) Messenger, 11, and Tom Messenger, 8, sons of Mr. and Mrs. Archie Campbell, Campbellford, were picked up near midnight by kindly motorists and returned to their parents' home and returned to their anxious parents.
The youngsters told a dramatic story of an all-day tramp, through bush and swamp, which completely baffling asleep by the roadside, and lost again, tramping along endlessly until they were found by Mr. and Mrs. David Wellman, who took the tired youngsters into their home and notified Campbellford police.
Leaving their home in the morning, the children entered the woods in pursuit of imaginary Indians. Straying through the thick undergrowth they eventually emerged near Hendry and Masters-Jones Bridge highway. Their sense of direction confused, they struck out in a direction directly opposite to that of early, tramping along the road until they came to Hopkinstone Schoolhouse near Allen's Mills.
Tired from their exertions, they fell asleep by the roadside, and awakening a few hours later, trudged along in the opposite direction of their direction until they were met by their rescuers.
Mr. and Mrs. Wellman took the youngsters to their home and gave them refreshments, later notifying Campbellford police, who in turn informed the boys' parents. An hour or so later the exhausted youngsters were again safe at home little the worse for their unusual experience.

BASE AND LINE

In addition to sending troops to France, British garrisons in the British Isles must have been "strongly reinforced" as well as garrisons elsewhere, "both in materiel and in men."
The War Minister declared the troops now in France more than the last British will send.
He announced a new system of recruiting for the Home Defence Forces. Home Defence battalions will be formed of older men and men unfit for service overseas. An infantry battalion of pioneer corps will be organized in, battalions to take over military pioneer work of them of enormous dimensions and weighing fifteen tons apiece or more."

Details of Transport Worked Out.

The war secretary said a "small body of specially selected" officers with seven confidential typists and clerks, secretly worked out every detail of the plan for moving the army and the Royal Air Force to France. Ingenuity, precision and patience would have baffled Bradshaw," said Mr. Hore-Belisha, referring to a complicated British railway timetable.

Secret Plan Evades Nazi Spies.

He said that as a precaution against spies not more obvious internal routes to embarcation points were taken than in 1914. Vehicles and men were dispersed in small groups, halted in concealed areas by rifles to the battalion. That also demonstrates the big increase in the fire power.
The War Minister reported the troops were in fine spirits, assembling only at the inadequacy of the cigarettes and the slow delivery of their mail.

Navy Seizes Enemy Shipping.

Before the war minister spoke, Winston Churchill, First Lord of the Admiralty, announced the Royal Navy during the last sixteen days had taken 13,615 more tons of shipping from the enemy than German U-boats had sunk in British tonnage.
Making his report, Mr. Hore-Belisha said:
"I am able to inform the House we have fulfilled, and more than fulfilled, our undertaking recently given to France to dispatch to that country in the event of a threat of an expeditionary force of a specified dimension within a specified time.

War Correspondents Arrive.

"The necessary staff and all assistance and a body of war correspondents has just arrived in France with the object of keeping us all informed of the day to day impressions and happenings there.
Comparing Britain's task today with that of 1914, Mr. Hore Belisha said:
"In those days there were only 800 mechanized vehicles in all and it was a rare load to exceed a couple of tons.
"We have already on this occasion transported to France more than 25,000 vehicles, including tanks, some

HITLER'S POSITION

Today Hitler stands in a position the like of which he has never occupied before. He probably fears Russia, Russia evidently has little use for him, here him diminishing being to strengthen the frontiers of the Soviet Union against the western nations including even Germany. He has made many nations fearful of him, one time friends are now wary, such as Italy and Japan and he faces, not weak states, but two mighty empires in arms, Britain and France, who have entered into war with the prayers of all civilization for their victory. He overran weak states, but now his lightning thrust cannot work on the opposition of the West.

Some hold the belief that he thought Russia would frighten the democracies out and that peace would be preserved, while his "punitive" expedition into Poland would be quickly carried out and he would rest on his peaceful laurels for a time.

Hitler in Warsaw did not find the glory that a really great man might have found had he earned it. He has earned nothing but curses loud and deep from the Poles. What a price for the glory of one man, and now that one man is responsible for the continued opposition on the West while the Soviet proceeds with adding to her strength on the northeast of Germany. Hitler, some observers believe, is very anxious that the west front conflict, so as to call a halt to Russia, but Russia keeps at his door. The belief is Russia will lend just enough assistance to keep Hitler at war and to keep the struggle going on in the West.

Adolf Hitler has been found wanting in statecraft and as an international figure. Time will probably show him little more than he has shown himself to have feet of clay whatever be his armor and armaments.

WHEN HITLER STRETCHES OUT HIS HAND

If Hitler has been looked upon as a wizard in deceiving his own people by his addresses, he at least cannot be said to have been very careful when he referred to his "outstretched hand" when noting the his Nazi ideas of what peace must be. His outstretched hand means to Austria the "anschluss", to Czechoslovakia, dismemberment and then a grab, to Memel it means annexation. To Nazis inside, to Poland it means death and destruction, to the nations around about Germany it has meant fear, to Britain and France it meant for years quarding of their coasts. Hitler nuisance, to Italy it has meant in all probability the end of the Italian connection with the Axis because Hitler stretched his hand across Poland and grasped the paw of the Russian bear, which knows how to use its weight and to crowd over the erratic Fuehrer.

Now Hitler's outstretched hand also means he says that he will hurl his thunderbolts at Britain and France if they spurn his proposal of peace settlement. He would be true Jupiter fulminating against the world.

Hitler, if he had been of another type could probably have led the world into peace and security, then his outstretched hand would have been in benediction, instead of hurling thunder of words and phrases at the non-German peoples. Hitler, like Napoleon, has a wrong course but he lacks the stability and counsel of a Napoleon who held out for twenty years and more. Hitler in desperation stretched out his hand to Russia and Russia took it with probably too great a pressure and did what some believe will mean the collapse of Germany sooner than expected. His outstretched hand for Poland meant calling on Russia. Had he been wise and backed down, he still had the opportunity to start anew. He might even have changed his stripes if that were possible to a Nazi, which is unlikely.

CANADA CENTRE OF EMPIRE'S AIR TRAINING

News that Canada is to become the advanced air training centre for pilots and airmen for the whole of the British Empire, announced by the Secretary for Air, Sir Kingsley Wood and by Prime Minister King indicates something of the peculiar fitness of this country for such an undertaking under such a situation as exists today in Europe.

Canada will be the training ground for thousands, perhaps as many as 25,000 a year from the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada for the advanced technical training. The United Kingdom and each of these Dominions will carry on preliminary schools at home. They will maintain their own separate air forces in co-operation with the Royal Air Force. More training schools will develop as a result of the decision.

So Canada as the pivot of the Dominions will help to achieve with them air forces of overwhelming strength, according to the Kingsley Wood. The South African air force will train at home and will build up a force as strong and as well trained as possible.

Canada fortunately possesses ample facilities for this co-operative effort of the Empire.

Canada is a good training ground it seems clear for Canadian atmosphere makes possible training for long hours and Canada is well advanced in civil aviation.

The Dominion of Canada is strategically situated on account of its proximity to the Homeland and the Dominions.

The magnitude of the program, together with the production of airplanes and other war effort in Canada and with the enlistment of men into Canadian divisions, will make Canada's contribution very effective in the total effort of the Empire in bringing the Nazi Government of Germany to its knees.

This is one of the greatest efforts of the war era now begun, and will build up an Empire chain of pilots, observers and airgunners and mechanics. What it will mean to the Empire and to Canada particularly in time of war and when the war is over leaves much to the imagination. It provides a gripping vision to the people to have such possibilities in the development of aviation.

Here in Canada the airmen will be permitted to carry on their training free from possible interference from the enemy. Canada has vast spaces where airmen may develop, its climate is suitable.

GERMAN 'SPLINTERS'

Hitler believes in lifting up the 'splinters' of Germans nationality in all parts of Europe and bringing them into the Reich and if absorption is not possible then by wholesale migration under German orders into newly seized territory in Poland or Czechoslovakia.

Had the original Germans from whom Hitler and the Nazis and other Germans have their origin, obeyed this principle, they would not have invaded what is now Germany. The Germans known early in history, were of course, not the first around the Baltic and the North Sea. They had predecessors but they migrated. In the process many "islands" or "splinters" were left among other nations. Even the Germanic race itself is a bundle of splinters of the different Grman tribes.

There are some vast "splinters" as in France, Switzerland and in the Balkan states. The scheme would seem to be too vast to contemplate.

In the present conception of Hitler, all that would be needed would be an agreement of the German nation en masse to make the country German but Poland and the Allies have a right to say. They want Poland Polish. Even descendants of German settlers should have the right to say if they want to be Germans or not.

Hitler is, of course, overemphasizing and exaggerating the disturbances caused by these "splinters" which have lived apart from Germany in many cases for many generations. All the trouble which has been caused can be laid to the Nazis with Hitler as their leader who stirred up strife and found these nationals only an excuse for war, saying they have been persecuted. The people outside Germany and Hitler know that these conditions were exaggerated and probably in the vast majority of cases pure fiction to "justify" a grab. Germany did not start the war in Poland, Hitler started it. On the fringe of Czecho-Slovakia Sudetenlanders even have been said to have desired the freedom they knew under the Czechs to be under the benevolent German subjects. Reports indicate that it was men ambitious for preferment who started the trouble and agitation and co-operation with the Nazis to make conditions so unbearable for the soul of Hitler that he had to go to war as in Poland to seize half of the territory though at first he only "wanted" Danzig and the Corridor.

It is doubtful if Hitler could if he wanted bring all the "splinters" back for many of these people would prefer anything to becoming subjects of this despot.

'ORDER RESTORED' IN POLAND

Poland which stood by its rights is laid low. Warsow, whose citizens and soldiers gave the world a far greater demonstration of valor than the German invading hordes, is largely in ruins.

The other day the Germans allowed a picture to be taken in a street of Worsow when "order was restored". It showed a German soldier and all around him ruins of the Nazis' making.

Ring in Garbage Pile

A ring valued at $25,000 was lost by Mrs. Robert Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, when she forgot it in a manicure bowl in a hairdresser's parlor on East Forty-sixth street.

She noticed the loss the next morning and returned to the hairdresser's about 10 o'clock. Police were notified as soon as a search of the premises failed to find the ring and Detectives Charles Kleber and Harold Hill, of East Fifty-first street station, began a search of the route of the truck that had removed the establishment's garbage between 9 and 10 a.m.

The end of the route at noon close to a end of the route at noon, close to its dumping point on Sutton near Fifty-sixth.

Czarist Russian Navy

The recent Iles Committee's investigation of the Soviet battleship orders brings to mind that the Russian Imperial Government, aside from having traditional bonds of friendship with the United States, made to America the name of the ship as a nation which supplied warships to the Russian Navy.

In 1857 Emperor Alexander I sent a large commission to New York headed by the famous Russian experts. This commission, which stayed here until 1860, ordered the first steamer-frigate (paddle), Ascanchaika. Gas Attacks

I have spoken before of the brilliant hockey player, who, during a rest period, was overcome with a greatly of indigestion and terrible pain. Fortunately the trainer quickly point out to him that his gas pressure was caused by swallowing air not by any kind of fermentation of food in his stomach. To relieve this victim in the field, coach, the trainer usually gave him a couple of peppermints or candies which helped to relieve the gas and he was able to play the balance of the game without much further disturbance.

In older or middle-aged individuals the inevitable will swallow air to some extent, gas symptoms—pressure, pain, belching, sometimes due to gall bladder disturbances or it may be due to excitement and the swallowing of air.

Dr. T. A. Kean in Medical Newsletter lists the most common symptom of gall bladder disease is flatulence—gas, and in many cases it is the only symptom. The feeling of distension or pressure comes on immediately after eating, especially a heavy meal or one containing fat—cream, egg yolks, butter, pastry. Sometimes may seek relief by belching up the gas or by loosening the clothing. Sometimes belching up air is practically odorless and tasteless and is in fact air that has been swallowed.

When the gas is belched up some of it is usually the gas and other odors or other remedy that is needed, the patient should not eat when excited or upset for the habit of the swallowing of air and the pressure symptoms caused by that swallowed air.

However, when the gas pressure and belching occur some hours after eating, the gall bladder disturbance is probably the more suspected as the cause.

Thus the simplest way of telling whether it is gas pressure and swallowed air causing belching up of the gas is to note when the gas due to a slow emptying or sluggish liver has a foul smelling odor, due to the fermentation of food some hours after eating.

If, however, you are bothered with gas, you should note whether it occurs without odor soon after meals, or some hours after and with odor. In the first case, calmness and no hurry at meals are the chief cure of prevention; in the second case small meals or not much fat in the meals should prevent gas attacks.

The Stars Say

A DAY of unpredictable and unprecedented events is forecast from quite thrilling planetary configurations. These indicate sudden and radical upheaval which may have startling effects upon the world's fortunes, activities and destiny. An extravagant outlay of funds may or may not be made for the benefit of the life and its objectives. Personal affiliations may change, possibly in the direction of romance.

Those whose birthday it is may look for quite unusual occurrences and thrilling year, with events of major importance that will have influence on the business, social and domestic life. Romance and adventure, travel, change of residence, vocation, loom large and may cause a rather lavish investment of funds or energy. A complete and drastic about-face seems imminent, with unexpected turns in the present scope of vision.

A child born this day may have a daring, audacious, original and dynamic nature, impelling it to unconventional ways, to the quest of adventure and romance. It may have unexpected accomplishments, figure in spectacular or revolutionary accomplishments.

FRIENDLY NEIGHBORS

The town of Bath in Prince Edward County is situated close to the American border. Between the town and the American town of Madoc.

The two weekly papers for these towns are both published by a Canadian in Huntingdon. This is perhaps the only instance of a paper being published in one country, for circulation in two countries.

WOULD IMPORT LESS CHAMPAGNE

London, Oct. 11.— (CP)— Viscountess Astor wants less champagne imported into Britain during the war. Speaking in the House of Commons today she said in a press on the Board of Trade that champagne was non-essential commodity which, in her opinion, could well be excluded during the emergency.

A Spotlight on Three Men

Make Gwilym Lloyd George has joined the Government (as Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade. He is 40. That is a time which pleases us all. For one thing Gwilym is not only a man of parts but surely he can be regarded as having a peace offering from his father, "L. G." as Father of the House, to Mr. Chamberlain as head of the Government.

One does not need to be clairvoyant to know that in the minds of Mr. Lloyd George and Mr. Chamberlain have not been cordial for some time. That discordance has existed between L. G. and almost all the Government supporters. Yet on Sunday morning when Mr. Lloyd George rose to speak there was an instant recognition of his place in our history as the spirit of victory. He was cheered from all quarters of the House and spoke with dignity, with brevity and a wise unpretentiousness.

Gwilym Lloyd George is notoriously our most popular M.P. He likes him immensely, but have never quite discovered why. He has not been built for the formation of food in his stomach. To relieve this victim in the field, coach, the trainer usually gave him a couple of peppermints or candies which helped to relieve the gas and he was able to play the balance of the game without much further disturbance.

Ring in Garbage Pile

A ring valued at $25,000 was lost by Mrs. Robert Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, when she forgot it in a manicure bowl in a hairdresser's parlor on East Forty-sixth street.

She noticed the loss the next morning and returned to the hairdresser's about 10 o'clock. Police were notified as soon as a search of the premises failed to find the ring and Detectives Charles Kleber and Harold Hill, of East Fifty-first street station, began a search of the route of the truck that had removed the establishment's garbage between 9 and 10 a.m.

The end of the route at noon close to a end of the route at noon, close to its dumping point on Sutton near Fifty-sixth.

It was taken into an alleyway running from Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets between First Avenue and Sutton Place, and Lieut. of Police Emergency Squad No. 6 donned hip boots and home.—New York Sun.

climbed into the truck of garbage, sifting every piece of dirt, shaking every tin can and unravelling every piece of string. They found the ring in the same loose ashes at about 2 p.m. in the front part of the truck near the bottom.

Patrolman Charles Cooper picked the ring and it also caught the relief of some of the spectators, including the truck driver and his assistant.

The ring, a 14-carat square cut diamond in a platinum setting, was insured for its full value and Patrolman Cooper's reward company is the property of Mrs. Robert Stranahan, wife of the president of the Champion Spark Plug Corporation of Toledo, Ohio.

Mrs. Stranahan came East to New York to place a son and daughter in school, and as the authorities were unable to get in touch with her in New York she is expected to have returned to her

Czarist Russian Navy

The recent Iles Committee's investigation of the Soviet battleship orders brings to mind that the Russian Imperial Government, aside from having traditional bonds of friendship with the United States, made to America the name of the ship as a nation which supplied warships to the Russian Navy.

In 1857 Emperor Alexander I sent a large commission to New York headed by the famous Russian experts. This commission, which stayed here until 1860, ordered the first steamer-frigate (paddle), Ascanchaika. Old Quotations Title Plays

A good many playwrights seem to be fond of using quotations as titles for their brain-children; a glance through any book of quotations is pithy and often pregnant with a meaning which an ordinary title would not possess. Here are a few examples of this currently visible on the theatrical firmament: "Tobacco Road," which Tallulah Bankhead is starred at the National; Lillian Hellman's play on the Song of Songs for that title quotation being "taken from a line, 'Come, the little foxes, that spoil the vines; for our vines have tender grapes.'" But even though that is the best example to be found at present, other seasons have yielded a plentiful crop of them.

There was "How Beautiful With Shoes," for instance, which is also from the Song of Songs. And "Exceeding Small", from a saying over which Omar Khayyam mills of the Gods grind slowly, but they grind exceedingly small." A title of Shakespearean origin is "All Our Yesterdays", from the famous line in Macbeth's soliloquy, "All our yesterdays have lighted fools the way to dusty death" After thinking it over, Maxwell Anderson decided that title was a little too sinister in its implications and so he changed it to "Merrily We Roll Along" —from "Goodnight Ladies". —New York Herald-Tribune

Nature Foretells the Future

The death of the fur on a rabbit's feet, the thickness of beaver lodge and muskrat house, even the first honking of southward winging geese, are not always to be relied upon, though the night, may bring premonitions of an early freeze-up. Men who pay attention to the old-time superstitions. Some may still store up such signs as the thickness of the wild berry crop, the activities of squirrels in laying in supply for winter, or perhaps the thickness of the fat around the kidneys of the animals killed in the fall and protracted winter.

But Nature does not endow its wild creatures or plant life with the power to thus foretelling the future with any degree of certainty. Radio communication by wire and radio, and the use of airplanes by meteorologists can at the best foretell what weather may be a few days ahead, based on the scientific study of the barometric changes from known cycles of weather conditions over several years, coupled with the effect of the heavenly bodies during such periods.

Animals, however, are affected by weather changes which may take place within a few hours. They are also affected by barometric pressure which can equally be sensed by human beings. So far this reason that leaves during a falling barometer turn over while with a steady glass they remain right as ever. Similar barometric pressure exerts upon the muskrat's bladder lying just below the backbone of fish which may bring it exactly the same manner a an aneroid barometer is influenced. This indicates good fishing, a falling barometer means poor fishing. Sensitive animals feel the weight and humidity of an approaching storm and become more and more nervous than ever, while swallows fly low over the water's surface in the hope of finding the approach of rain.

It is generally believed that large movements of southward migrating geese ducks and geese indicate severe winter conditions over the far north. But waterfowl migrations depend on the food supply, numbers during a high barometer, which in itself does not indicate an approaching storm.

Much of the old weather lore may still be found does somewhat has been brought to this continent from European countries and that little modification is applied to quite different conditions. However, the most reliable barometric sales, coming down from a day when fallacies concerning animal life and weather prevailed. The weather prophets, the birds and the beast know no more than we do, but they are far more than man does—and probably much less. — Calgary Herald.

GET ON WITH WAR

Speech Approved

The press gave almost unanimous approval to Premier Daladier's radio speech last night, in which he declared that France would fight on until "guarantees of security" for "lasting peace" in Europe were assured.

Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood's announcement yesterday of an Empire-wide air force building program centring in Canada also brought favorable comment from the press.

The Daily Mail described the plan as a "truly grand conception" while The Times called it "important, far-reaching and statesmanlike in the highest and largest scale."

A British mission now is en route to Canada to confer with the Canadian Government and ministers from New Zealand and Australia on details of the program. Under the plan, most of the aeroplanes in training will be centred in Canada, with the Dominions contributing to plan production.

To Follow General Lines

Prime Minister Chamberlain's scheduled speech in Parliament tomorrow replying to Hitler's end-the-war gestures was expected to follow the general lines of Daladier's declaration.

Diplomatic circles attached significance to the fact that Mr. Chamberlain had scheduled a meeting with August Zaleski, Poland's new Foreign Minister, on the eve of his appearance in the House of Commons. Viscount Halifax, the Foreign Secretary, will join the conference.

The Times, commenting on Zaleski's visit to London, said:—

"Whatever else may be said or not be said about the conditions of peace there will be acceptable to Great Britain and France, restoration of an independent Poland is, of course, an indispensable preliminary."

Government quarters showed no concern over reports that David Lloyd George is preparing to test out British peace sentiment through his council for peace and reconstruction.

The Daily Herald's political correspondent declared that Lloyd George's "stock has gone down with a rapidity" as a result of his recent speeches and articles, which many considered as smacking of appeasement.

35,000 Tons Sunk

The Government announced last night that 25,000 tons of contraband goods bound for Germany, including 13,800 tons of petroleum products, had been seized during the week ending Oct. 7. This brought total war seizures to 315,000 tons.

Government sources and the press made only guarded comment on developments in the Baltic, marked by reports the Russians had forced the Latvian and Finnish frontier and concentrated naval strength at Kronstadt at the Gulf of Finland.

There was some speculation on the effect Russian gains in the Baltic might have upon Germany. Some observers suggested it was not that possible German aspirations for expansion in eastern Europe had been definitely thwarted.

The Soviet Association reported rumors are again circulating in London concerning a possible secret session of Parliament to discuss the international situation.

According to these rumors preparations are being made to prevent unqualified persons from getting wind of the deliberations, the Press Association said.

GERMAN ATTACKS

"Feeler" Attack

Extent of the fighting was such as to give the impression of a coordinated "feeler" attack along the entire line between the Lauwers and the German industrial city of Saarbuecken.

French military men attached significance to the fact that the activity followed closely Premier Daladier's broadcast speech refusing the Germans peace on the formula based on the partition of Poland by Germany and Russia.

Some observers expressed belief the German attacks were the prelude to a large scale offensive which might be expected before the end of the week.

French military headquarters last night described the fighting during the preceding 24 hours as "savage" and the Germans were said to have paid heavily.

Battled in Cross-Fire

Although caught in the cross-fire from machine guns, some of the German patrols succeeded sufficiently enough to hurl grenades into the French lines, it was said.

Meanwhile French troops which previously had occupied the Borg Fersat at the extreme northern end of the front were reported keeping a wary eye on the Luxembourg border. The French apparently were willing to disregard the possibility of a German attack through the neutral principality of Luxembourg whose strength is limited to an army of about 10 officers and 400 men.

Daladier's assertion that mastery of the air was vital to both the allies and that "those who hold the seas and always succeed in carrying off the victory" was regarded by French observers as an indication of the Allies' probable strategy.

Involves Waiting Game

This, they said, involved a waiting game. The French declared they had every confidence in adhering to this policy while Germany would "inevitably suffer from her totalitarian manner."

At home, the government continued its round-up of deputies of the former Communist party who have urged peace with Germany. Twenty-Of 40 of these deputies not mobilized with the French army already are in 39 already were in jail.

Police still sought five of the remaining deputies, who were listed as Maurice Thorez, Jacques Duclos, Andre Marty, Raymond Guyot and Arthur Ramette.

PARTY LEADERS

Premier Duplessis Invited

Premier Duplessis received his Union Nationale campaign into the Provincial capital last night with a rally at Sherbrooke where he declared that Quebec is seeking nothing that the protection of its rights under Confederation.

Mr. Duplessis spoke both in French and English and in a discussion of Canada's war effort said: "We are back up to the Federal authorities to declare war."

"The war is not for us," he said. "The law is on the statute books. I can say to the population of Quebec it is law abiding."

Mr. Duplessis asserted there was no room for racial strife or narrow-mindedness in the province, and added that the English-speaking minority in Quebec always had received "fair and just treatment."

Denies Charges

He denied charges there were ulterior motives in the calling of the election and reiterated his stand that the time had come for the province to meet threats to its autonomy. The Union Nationale Government described as "unfortunate" the entry into the campaign of Dominion ministers.

Liberal leader Adelard Godbout devoted most of an address at St. Cesaire to an attack on the provincial administration. He accused the Quebec Government of raising the issues of conscription and war participation as a "clumsy screen" to hide maladministration.

He told a meeting in the little farming and lumbering centre in Dorchester County that the Union Nationale so had impaired Quebec's credit that today the province could not "borrow even 30 cents." Mr. Godbout claimed the whole government campaign was "camouflage to hide disgraceful provincial patronage and funds which were spent to assure the political security of the Premier (Premier Duplessis) and a few friends."

Two Different Stands Held

Mr. Godbout accused the government of telling French-Canadians that conscription and participation were the campaign issues, yet, he said, the same government had sent a circular letter to English-speaking electors declaring conscription was not an issue.

Paul Gouin, leader of L'Action Liberale Nationale, who has held only one public meeting so far, told in a broadcast from Montreal that his movement offered the "happy alternative x x x of getting out at last from the vicious circle of the old parties, broken to the core and sold to the money interests."

He hailed the A.L.N. as the "revival of democracy" and claimed that the people "find no sacrifice too great" to rally to its support.

Federal Ministers Criticized

He claimed the Federal Liberals intended to campaign for Ottawa in the election of Mr. Godbout what they call an explicit mandate to continue their policy of participation in the war." He added that perhaps they sought to find a pretext to "wash their hands of the whole business which perhaps finally may be adopted by Ottawa."

Mr. Gouin found the position of the Federal Liberals "so pitiful, so false, that they no longer seem to know what to say, what to do to get out of it."

Premier Duplessis continues his Eastern Townships tour today with a meeting at St. Johns, an industrial centre about 20 miles southeast of Montreal. Mr. Godbout is scheduled to speak at a rally tonight in Quebec City while Mr. Gouin will inaugurate his Montreal campaign with a public meeting.

COMMUNISM WILL

Hitler himself rose to power on promises he would destroy Communism. Now that the dictator is responsible for bringing the Red doctrine into Central Europe right to the German frontier and "if the German people still believe that Communism is a vile and treacherous doctrine, then they now must get rid of Hitler to protect themselves from Communism."

Fast Fatal Blunder

Col. Drew characterized Hitler's pact-time overtures as those of "a lying gangster offering his word of honor." Hitler must go or there could be no peace and any settlement with him "would only be an insidious offensive which of course could prepare for some new outrage."

He referred to the Berlin-Moscow Friendship Pact as Hitler's fatal blunder. The Fuehrer had become the catspaw of Moscow and the "willing tool" of the arrangement of Russia ingreases the Russian appetite for new territory."

In the past three weeks Hitler has seen his own technique put into practice by an apt pupil. When Hitler's army had broken Polish resistance, Stalin carried out a bloodless conquest of his own on the best Hitler style.

Didn't Wait Long

"But Stalin didn't wait for six months before he made another move. Within two weeks he gained control of Lithuania, Latvia and Estonia, all of which had been within the German sphere of political influence. He has acquired more territory in two weeks of bloodless conquest than Hitler acquired in two years."

Col. Drew suggested that if the German people rid themselves of Hitler's tyranny "there is no reason why they should not be our allies in the struggle against ultimately the world of the loathsome poison of Russian Communism.".

RUSSIA'S DRIVE

Ultimately Russia was knocking at the northern gates of Irak, reaching into Turkestan and across the sea she held the new, undeveloped region of Alaska.

Sale of the latter to the United States in 1867 for $7,200,000 was a mere bagatelle to the all-powerful czars.

Great Russia stretched from the Baltic to the Pacific and from Siberia, Japan and a rival to Great Britain in the middle east.

Czars Had Prestige.

And here the star of Russian expansion began to wane. The disastrous clash with Japan cost her prestige and money. For the first time she lost territory, yielding the lower half of the Island of Sakhalin off the Siberian coast to Japan, as the old strategic Port Arthur.

She withdrew from Manchuria, which had been almost a Russian dependency.

At home, the workers and peasants rose in the abortive revolt of 1904-05. There was Russian blood on the snow before the czar's winter palace in Petersburg, and the bones of provincial manors were burned.

The sporadic outbreaks were put down, and a weakened Russia went into the first world war.

Out of it came the successful Bolshevist revolution of 1917, along with the loss of more Russian territory.

Finland, a grand duchy of the Russian Empire, was declared independent in 1917; Estonia was proclamation in 1918; Latvia was created; Lithuania became a republic; Poland got great reaches of land from Russia and the Ukraine; and Bessarabia was joined to Roumania.

Lost 15 Million Population.

In all, Russia lost more than 15,000,000 population and more than 250,000 square miles of territory. The U.S.S.R. was left with 8,238,664 square miles. But, preoccupied with the Communist experiment, Russia apparently gave little heed to the losses.

The times have changed. Now Russia has rested, and many believe she has gained strength. Certainly more than a display of military might, she has regained much of what she lost in Poland.

While three great powers of western Europe engage in conflict, Russia stepped back into her old Baltic lands. Bessarabia, which Roumania has hastened to hand over what concessions were asked. And now Russia has extended sovereignty to the Kremlin council chamber. A Turkish pact was signed yesterday.

In the east, virtual control of the Chinese Mongolian Republic has been acquired through a mutual assistance pact. In Chinese Turkestan there is a possibility of the same.

Russia is reaching out again.

G. B. S. ADVOCATES

Japan in the bargain, realized that the Red army had military might to balance they all sought an alliance with Russia.

"Stalin just pushed them out of the way and took what he wanted of Poland," Herr Hitler, seeing that the anti-comintern pact had gone "phut", decided to do the same. Claim Stalin as an ally and share the spoils with him.

"When we and the French attacked Hitler on his western front and it was the time for Stalin to step in and with his famous air force, he, too, moved from starting a ruinous game.

"What Mr. Chamberlain has to declare now is whether he is going to bomb Berlin or not. If he does the consequences will go far beyond our maddest intentions and be different from anything either we or Herr Hitler contemplate. If not, the sooner we stop the war and arrange for talking of our respective grievances and those of the little staging we have destroyed, the better."

Miss Vera Sharp gave a reading. Mrs. Thos. Hay, Mrs. John Mercer, Mrs. Wm. Mercer, Mrs. Shillingfaw and Mrs. A. Burkitt assisted Mrs. W. V. Allan with the lunch, as they belong to different Institutes.

A splendid quartette with Miss Isabelle Irwin at the piano was given by Mrs. Sprigg, Shaw, Mrs. Cavell, who has been a writer for writers, composers and sculptors and many well known artists, entertained on the talking screen. It is hardly necessary to recommend one of this great benefactor and humanitarian. Scenes were first enlisted for the victims of the Belgium refugees, then became widened into a great and powerful drama of the most adorable "underground railway" which smuggled hundreds of fugitive wounded soldiers to safety over the very eyes of the enemy.

Miss Edith Cavell's story is told in "Nurse Edith Cavell" with digging and sincerity and without prejudice. The inspiring story of her heroic deeds and her trial is accurately presented in the most timely dramatic ending to an unforgettable picturization of terror-provoking martyrdom.

Miss Neagle has a notable role as the courageous World War nurse in charge of a nursing home in Belgium when the conflict breaks out. Although she is England's most celebrated nurse to her country when the German army marches across the border, she flies How she permits her sympathy and humanitarianism to overwhelm her patriotism and of many how she gradually organizes a system of escape for the wounded, of smugglers to spirit fugitive soldiers from the clutches out of the country, and how she is taken, tried and condemned by a Prussian military court to be executed provides powerful trenchant drama of the most brilliant scenes and unusual opportunity to display fine talents and genius.

"Nurse Edith Cavell" is said to be a memorable document in that it closely adheres to the last facts surrounding the martyr's life and death and the moving speeches at her testimony, as embodied in official war records and other media, add an element of realism which only enthicity seldom seen on the screen.

Included in a strong cast of two score players are Edna May Oliver, as a Belgian Countess and aide-de-camp to Edith Cavell; George Sanders as head of the German counter-espionage service; May Robson, as another Cavell associate; Zasu Pitts, as a bargewoman who helps transport the fugitives, and Sophie Stewart and H. B. Warner.

Herbert Wilcox directed and Cavell associate, Edith Cavell, for RKO Radio.

"Autograph Rounds" is the title of a new and funny Walt Disney Silly Symphony Cartoon to be exhibited on the program. English a host of entertainers in "Arcade Days" is a clever musical comedy revue.

One Part of Russia.

Finland, like the other three states once was part of the Russian Empire.

The Finnish mission, headed by Dr. Juho Paasikivi, one-time premier and minister to Sweden, reached Moscow by train and was greeted at the station by the Chief of Protocol of the Russian Foreign Office and the Finnish and Scandinavian minister to Russia.

Concurrently with the coming of the three the Communist Party newspaper Pravda declared editorially that Russia's policy of "peace, good neighborly relations and friendship with nations scorns one success after another."

"The Soviet Union removes the menace on the part of imperialist powers toward the socially defended states neighboring the U.S.S.R.," it added. "Thus an iron bolt of Soviet defence is being erected throughout the Baltic. Thus stable peace is being created in eastern Europe."

Every Precaution Taken.

(The Finnish government was taking every precaution to meet any eventuality following the pact of Stalinist and his party were impelled into a deal which Pinns might regard as the equivalent of their sovereignty.)

The third of the Baltic pacts, that with Lithuania, was concluded last night. Besides the military features, it provided for return to Lithuania of her historic capital, Vilna (Vilno), and the Vilno region, seized Oct. 9, 1920, by a "rebel" Polish general.

The Lithuanians never have ceased to regard Wilno as their capital. The Russians returned it last month in the westward drive into Poland which followed the pact passed it on to the Lithuanians.

Finns Studied Number.

The U.S.S.R. has the right to place a "limited number" of troops in Lithuania. The troops will be rented from the Lithuanian government and will remain under Lithuanian sovereignty.

One article of the Russian-Lithuanian pact declares that Russia has not affect in any way the sovereign rights of Lithuania, especially in particular their state organization, economic and social system, military measures are generally the principle of non-intervention in internal affairs."

FINLAND PREPARES

No Immediate Danger.

In his broadcast Kekkonen declared he could "truthfully say that at the moment there is no reason to believe Finland is in immediate danger," but added:

"We are in duty bound to consider seriously what is happening in the world and we must be prepared for any emergency."

Gas mask sales in both Helsinki Aos and Viipuri rose in the wake of Kekkonen's statement.

While no official estimates on the strength of Finland's military reserves were available, it was estimated the nation could put 600,000 men in the field.

The navy consists of two 4,000 ton coast defence vessels, two submarines, six gunboats, twenty-one minesweepers, six mine layers and nine motor torpedo boats.

The Bourse was ordered closed for an indefinite period.

TALK OF THE TOWN

"FOUR FEATHERS"

Is a thrilling colored film as you do a good book, as first-rate entertainment and relaxation, then top your movie list with "Four Feathers", Alexander Korda's stirring romantic drama of adventure in the Sudan, filmed entirely in beautiful new technicolor to be presented this week at the McCarthy Theatre.

"Four Feathers" is packed with action, thrills, melodrama and spectacle from the opening scene to the final fadeout. Its story centres upon a young man, Harry Faversham, who resigns his commission on the eve of his regiment's departure for the Sudan to join Lord Kitchener's Army. Faversham is dubbed a coward by his closest friends who send him three white feathers. Later the fourth one from the girl he loves. Determined to retrieve his reputation, he sets out for Egypt where he is disguised as a Sengali native. Thus he is able to reach Kitchener's Army and his comrades and through his courage, resourcefulness and bold adventures to redeem himself and return the four feathers.

Against spectacular backgrounds of breath-taking realism, rich in color beauty, the film unfolds sweeping scenes depicting the tragedy of the great battle of Omdurman for which Kitchener's gunboats had to be hauled over dangerous rapids and cataracts. 4,000 Arabs, Dervishes, Fuzzy-Wuzzies and British soldiers were brought together through the co-operation of the government of these scenes which were so thoroughly on the screen with remarkable effect that they seem more like actual battles.

Ralph Richardson, star of "Clouds Over Europe") C. Aubrey Smith, (Sir Cecil Graham in "The Under-Pup"), John Clements, (Lt. Durrance in "Sanders of the River"), C. Henry Gordon, Allan Jeayes, Donald Gray, Jane Dupree, stunning 20-year-old beauty who has covered Paris, Alexander Korda and awarded the leading feminine role, is universally excellent. There can be no hesitation in recommending "Four Feathers" for its spectacular technicolor, its fast-moving story, its swift direction and its notable performances by each member of the outstanding cast and it must naturally head any list of pictures which can be said to provide solid, thrilling entertainment. "Four Feathers" played to capacity attendance for a period of three weeks, at the Uptown Theatre, Toronto, "you-must"-see it. It is also highly recommended children's entertainment and in addition for their enjoyment the programme includes one of the funniest cartoons of the new season "Krazy's Choe Shop."

Germans Promote Alleged Sinker of Aircraft Carrier

Berlin, Oct. 11.—(CP-Havas)—The German News Agency announced today that Sub-Lieutenant Franken, who, it is claimed sank a British aircraft carrier during an air raid on the British fleet in the North Sea September 36, has been promoted to the rank of Lieutenant and awarded the Iron Cross.

The official propaganda services claimed the aircraft carrier subsequently sunk was the 22,000-ton Royal Oak. The British officials denied in London and proved false when the Royal Oak survivors of the United States Naval attache who sent aboard the Ark Royal after the Royal Oak was sunk declared the German News Agency quoted Sub-Lieutenant Franken as saying: "Dense smoke and fire was seen aboard the British aircraft carrier after he had dropped a bomb. The same British warships were sighted the next day, proving conclusively that the aircraft carrier itself was missing.

Since she could not have reached any British port it is clear that it is only possible that the ship was hit so badly that it sank."

Annual Convention Of Centre Hastings Teachers' Institute

Stirling—Over one hundred teachers representing schools throughout the central portion of the Hastings County, were in attendance at the annual convention of the Centre Hastings Teachers' Institute held on Friday, Oct. 6th at St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling.

Interesting Addresses and Discussions

Speakers of the day included Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Church, Stirling, Reeve W. C. West of Stirling, who welcomed the visitors, Public School Inspector H. W. McGuire, B.A., Mr. J. L. Haywood, B.A., Principal of Stirling High School; C. A. Wells, Principal of Stirling Public School; Miss H. L. Fair, B.A., Hastings County representative of the Provincial Agricultural Department; Mr. H. K. Carleton, President of the organization; Miss Mary Macpherson; Mr. Allan Gay, Leader in discussion groups included John Conkell, Charles Young, Miss Margaret Hopkins, Miss Kate Ross, Miss Thelma Fenwick and Miss Nora Naylor. With these speakers and leaders giving interesting talks the day's activities the program continued from one session to another in flawless fashion due largely to the previously arranged schedule prepared by the program committee.

At the noon hour dinner was served in the church parlors by the members of St. Andrew's Ladies' Aid, to whom suitable appreciation was extended by the visiting teachers. It was an appreciated holiday for school children but another day's work for the teachers.

President H. K. Carleton, presiding over the sessions introduced Rev. W. H. V. Walker of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church who conducted an inspirational period of devotion to mark the beginning of the day's activity. Reeve W. C. West of Stirling then addressed the gathering voicing a hearty welcome on behalf of the municipality to the, visitors.

President's Address

Speaking on the subject "Education of the gifted child" Mr. H. K. Carleton, President of the Institute, expressed the belief that too much time spent in educating the dull child causes neglect in developing the superior intelligence of the faster thinking bright student. Herein is found need for auxiliary teachers to prevent one class of student being discriminated against to the advantage of the other. A child should be taught to produce that which he is most capable of doing. "A bright child is a source of profit and pleasure in activities when properly directed." Intelligence of the child is greatly influenced by his or her natural environments, and in this respect pupils of rural schools have an advantage. The bright intelligent student of one grade is entitled to listen in to the teaching of other grades.

Creative Pursuits Should be the Aim

Closing his most interesting address Mr. Carleton stated the important part of the teacher's work is to keep curiosity active within the mind and make the things of his life lively, attractive and interesting so that the boy or girl is caused to think."

Mr. Allan Gay

Mr. Allan Gay was the next speaker and speaking on the development of art, he displayed several exhibits to illustrate his belief in the correlation between art, agriculture and social study.

Following a short period of community singing under the leadership of Mr. Morriss, Miss Calder-ine McQuarrie delegate to O.E.A., gave a detailed report of the proceedings transacted during the recent convention. The report was well prepared and presented in a most interesting fashion. Miss Mary Cochrane gave a talk and demonstration of printing, size, space development and letters as a result of combination of straight and round lines.

Mr. J. L. Good, Principal of Stirling High School, also pointed out the excellent opportunities offered to teachers of the lower grades in developing the minds of pupils. They have the testing period of the child in hand and can in early years do much to give the child the correct attitude toward school work. He also made several constructive suggestions for improving and conducting papers and stressed the fact that the child should always be free to express himself in cases of explained problems. Pupils in the higher grades should have frequent practice in the use of geometrical sets.

Mr. A. W. Hall, B.A., I.P.S.

Public School Inspector A. W. McGuire explained clearly the purpose of the Department Agricultural grants mentioning the present tuition of reading diplomas and attendance forms made available to all teachers. Also urging a greater attention to fire prevention week.

Experiments in Science

"Shortly after Christmas one hour sessions were reopened with Mr. C. A. Wells, Principal of Stirling Public School giving a talk on the value of experimental science in public schools and after pointing to its outcome being the creating of questioning from the classes he demonstrated several simple experiments that could be of value in the schoolroom.

Agriculture and School Fairs

The next speaker was Mr. H. L. Fair, local representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture who spoke on the value and purpose of the township rural school fair. The first of such fairs took place in 1909 and had a total of three schools in competition. In 1938, 525 schools took part totalling more than 111,000 individual exhibits there. For thirty years the department through this medium has raised the standard in rural schools.

GAL TWO ANNUEL

JorkTin edr roots and vegetables, grains and seeds, by the annual distribution of seed for school fair purposes. Children are educated in the comparison of good and poor specimens in all competitive classes. Mr. Fair also presented a display of stock taken from a recently held school fair and pointed out the basis upon which judging is executed.

Group Meetings

At this point the gathering was dismissed into several group meetings at which teachers were invited to present their problems. The group assembled according to grades in the following manner: Grades 7 and 8, John Conkell and Miss Young; Grades 3 and 4 Miss Edith Wallace and Lorne Johnson; Grades 1 and 2, Misses Thelma Fenwick and Nora Taylor.

With this part of the day's activity completed the final session including reports of the committees, the auditors report and the organization of the township units was brief climaxing a most interesting and constructive convention which closed with the singing of the National Anthem.

Officers and Committee in Charge

The following group of officers and committee workers were responsible for the program of the day—Hon. Pres. Mr. A. W. McGuire, B.A., I.P.S.; President Mr. H. K. Carleton; Sec'y. Treas. Mr. S. H. Connor; Executive Miss M. Mutton, Mrs. C. A. Wells, Mr. C. Holmes; Delegate to O.E.A., Miss C. McQuarrie; Auditors, Mr. Ralph Armstrong, Miss Nora Naylor.

Dr. Dafoe's Column on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

Premature Birth a Handicap in Child's Mental Development

I had little fear of any injury at birth affecting the brain of any of the Quintuplets. However, one should never be sure, and we were extremely anxious to know whether they were going to develop normally or not. So, believe me, we watched them very carefully, to note any activity in them that would give us an indication of what we sought.

Well, for the first year it was rather disappointing. They were definitely abnormal mentally as well as physically. Of course there wasn't anything particularly alarming in that, for they were premature children, and, as such it was that they would be normal in every way.

As I say, however we watched and watched them, and finally, when they were a year old, our care was rewarded. They began to show the reactions that normal children show many months earlier.

Then we had another worry. While their mentality began to develop mentally, little Marie didn't keep pace with them. In fact, it was not until she was a year and a half old that she began to take up the slack, so to speak. But when she did start, she caught up with the others very rapidly.

Even when their development did begin, they were still very slow, because they had to learn how to come. In fact, I think they have done more "catching up" in the past year than they did in the first four. It is remarkable how they have come along. The reason is that, so far as we can see, they are now perfectly normal little girls of a little more than two years.

Psychologists and specialists tell us that a premature child doesn't catch up fully, in so far as mental development is concerned, until it reaches the age of ten or twelve years. Well, as I say, the Quints seem normal to us now; but the specialists must be right. So I would counsel parents of children who have the handicap of prematurity to overcome in a child: Don't get too impatient, for it won't do any good.

The treatment of a birth injury which may lead to mental retardation is largely preventive. An expectant mother should make sure that her diet is adequate and that she gets the right exercise. If she does this when the baby comes its passage through the birth canal won't be more difficult than what can't be helped.

Then if the child is damaged something must be done to repair the injury. A spinal puncture is often performed, and if the fluid, which is usually clear, is found to be stained with blood, it is the diagnosis of a brain injury is confirmed.

Because of the pressure on the brain, the fontanelle—that soft spot in a child's skull—often bulges and is hard to the touch. Sometimes the pressure on the brain interferes with the child's breathing and the child has to be put in an oxygen tent.

Occasional drainings of the blood fluid in the spine are often made to relieve the pressure. In many cases these will insure survival during the first few days of life. But they must be done only by your doctor. Other methods are now being used by the doctor.

It isn't possible to tell at birth what chance there is that a child will be injured, but I think they all have a normal mentality. Some of the Quints may develop into normal children later, so we do everything we can to help such babies survive.

"Didn't you see Calliope's column this morning?"

Miss Hardin. She had been too busy over the sports pages. There was a pretty scathing article about the "Sheik of Charlotte" and his pitching. Somebody handed her the morning newspaper.

They say Handsome Regan's heart won't wear his ring until he wins two games straight. She's the redhead that the magazine counter at the Iroka Hotel.

"I don't know." She stared at it. "Better open it," another adv-ised her.

Her hands trembled as she tore the wire open:

"AGAIN games straight, honey and no foolin'." (signed) "Handsome."

"REDHEADS ARE LUCKY"

By VERA BROWN

Mike was distinctly uncomfortable for she knew quite well the writer of the note was watching. The note contained the girl's telephone number with a plea to call her later in the evening. "When you are free," the note said. Handsome ignored the note's existence.

"I was scared when I thought you weren't going to be out there, Mike," he continued. "But I couldn't lose." He reached in his pocket and planted three pennies on the table. "They're my lucky pennies. Know where I got 'em?" Mike shook her head. "They're part of the change from that two dollars you gave me the night I met you."

"Me!" Mike was laughing now, laughing with relief, the crumpled little note between them.

"Then you wouldn't call it a meeting?" Handsome continued. "See, I punched a hole in 'em. Afraid I'd lose 'em. So you see I wouldn't have been able to, even if I can't lose with them....and you watching. Wouldn't pitch without them in my uniform." He leaned across the table and put the pennies carefully back in his pocket.

"You think it's silly. Maybe it is, but they're part of the good luck you brought me, Skipper. I've never doubted that for a minute. Have you?"

"No," said Mike, and her eyes sparkled with utter and complete happiness.

Handsome did not pitch again while the team was in town. On the first of June, New York lost for its first western trip and, until Handsome had gone to the mound, realize what his going would mean to her.

She had come to be her whole life. She lived only when she was with him, or thinking of him. She was appalled by the force of her love for him. She knew that to win him the night before he left town, for the team was going straight from the ball park to the railroad station, and Mike did not want to see him off.

Then she went home to a sleepless night. The thought of the next fifteen days with Handsome away was more than she could endure. She tried to argue herself into some semblance of reasonableness, but she was in a panic at the thought of his being away from her. Was her self-disparagement could bring her to a sensible view of the matter.

"Is it always going to be like this?"

Handsome, however, faced their first separation with a mingled feeling of annoyance and regret, in which annoyance was by far the stronger.

"I wish we could get married right now. Then you could come along. I need you. There's no use in my trying to pitch when you're not in the grand stand. I can't do it for that last night.

Mike tried to laugh him out of it, but when he left, the same fear some persisted: "I talked to Ace today. I thought he might send you a telegram."

"You shouldn't have done that." "Well, he wants me to pitch, doesn't he?"

"Of course. So do I." Mike watched his petulant face. "Darling, what difference does it make? You have two lucky pennies."

Handsome thought for a little. "Yes, that might work. We'll see."

He was quite solemn about it all. Mike's heart ached. He wanted her so much, and there was no use in her. Not because he loved her as much, but because he thought she was lucky!

"They're my lucky pennies," said Handsome. "Know where I got 'em?" Mike shook her head, puzzled....

She bit her lips to keep back a jubilant retort. It was the argument with a child. "The lucky pennies are almost as good as I am," she continued, hiding the hurt.

"Maybe, but I don't think so."

However, later in the Shannon parlor, he kissed her good-bye, held her close, and said:

"Darling, I'll miss you, too. How am I going to last along without you?"

"Marvelously!" She forced herself to smile, although she clung to him desperately. "Think of the chance ahead for you."

"When I come back will you wear my ring?"

"Of course, darling. Now you must go. It's almost eleven and you've promised to be in early! And she gave him all kinds of instructions about his food, sleep. "And write to me, darling."

"Of course, I will. There won't be anything else to do evenings. He gave her a schedule so her letters would reach him on time at the western cities. "Be sure you don't write them until early enough to get in ahead of me," he finally said. "I'll be looking for them." Then he left her to her many misgivings.

The days with Handsome away passed more quickly than Mike had thought they would. Each day's going home, she got the late editions of the papers to check the day's box score. Handsome was living up early, eager for further reports. Each day he wrote her on lines of encouragement. Then the telegram came to the hotel. They were just finishing the little, by now, usual good letter writer. But she was grateful for them, read them over and over.

Meticulously, he remembered to see that she was fed, rested, and touched her. Even when there was a letter for Mike, Handsome remembered the sick boy. It was clear from the notes, however, that Handsome had grown very serious about things. His record on the road was a decided distinguishing to Ace Barnes. The sports writers devoted a full space to Handsome's "flattening out." Mike worried him long letters every night, tried to cheer him up, to help him. But Handsome could discuss nothing but getting back to New York and to Mike.

"There's no use. My luck won't change unless I'm with you. I've told Ace that."

It was while Handsome was out of town that first time that Mike had her first talk with another. With the arrival of that carefully penned letter, Mike felt for the first time in months that she was going to marry Handsome. Something in Handsome's letter, perhaps, gave reality to Mike's romance.

"He does love me. Why am I such a fool?" she wondered as she reread the closely written pages. Then she realized that Handsome's mother well and she spent a long time in the telegraph office to Mrs. Regan out in Charlotte, Mississippi. She was going to like little town, the Regan home, one of the nicest in the village.

Mrs. Regan's reply to Mike to come out west when the baseball season was over, Handsome's parents had accepted the girl without question. Mike felt a little ashamed and grateful. She took out her engagement ring often to look at it. But even yet, she was not quite ready to courage to put it on. Why she felt this she could not say, except at that time she had no conception of what would happen when the news was out.

CHAPTER XIV

The day after Handsome had lost his first game on the road, Mike came to the office at the usual. It was the first time she had been there since the "Sheik" had his spectacular performance at the stadium.

"How's my favorite red head?" he asked, his keen blue eyes twinkling.

"Fine, but lonesome," she said in a small voice.

"The Big Boy doesn't seem to be doing so well."

Mike looked him a little time. He'll be all right, I'm sure."

"I wish I were." Wish lit a cigar and settled down for a walk while Mike interviewed customers. He liked her quiet efficiency. She was a pretty sight in her black frock which said to be her best so white.

When there was a lull, Wish went on where they had been interrupted.

"When are you going to wear Handsome's ring?"

Mike looked startled.

"It's my business to know things", Wish said in his gruff way. Then he added: "Nothing psychic in it. Handsome told me the day he left town. He thought you might start wearing it. For psychological reasons, I'd say."

Mike shook her head: "I will soon, but I'm superstitious. I'm afraid to have people know. Afraid something will happen." She smiled ruefully. "Now I'm sure I'm as bad as Handsome. But I haven't told mother yet."

Wish did not make any comment, and he left shortly.

Next morning Mike came to work looking eagerly for her letter. It was not there, but several people were waiting for Mike's arrival. They turned out to be newspaper people, and some camera men.

"We've been waiting for you, Miss Shannon," one of them began, even before Mike could open a telegram which stood where her letters always were.

"Is it true you won't let your engagement to Handsome Regan be announced until he wins two games straight?"

They crowded around her, and gradually people in the lobby, curious, joined the group around the magazine counter.

"I don't know what you mean?" she faltered.

ADAMS BELIEVES HE HAS MAKINGS OF GREAT CLUB

Army of Veterans and 50 Amateurs at Training Camp of Detroit Red Wings

DILLON MAY HELP

Young, Goodfellow and Bowman Sure to be on Defence

Detroit, Oct. 11—(CP)— Looking over the Detroit training camp sponsored by any National Hockey League club, Jack Adams thought today that from the army of veterans and about 50 amateurs he might be able to pick a winning combination for Detroit Red Wings.

"I've got more players than I know what to do with," the Detroit manager said after the first full scrimmage. "We have the makings of a good club, maybe a great club."

In place of Charlie Conacher, on whom the Jack Hinds didn't exercise their option this year, Adams has another experienced player in Cecil Dillon, bought from New York Rangers. Another one of the league's leading scorers, Dillon is expected to add steadiness as well as punch to a club that is bound to have some green material in the ranks.

Lewis Lost to Team

Reading Conacher, who will line up with New York Americans, Detroit has lost the playing services of Herbie Lewis, another veteran. Lewis has been named manager of the new Pittsburgh club in Indianapolis.

Tiny Thompson, obtained from Boston last season, is sure to start in goal although four others are sending his regular job. They are Jimmy Franks, last year with Pittsburgh in the International-American League; Johnny Mowers of Niagara Falls, N.Y.; Bill Dickey of Saint John, N.B.; and Lloyd Perras of Cornwall, Ont.

Three Sure for Defence

Doug Young, Eddie Goodfellow and Scotty Bowman, who have been to the wars with Adams for three years, are leading candidates for positions on the defence. Buck Jones, who finished last season with the club, is another favored to win a regular defence berth against the odds of Lou Gehrig, ex-collegians as Bert Janke, from Winnipeg and Montreal Jayvees, who worked at a defence spot in the playoffs last spring, may be assigned to the rearguard permanently.

Alex Motter and Eddie Wares seem to be just about the only veteran forwards who can be sure of their positions at camp, the attempts of a swarm of youngsters to crash the lineup.

GEHRIG LEAVES MANY RECORDS

Not Definite What Famous Player Will Do When He Quits Yankees

New York, Oct. 11—(CP)—Nobody, not even Lou Gehrig himself, knows just what will become of baseball's "iron-coated horse" since the Yankees swept the 1939 series here in the record time Lou has plenty of offers that would take him from the diamond for good.

"I'm not going to move hastily on any of these proposals," Gehrig said after the series. "I'm going to rest at home and do some fishing."

Lou said he had received hundreds of letters asking for good livelihood now that infantile paralysis has ended as front office endeavour, scouting and the like.

But, as for the future of the first One lands, he can sit back for a long long time and never see his record of 2,130 consecutive games bettered. No one is even close to the record Lou started May 30, 1925.

Lou led the league in home runs in 1934 and '36 with 49 both times. He tied Babe Ruth in 1931 with 46 and was runner-up to the Babe in '27, '28, '29 and '30 and took the American League batting championship in 1934 hitting .363.

And for a first baseman Gehrig has run ranks at .340, not to mention having driven in almost 2,000 runs and made almost 2,000 hits including 495 homers during 16 years under the big top.

RAL PARR, NOTED TURFMAN DIES; HORSES A HOBBY

Had Oldest Active Colors Registered With New York Jockey Club

ALWAYS HAD HORSE

Suffered Stroke in Club House and Died Few Hours Later

Baltimore, Oct. 11—(AP)— Ral Parr, 62, the turfman who owned a derby winner but said he liked the insurance business better than racing, died unexpectedly last night.

Parr's black, white and red silks, the oldest active colors registered with the New York Jockey Club, were up when Paul Jones won the Kentucky Derby and the Belmont Suburban in 1920. But Parr once said:

"My horses are nothing more than hobbies. What I'm chiefly interested in is my business."

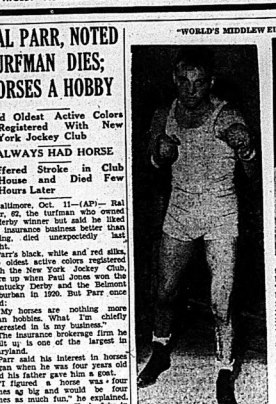
Parr said his interest in horses began when he was four years old and his father gave him a goat.

"I figured a goat was a four times ag big and would be four times as fast," he explained. His first winner was Uncle Jake in a $100 purse at Timonium, Md., in 1895. He registered his colors early in the 1900's and they never not missed a season since.

His horses suffered a stroke at Saratoga in 1935, was stricken with another last night in the historic Maryland Club and died a few hours later. With him was his wife, the former Miss Ethel Walsh Whitman whom he married in 1931, his first wife, Mrs. Laura Jenkins Parr, died in 1928.



"WORLD'S MIDDLEWEIGHT EIGHT CHAMPIONS"

Confusion in various divisions of the boxing game is nothing new, but still in the forefront are the "muddled middleweights" who have been having quite a time establishing a clear champion for years. Shown here are the two current champions. Alongside is Al Hostak, the Seattle boxer, recognized by the N.B.A. Mr. Hostak rarely strays from home and beyond the Pacific coast nobody knows much about him Seen just after his conquest of Fred Apostoli is Carmen Garcia, the Filipino, who, by his victory, was crowned champion in New York and California. Garcia is taking a Christmas holiday back home in the Philippines and after that it is hoped to bring the pair together and settle a few things.

Royals and Rough Riders May Stage Highlight Game Of Entire Weekend Schedule

Growing Sentiment Montreal Team May Cause Plenty of Trouble

ROUNDING TO FORM

Argos Travel to Hamilton and May Meet Their Waterloo

(By the Canadian Press)

Scan the list of football attractions set for this Saturday and it's difficult to see that the game which is attracting the major share of attention from the east's fandom is one with its stage at Montreal, and its cast the Rough Riders of Ottawa and the Royals of Montreal.

Royals lost their first game of the big four season last Saturday to Toronto Argonauts, but there is a growing sentiment that the team which Lionel Reeve is going to cause plenty of trouble this year. Big, fast, and rounding rapidly into a smooth unit, the Royals look little like the team that took an early-season whipping from Montreal Westmounts of the Ontario Union.

Ottawa Favoured

Nevertheless, the Rough Riders will enter the game favorites because of the power they demonstrated in defeating Hamilton Tigers in their big four opener. The Riders, however, may have to go into action against the Montrealers minus the services of Percy Golah, hanging half-back star who dislocated an elbow against the Tigers.

Royals, too, have an injured star for Gordie Noseworthy missed last night's drill because of a leg injury. The hefty booter, however, is expected to be in shape for the game against the Riders.

Coach Lew Hayman, drilling his Argonauts on their Saturday clash against Tigers, received cheering news last night when Ted Moores, half-back star last year with Toronto with Argos, left for Ontario League, intends to turn out with the Scullers some time this week. Moores who did further speed in the already fleet Argonaut backfield.

Westmounts Meet Sarnia

Westmounts did not practice last night, but will be at their Atwater Park quarters to talk over their victory on Thanksgiving Day over Peterborough Orons, and to plan their next take on Balmy Beach this Saturday in a counter attraction to the Royals' Riders struggle.

University of Western Ontario Mustangs, heavily favored to sweep the Intercollegiate Union, failed to let the rain and mud hold up their practice session. Coach Bill Stoner took advantage of the weather to let his punters kick the heavy ball and his whole team to handle it in a signal drill.

OUT AGAIN

All rugby cackles are renowned as "moaners" about the outlook for Queen's Gaels, Intermediate Senior University of Toronto coach, can with justification moan about the luckless Jinx. Last year he lost three of his rare Al key men for the entire season — Jim McDonald, Don Mumford and Doug Turngr. This year he has already had two quarterbacks, Charlie Prince and Murray Scott, shunted to the sidelines, and the latest loss is that of a repeater, Doug Turner, shown here. Turner suffered a knee injury that forced out with the recurrence of an old knee injury.

PITTING STRENGTH AGAINST SPEED

'Masked' Wrestler Has Strength While Eppo Can Go Real Fast

With both contestants in the main bout of Friday nights professional wrestling card at the Hume Arena having climbed in a ring with Cyclone Malch, the former Canadian amateur champion, local wrestling fan can easily judge for themselves the splendid ring set-up that awaits them this week. Eppo looked strongest on Match when they grappled to a 60-minute draw, each getting a fall, while last week "The Mask" gained the only fall in another full hour of strong, stirring wrestling which should result in what is generally referred to as "a ring natural" when Eppo and "The Mask" clash here.

Eppo, a little 210-pound grappler from Steubenville, Ohio, certainly seems to carry more speed than the rock and rugged, "schooled giant" whose address is still a mystery. However, it must be conceded that The Mask' is the more powerful of the two. Eppo is a comer, and when he gets all his weight behind his punches he is a dangerous customer.

Eppo employs his terrific strength upon his opponent whenever the occasion arises. Eppo, on the other hand, is a scientific and doubly tough match faster than the rough and rugged "schooled giant."

Local wrestling fans are eager to see Tiger Daniels, Regina boy who has been in a local ring and in order to conform with these wishes the Montreal promoters signed Pedro Valdez, a rough rugged Mexican to meet Daniels in a fight to the finish.

Two new faces will be seen in the preliminary bout when Ernie Soble, a son of sunny Italy meij Jack Delaney of Detroit, at 170 pounds.

SLEEPING SICKNESS DESTROY FUNCTIONS OF GIRL'S BRAIN

Erie, Pa., Oct. 11—(AP)—Dr. H. B. Emerson, public health officer, reported today six-year-old Maxine Yarrington had aroused from four years of sleeping sickness but her brain has been scarred so badly she always will be "a mental baby, mentally."

The girl, he said, is growing and her body is again functioning normally but

"The inflamation of the brain tissue through which Maxine has survived, has left her brain scarred at its base. The brain lags as if there were no brain at all. Its functions have ceased."

Residence Rule Set at November 1st for All O. H. A. Clubs

Hamilton, Ont., Oct. 11—(CP)—Galt and Kitchener have a week in which to decide whether they will round out a seven-team league in the Senior "A" group of the Ontario Hockey Association.

This decision was reached at a meeting of O.H.A. and club officials here last night when Toronto Goodyears, Hamilton, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls and Port Colborne indicated they would play in this division. At first some fears were expressed that Toronto would be too powerful and the other teams but Goodyears finally were accepted.

Another meeting was called for a week from today in Galt and Kitchener must turn in their decisions.

Residence rule was set at Nov. 1 for players now in Canada but players returning from England who may be delayed will be given a week after arrival to decide with which club they will play. Any player joining the army can play with a club unless he is actually signed.

Professional players who enlist can play with any club, it was announced, subject to agreement with the National Hockey League. Any team may bring in as many players as they wish from the O. H. A. or Northern Ontario Hockey Association.

Officials of clubs other than Toronto expressed fears regarding the future of the league and it was decided that a committee of Selkirk, Dimaggio, Keller and Heinrich will not be supplemented for some years, but Dickey, who has been catching regularly for 13 years, is bound to slow up soon as will Rolfe and Crosetti, while Pearson, Ruffing and Gomez are all veteran hurlers. It is after looking over these veteran players that we debunk President Barrow's story of "standing pat" with the Yankees for another year or so. Incidentally the presence of too many veterans cuts off look for all the Reds, in speed and power.

The composite box score of this year's world series games show that the Yankees only outhit the Reds .296 to .288 as Lonnie Frey, Selkirk (Killer) Keller led all regulars with a batting average of .438, while Frank McCormick of the Reds was second with an even .400. Joe Gordon was fourth with .333 and DiMaggio fourth with an average of .313. However, it is the Yankees' power, the hitting of home runs, that decided the issue. The Red Press Bombers knocked seven homers, while the Reds failed to connect at all. Keller was "master" and only got one three bagger, Myers also got a three bagger. Incidentally Joe McCarthy's strategy showed remarkably fine fielding, booting the ball for only two errors in four games, as the Reds collected five and set errors. Double play materially helped the Bronx Bombers in the initial two games, as they completed four double plays during the series, while the Reds completed but one, despite the fact the National League is heralded as playing the better class defensive ball. The Yankees' batting average was .268 for the series, while the Reds was .224.

O.R.P.U. sweeper Bill Fry, who protected the Montreal at Peterboro' senior O.R.P.U. game on Monday returned home to say that "Orfuns" were not as badly outclassed as the score might indicate, the count being 2 2to 1. "The Peterboro team tackled and blocked well but they are sadly in need of additional reserve strength," stated Lieutenant Fry as he addressed the Business Manager Walter Jackson, of the "Orfuns" had assisted him (Fry), that the Orfuns would be glad to receive into the fold any football players of active calibre who reside in the Belleville area. If there are any members of last year's Belleville intermediate O.R.P.U. squad, who would like to get in touch with Peterboro for reserve strength they should secure information from Fry with their intentions immediately.

Today's Belleville Collegiate versus Albert College senior intermediate scholastic football game was indefinitely postponed at the conclusion of the Albert College faculty. All social and athletic activities at Albert College have been cancelled for this week ow of respect and honour to the late Rev. Dr. N. E. Baker, through whose efforts the present site of Albert College was largely made possible.

After last week's wrestling show at the Arena, 'Rough-house Tiger" Daniels, of Regina, not only admitted, but boasted of the fact he was under a three months' suspension in Montreal. It seems Daniels got a little too careful one fine evening about three weeks ago with the result he broke his opponent's arm. Daniels wasn't suspended for mapping off the mauled-look altogether, but because he purposely attacked the helpless opponent, and the latter lay helpless outside of the ring. After hearing Daniels boast of this we are glad to hear that a really rough gripponent had been secured to meet him here on Friday night in the person of Pedro Valdez, a Mexican grappler who is equally as rough as Daniels, the promoters assured us. All we have to add is —"we sincerely hope so." Of course the feature attraction will be the main bout that brings together "The Mask" and Eppo Rudy Pepps, the 218-pound grappler from Columbus O. Incidentally it must be remembered that Eppo wrestled to a draw while Pepps' match was a decision with Joe Malch, of Brantford, so judging from last appearances here, the Eppo and behooved gent ought to be a most interesting match.

PRIVATE CROLL FINDS UNIFORM A LITTLE WARM

Windsor, Ont., Oct. 11—(CP)— Mayor David Croll probably was a mite uncomfortable today as he and his uniform of a private in the Essex Scottish Regiment to his future son-in-law.

The tight-fitting tunic was illsuited for Windsor's current heat wave. So attended the collar nearly choked him.

Private Croll will retain his Mayoralty office, drilling at day and carrying out his civic duties at night. He also is Liberal member of the Ontario Legislature for Windsor-Walkerville.

We wonder if it is safe to believe the press reports emanating from New York to the effect that President Ed Barrow is quoted as saying—"The Yankees will rest on their laurels and stand pat with their 1939 team without bolstering it in order to give other American League club a chance to strengthen and make a better American League race in 1940." True enough the present Yankee club is the most powerful in baseball, but there are many of the present roster who are aging fast and cannot be expected to remain in a uniform of the Bronx Bombers much longer. The outfield of Selkirk, Di-Maggio, Keller and Heinrich will not need supplementing for some years, but Dickey, who has been catching regularly for 13 years, is bound to slow up soon as will Rolfe and Crosetti, while Pearson, Ruffing and Gomez are all veteran hurlers. Periodical Pays Tribute to Mayor

Tribute to Mayor Jamieson Bone of this city is paid in the current issue of "The Property Owner." It says in part, "Mayor Bone is an independent outspoken man of action with a keen sympathy for those suffering from an overdose of politics. . . There are no 'isms' in his platform, just honesty, clearance and horse-sense.

"Within a few days after he had thrown his hat into the ring Mayor Bone experienced exactly the troubles that beset a candidate for parliament. He has been pestered with requests for donations, prizes and loans totalling over $500.00."

"But the colorful Mayor is not going to be held up," the periodical continues. "If I have to buy my way into Parliament and graft my way out, I don't want the job," he says.

Egg Prices Higher

Toronto, Oct. 11—(CP)—The egg market during the week at higher prices at Toronto yesterday, with butter steady.

Small offerings met ready absorption under keen demand on the egg section, the light volume of fresh receipts arriving necessitated drawing on cold storage stocks. Prices were increased on top grades in all sections, advances ranging to 2c per dozen.

A steady undertone ruled on the butter market, although demand remained on the slow side. Holders appeared content to wait until buyers were ready to replenish their stocks. Many of the trade kept to orders placed yesterday, a little from Ottawa on cold-storage holdings, which was released on "as is" basis, but little, if any, effect on the market.

Weather too Fine for Good Shooting of Black Ducks

Hunters Have Had Light Bags Since Season Opening

STAY OUT OF RANGE

With the weather-man apparently having signed a non-aggression pact with the wild duck legions, hunters of the district are back again with light bags and anything but good sport in the better-known shooting spots of the district.

Disappointment was registered in many cases over the week-end when the looked-for "cold snap" failed to materialize. "Ty tee doggone quiet, too nice weather for shootin' ducks", one prominent nimrod of the city lamented last night. The unusual blustery weather that drives the ducks inshore has been noticeably conspicuous by its absence. The ducks are staying well out of range with the exception, of course, of isolated cases.

Failure of the large flocks of black ducks to arrive on their annual fall trek from the northern feeding grounds has been another factor in the light bags thus far, it was stated. Hunters have been a few blocks around, according to some hunters, the local duck-hunting veteran stated, "but in no quantities like those that generally arrive at this time of the year."

A decided change in the weather, and a few strong inshore breezes are what is necessary before the boys will be able to boast about excellent bags, was his opinion.

Men Taking Vocational Refresher Courses at B. C. I. Apply Steady Application to the Work in Hand

Gleaming cylinders of the machine-lathes turned slowly and steadily. Strips of steel coiled slowly and gracefully as sharp drills bit deeply into pieces of metal. Over the lathes grimy, purposeful men dropped tiny specks of "milk" from oilcans, on the cutting steel.

It was the same in all branches of the vocational trades refresher courses that are now being taught at the Belleville Collegiate Institute two nights a week. The instructors are trained men, the "pupils" are men and youths with a purpose.

In the machine-shop, the woodworking departments, the welding-rooms and the motor-mechanics branch, there is a steady application to the job at hand. There is no "horsing-in" as it is commonly known. Quietly, studiously, the "pupils" pay attention to their work, paying only to secure enough listen attentively when an instructor hails to impart a brief word of instruction.

No Hall in Work

A reporter made the rounds of the various departments last night, with the kind permission of Principal F. C. McLaurin, might as well have been Hamlet's Ghost, for all the attention he drew. A few acquaintances spoke to him but there was no lengthy halt in the work.

All the departments were hives of activity. And section of the crescendo of the whole was the fact that twice weekly are patiently applying themselves to the search for mechanical knowledge that lays in some cases, lain dormant for some time, while to others be opening a new vista of activity that will stand them in good stead in the future.

In all departments, youth is rubbing shoulders, with mature age. Men in their early forties "swap" ideas with fresh-faced youth. Those in the advanced stages lovingly aid the younger men, to whom the experience and knowledge being given them is something vastly different to that to which they have been accustomed.

Sincerity Shown

Underneath it all there is a strong undercurrent of sincerity of steady purpose. These men are there, not in the light of gay fresh-and-easy youth seeking diversion from the humdrum life of a small city, but of mature men with a definite goal to aim at, and the beacon light for achievement urging them on.

And the progress made thus far, according to Principal McLaurin, is more than satisfactory. Practically all the cliques are filled with the exception of one or two.

Next week, the principal stated, classes in elementary draughting will be inaugurated to enable those without the rudiment of machine-shop and other forms of instruction being given, to progress at a much more rapid rate.

TWO BREAK-INS ARE REPORTED

King George School and Superior Cleaners Entered During Night

Two break-ins, believed to have been the work of the same parties, saw King George School and the Superior Cleaners, North Front St., entered some time last night. At the cleaning establishment a suit of clothes and one overcoat is all that are known to have been taken, city police were informed upon investigation.

Charles Gateum, janitor at King George School, discovered the break-in at the school, when he opened the premises early this morning. Entrance was gained by means of a window down through the coal chute, leading into the school basement. Rooms and the school offices were ransacked, before the marauders forsook the building and are believed to have entered the Superior Cleaners premises, which are situated immediately to the north of the school property.

City police patrolled that district of the town last night, but once after midnight and again about 5.30 this morning Sergeant Arthur Booth investigated the break-ins, Chief Kidd stated after investigation at the two premises. No clues leading to the possible apprehension of suspects were revealed by the police.

The charge was reduced after Mr. Neville, K.C., Toronto, acting at the fall assizes of the Ontario Supreme Court, heard the evidence of Miss Edith Cameron, daughter of the dead man, and pointed out that there was no premeditation.

EMBARGO BILL CALLED "SIEVE"

Democrat Senator Asserts Supporters Would Like to See U. S. Take Sides

Washington, Oct. 11—(AP) — Senator Bennett Clark, Missouri Democrat, declared today the nation's an "open secret" that many supporters of the new Senate neutrality action Bill to repeal the arms embargo believe the United States should take sides in the war.

Opening the seventh day of the debate, Clark said he has heard and criticized the pending legislation as "a sieve through which a fortress for our peace and security."

Few people appeared to realize, he said, that "the repeal of embargo" is actually a quiet process of taking sides" since the passage of the United States arms markets to Great Britain and France while those with Germany has been halted by the British naval blockade.

It is not a neutrality act, the Senate that there are many in and out of the Senate Chamber who want to should choose sides in the war," Clark said, "and the extraordinary coincidence that these people are voting for repeal of the embargo.

"They know full well that the choosing of sides, without perhaps much foreign danger on our part."

Clark proposed that Congress establish a joint committee of representative leaders of the various schools of thought on foreign policy in both the Senate and House.

PRIESTS KILLED IN RED ADVANCE

Red Newspaper Claims They Barricaded Themselves in Churches

Moscow, Oct. 11 (AP)—The Moscow newspaper Bezbozhnik (Godless) organ of the Anti-Religious Movement, indicated today a number of Roman Catholic and Greek Orthodox priests were "liquidated" when Soviet Russian troops marched into White Russia and the Western Ukraine in partitioned Poland.

The newspaper asserted many priests barricaded themselves "with capitalists and Polish officers in churches and monasteries, killed a number of them.

Land Turned Over to Workers

The paper said church and monastery lands had been distributed among the workers and peasants.

"When the priests saw the power of the Polish landowners coming to an end they began to barricade with the landowners and gendarmes and took weapons into their hands," the paper said.

"Everything that happened in Spain during the Spanish revolution was repeated. They fought against the power of the toilers. Sergeants Arthur Booth investigated the break-ins, Chief Kidd stated after investigation at the two premises. No clues leading to the possible apprehension of suspects were revealed by the police.

"Now, thanks to the help of the Soviet Union, priests are no longer landowners, and the toiling workers are sharing monastery and church lands. Everything that belongs to believe or not in God—no compulsion in this.

The paper said "Priests gave anti-tank prayers hoping to prevent tanks from crossing the Dneister River where the Poles blew up the bridges. Priests crossed despite the prayers and engaged in combat. Many priests had blessed and behind which the Poles had hidden. When the tanks approached the priests fled into the forests."

When asked whether Miss Lee said Nighswander wandered about the floor of a hospital room and that she heard him from him a razor she said she was afraid he might do himself.

Shortly before resumption today, second day of the trial, Nighswander took the witness stand, room poorly dressed. Then he left, accompanied by a guard and returned within a few minutes nattily attired in a light fawn suit and apparently in much better spirits.

Paddles 1600 Miles From Timmins

New York, Oct. 11—(CP)—After an unhurried trip trip of approximately 1,500 miles from his Timmins, Ontario, home, Peter Dezwirek arrived in New York City hall today with his canoe slung over his shoulders.

He was ushered into the office of Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia and delivered to the Chief Magistrate letters of greeting from Mayor J. Sturtaman of Timmins and Mayor Stanley Lewis of Ottawa.

Dezwirek left Northern Ontario July 1. His destination was the New York World's Fair. He was forced to turn back prior to unfavorable weather but said he "enjoyed every minute of it."

With scores of New York's inveterate "yankers" looking on, he paddled down the Hudson River this morning and docked at the Battery, southern tip of Manhattan Island. He slung his canoe over his shoulders, with a forehand sling carrying the paddle in the right, and portaged a mile through the city's busy streets to the city hall.

As Spence was preparing to leave the historic mile stone marking the travelle—Joe Woods, who rode horseback from Long Beach, California—arrived on the scene of hall. He left his weary steed in charge of a policeman and walked briskly to deliver four letter from mayors and one from an Indian chief.

Finland Prepares for Calamity Knowing Peace or War May Hang on Demands of Soviet

Civil Guards Assigned to Strategic Points and Women and Children Sent to Country

Helsingfors, Oct. 12 (AP)—Finland prepared today for calamity, knowing that peace or war may hang on the demands of Soviet Russia.

The Finns calmly sent their women and children into the country, strengthened their border fortifications and assigned civil guards to strategic points.

Meanwhile, meanwhile, a Finnish delegation headed by Dr. Juho Paasikivi was expected to go to the Kremlin today for political and economic talks.

Helsingfors authorities announced that work would be started today on the digging of air raid shelters in the capital, a city of about 250,000.

The speed with which the nation's affairs were being put in order for a possible emergency augured the declarations in responsible Finnish sources that the country would oppose military and economic agreements such as its Baltic neighbors yielded and, if necessary, would resist.

The Helsingfors newspaper Uusi Suomi declared:

"Any attempt to force us to give up our territorial realities and, lure us into some kind of political scheme will receive a definite and uncompromising opposition.

"That sort of lowbowing position into which the Baltic countries have been put into is absolutely out of the question here."

Gun Accidentally Discharges

Toronto, Oct. 12 (CP)—Fred McGuire, 32, was admitted to hospital today with wounds in the neck and shoulder. McGuire was guarding the explosive magazine at a mine near Beardmore, in Northern Ontario, when he accidentally discharged his own revolver while stooping.

Moscow Does Not State Demands to be Made Of Finland in Talks Starting Today

By WITT HANCOCK

Moscow, Oct. 12 (AP)—The Soviet government was ready for political and economic talks today with Finland, once a part of Imperial Russia and now apparently determined not to become a protectorate of the new Communist empire.

Finland complied with a Soviet invitation to confer but did so without hurry—and it appeared that her answer to any Soviet demands like-wise would be unhurried.

Headed by Dr. Juho Paasikivi, a one-time premier of Finland and her minister to Sweden, the Finnish delegation arrived yesterday by train. It was expected Paasikivi would return to Helsingfors and report to the Finnish cabinet before giving any answer.

It was unknown, of course, what concessions he had left before the Finns when they retraced the recent steps of Napoleon, Leo Tolstoi and Russian delegates to the conference table.

Pacts with Finland's three little neighbors gave the U.S.S.R. broad trade and transport concessions but also—more significantly—strategic footholds on their soil for air, sea and land forces.

Refuse To Be Rushed.

There was every indication that the Finns would refuse to be rushed into any pact, especially one involving territorial concessions. Foreign quarters believed that while the Finns were prepared to grant certain concessions they would fight if worst came to worst.

Sweden generally was backing the Finns and this support was seen as a possible stumbling block on whatever plan the Russians brought to the Helsingfors delegation.

Ottawa, Oct. 12 (CP)—As the empire prepares to spread its wings over Canada to give advanced training to pilots for the war against Germany, the Royal Canadian Air Force is gearing its organization to a war tempo to turn out fighting airmen in 28 weeks' actual training time.

A peace-time training scheme inaugurated last June provided for 52 weeks' training through elementary, intermediate and advanced stages but this plan now has been broadened and the training time cut almost in half, without lowering the standard of training efficiency, according to a National Defence Department source.

FARMER THOUGHT BURNED TO DEATH REAPPEARS TODAY

Chas. Ceaser Reappears Today Stating He Had Been Kidnapped

NO ILL EFFECTS

Owen Sound, Ont., Oct. 12 (CP)—Charles Ceaser, Holland Township farmer, reported burned to death when his home was destroyed by fire during an electrical storm Sept. 29, reappeared today at the home of his brother-in-law stating he had been kidnapped.

Ceaser said he had first been robbed in his home on the night before the storm. Then was taken to a shack in the vicinity of Southampton, tied to a wall and kept alive on bread. He managed to free himself and escaped Wednesday, he said.

Ceaser said he was kept blindfolded most of the time by his captors and could not give a good description of them.

He said he was not mistreated by them except that he was tied most of the time.

Ceaser appeared to have suffered no ill effects. He told his brother, Harry, that he was extremely hungry. He said he went most of the last twenty-one miles between Southampton and Owen Sound, obtaining a lift for a short distance. He did not know until he returned to his farm that his home had been levelled by fire, he said.

Relatives and neighbors of Charles Ceaser refused to believe that he had returned to death in the fire. There was no trace of any human remains in the ruins.

They asserted the adjacent bush and surrounding countryside for some days after the fire in the hope of finding him. It was no surprise to many of the residents in his district when he turned up this morning.
